GERMANS DROP BOMBS IN FRENCH CITIES

Italy Is Mobilizing for Entrance into the War

Mussolini Said To Have Given Roosevelt Facts On His Position

Il Duce and President Believed To Have Discussed Situation, but Both Remain Silent

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 2.—The authoritative Fascist Editor Giovanni Ansaldo disclosed today that Italy is carrying out general mobilization in preparation for Italy's entrance into the war, generally expected any day.

"Mobilization is under way," declared Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, in his weekly broadcast to Italian troops.

He explained, however, that it was being conducted with individual summons rather than by the alarm general call of former times.

Ansaldo indicated Italy's reason for entering the war was to make her weight felt as a nation whose people could not tolerate a position of inferiority as well as gaining a share of the spoils from the British and French empires.

Political circles assumed that Premier Mussolini told President Roosevelt as much in a recent exchange of messages between them. Responsible Italians said the Duce undoubtedly stated his position frankly.

Roosevelt's Views Secret

Whether Mr. Roosevelt has raised the possibility of unfavorable American reaction to an Italian war move was not possible to ascertain. But this was considered possible in the light of new statements volunteered by authoritative Fascists Friday that threats were not likely to influence Mussolini.

In any event, the impression that Italy would be in the war within a fortnight if not sooner was intensified after the exchange of messages.

Ansaldo declared the Italian people must know why they are likely to be called to war and named the reasons as moral and political.

Of the first, he demanded to know "how a people like ours, with all our energy, could remain outside a great contest like the present one, in which all the great peoples of Europe are participating and

Swiss Bag Three German Bombers

Two Are Brought Down within Sight of the Capital

BERN, June 2. (AP)—Swiss fighting planes shot down another German bomber today—the third in twenty-four hours.

The aerial violation of Swiss territory was coincident with massed German bombing raids from the Rhine airfields against the rich industrial region of the Rhone valley in France.

The first two Nazi planes were brought down yesterday afternoon, one within sight of the Swiss capital. The one destroyed today was returning from a Rhone valley raid and crossed Swiss territory near Yverdon on Neuchatel Lake, ignoring the warning of Swiss anti-aircraft batteries.

A Swiss fighting plane tried to warn the German pilot back, but the bomber suddenly opened fire. The Swiss returned the shots, and the bomber burst into flames.

The crew managed to put out the fire and the plane landed in a field where it was surrounded by Swiss soldiers who had seen the fight.

A German officer and three members of the crew drew revolvers while the fifth member tried to set the plane on fire. When the Swiss warned they would shoot, the officer and his companions surrendered, and the plane was seized.

Since Saturday morning German planes have been operating from bases in Baden and the Black Forest against the Rhone valley objectives.

It was reported from Berlin and in diplomatic quarters in Bern that Italy plans to enter the war when Allied aviation becomes sufficiently crippled to no longer threaten industries of the Po valley.

Invaders Plan Great Drive To Take Paris

REPORTED CAPTURED

Gen. Rene Prioux

General Rene Jacques - Adolf Prioux, commander of the harried French forces in the Flanders "pocket" is reported by the German High Command to have been captured. He had been leading the rear guard holding back the Nazis while the trapped Allied forces were escaping by sea to England.

Air Attacks Believed only Preparatory to Mass Attacks

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 3—A mighty Nazi drive aimed at Paris was predicted by military observers today after German air raids on the French harbor of Marseille abruptly spread the war to the shores of the Mediterranean a bare 100 miles from Italy.

With Italy apparently on the fence awaiting Premier Mussolini's decision for war or peace, the German high command reported today that two great merchant ships had been set afire in Marseille harbor, the busiest in France.

The bombers then headed up the Rhone valley, important French industrial region, dropping bombs on the rail line between Marseille and Lyon.

Marseille is about 100 mi[illegible] from the French-Italian frontier and only a little further from the French island of Corsica which Fascists have demanded for their empire.

(The mass bombing of the Rhone valley Saturday was described by the French as one of the heaviest of the war. A British broadcasting corporation report heard in New York indicated that the raids were repeated Sunday, hitting the city of Lyon.

(The forays were interpreted generally as a German gesture to assure Italy — reported mobilizing — that Nazi air power can aid her despite demands on it for the campaign in the north.

(At least 56 persons were killed and 100 wounded in a half dozen cities and towns in the path of the German air raiders. The French acknowledged that one merchantman, an English freighter loaded with cotton, was hit at Marseille.)

While the war theater broadened suddenly to the south, the Germans continued to press retreating allies in the Dunkerque area.

The high command reported that Nieuport, French channel port east of the embarkation point of the withdrawing British expeditionary force, had fallen into German hands after sharp fighting, along with Adinkerke and Ghyvelde.

The British continued to hold embattled Dunkerque in the face of a constant blast of artillery fire and pulverizing bombardments by German warplanes, the high command acknowledged.

But DNB, official German news agency, said the number of French and English soldiers drowned in the channel from ships sunk in the withdrawal "represents probably the strength of several divisions."

A DNB dispatch from the front predicted the fall of Dunkerque, declaring the German air force would "see to it that the last resistance is broken."

"One ship after another has been sunk by the German airforce and navy on the (French) coast, in the channel or in the North Sea," the agency said, and the British transport fleet at Dunkerque has been dispersed or destroyed.

There still was no tabulation of the amount of booty taken in Flanders and Artois but the communique said 200 cannon of all sizes were taken from one Allied army alone.

Recapitulating the successes of German air squadrons against Allied seapower, it said:

"In all, four warships and 11 transports with a total tonnage of 54,000 have been sunk. Fourteen warships (two cruisers, two light cruisers, one anti-aircraft cruiser, six destroyers, two torpedo boats and one speedboat) as well as 48 merchant ships with a total tonnage of 160,000 have been damaged by bomb hits.

Four-Fifths of B. E. F. Rescued From Nazi Trap

British Prepare To Fight "Inevitable" Invasion

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 2 — More than four-fifths of the British expeditionary force has been saved from the German trap in Flanders in an "epic" fight, War Secretary Anthony Eden declared tonight while an aroused Britain feverishly prepared to battle a German invasion which is generally regarded as inevitable.

The war secretary broadcast his praise of the B.E.F. to the empire and to the United States, asserting that the "loss to us has been heavy" but the "bulk" of the B.E.F. has been rescued.

Eden's talk indicated more than 140,000 British soldiers has been brought home safely — and they still are arriving. The B.E.F. originally contained 175,000 soldiers but no official figures have been made available on its strength at the time the blitzkrieg struck May 10.

The secretary spoke shortly after the Royal Air Force reported new triumphs in its ceaseless battle against the Nazi air force in the Dunkerque area, where Allied troops are embarking for the hazardous voyage across the fire-swept English channel.

Many Planes Destroyed

The air ministry announced yesterday destroying or seriously damaging 28 German bombers and fighting planes at Dunkerque. Sixteen British planes were missing.

Then the ministry in a second communique reported that fighter planes had destroyed thirty-five German aircraft thus far today at a cost of eight missing fighters.

The air ministry also said the British airmen were pounding German communications and ammunition dumps in support of the rear-

British and French Speakers Urge Italy Not To Enter European War

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—British and French broadcasters joined today in a declaration that there are no differences between the Allies and Italy which negotiations and good will could not cure.

"The Allied governments had for a long time past endeavored to meet all legitimate Italian aspirations," said a shortwave broadcast of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

"But the Italian government has never been willing to enter into any conversation on that topic.

"There are no differences between Great Britain and Italy which require armed solutions or which could not be solved by mutual good will. Great Britain desires nothing but friendship with Italy, a friendship which follows a real community of interests.

"If the Italian government decides to enter the war the responsibility will be hers and Great Britain will know how to meet the aggression."

The French broadcast was in similar vein — an appeal to the Italian people to stay out of war and an assertion that all differences between France and Italy could be removed by negotiations.

The broadcasts were picked up by the CBS listening station.

FRENCH POILUS ARRIVE IN LONDON FROM FLANDERS

Freed from the Nazi trap in Belgium and northern France, French troops march from the railroad terminal at which they arrived in London after a fiery crossing from the European mainland. Their transports, convoyed by British warships, were bombed incessantly during the voyage. More than 400,000 soldiers were trapped. Photo flashed by radio from London to New York.

U. S. May Trade Planes To Help Allied Nations

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — President Roosevelt was reported reliably today to have before him a proposal that the administration authorize the army and navy to "trade in" some of their older war material to manufacturers who in turn could sell them to the Allies for immediate delivery.

This suggestion was said to have been laid before the president by Senator Pepper (D-Fla) at a White House conference yesterday. Although Pepper would not comment on it in any way, there were indications that the question was being looked into by the administration's legal and tactical experts.

What Mr. Roosevelt's attitude might be was not disclosed. Some administration advisors are known to have expressed doubt about the wisdom of the proposal, however, contending that the United States could not afford to reduce its own air forces at this time.

The air corps has more than 200 two-motor bombers which already are being replaced as obsolescent, but it was argued by critics of the plan that if they were good enough to help the Allies they would be valuable to the United States in

Inflation Coming If Nazis Win War, Dr. Palyi Asserts

Expert Predicts Germany Will Extend Military Economy

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—Dr. Melchior Palyi, former economic adviser to the Berlin Deutschebank, asserted today that a German victory would see the Nazi "military economy" extended to all Europe and would result in monetary inflation in the United States.

"If Germany wins, she will attempt on a big scale the military economy she is now running on a small scale," he said in a university of Chicago Roundtable Broadcast.

"General von Seeckt, commander of the German Republican army, who built up the nucleus of the present German military machine, told me repeatedly that Germany had lost the last war because she thought she had only to organize the military forces, forgetting that mobilization of the nation's economy also was needed.

"The Germans have learned their lesson in the last war. Britain, under its new regime, is just learning hers."

War preparations in the United States "will mean inflation," he said, with more money being printed although there may be no more jobs.

Financing Defense and Possible War Discussed by Four Senators

Bone, Brown, Lee and Wiley Offer Plans in Speeches

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Methods of financing the national defense program and war if it should come were discussed tonight by four senators in remarks prepared for the American forum of the air. The speakers were Bone (D-Wash), Lee (D-Okla), Brown (D-Mich) and Wiley (D-Wis).

Bone urged legislation drafting capital as well as man-power in time of war. Financing a war by adding billions "to the already swollen debt," he said, "would lead to a runaway inflation, which in itself would be sufficient to smash the capitalist system."

Lee advocated a war-time money raising system under which the purchase of bonds would be compulsory, instead of voluntary as in the World War. He would have the bonds bear such low interest rates that there would be little profit.

Brown said that despite "hoped-for economy," the only answer to the problem of financing the national defense "is an annual tax bill of about twice what it has been in the past." He said many different means of taxation were possible, including a ten percent increase in income taxes, additional excise taxes, taxation of government bonds and a levy on war profits.

Wiley termed "feasible" three methods of raising money which he said were under consideration in Washington. These he listed as broadening the income tax base, a five percent tax on all incomes over $500 payable at the source, and an additional five percent tax on all incomes without exemptions.

Senator Capper (R-Kans) said in another address prepared for broadcasting that the administration's proposal to increase income taxes

Religious Groups Jailed for Refusal To Salute Flag

ODESSA, Tex., June 2 (AP)—Fifty members of a religious sect who were rescued from an angry crowd after they refused to salute the American flag, were escorted out of town by officers today.

The sect members were held in jail overnight. No formal charges were filed against any of them. County Attorney O. E. Gerron previously said the men would not be released until all soluted the flag.

A sudden thunderstorm enabled officers to rescue more than seventy members of the group from an incensed crowd which objected to religious pamphlets they were distributing.

Several fist fights occurred after the party appeared in town yesterday and began distributing its literature. In the course of the street fighting an American flag was produced but members of the sect refused to salute it.

A spokesman said the organization prohibited its members from saluting any man-made thing.

The outburst was one of several in Texas in recent weeks. Members of the organization have been escorted from Del Rio, Brownwood, San Antonio and Harlingen in previous encounters.

Liner Manhattan Leaves Italy for Trip to New York

Carries 2,200 Passengers, Many More Than Usual

GENOA, June 2. (AP)—The United States liner Manhattan, jammed like a troopship with American and foreign refugees, sailed today for New York.

Almost 2,200 passengers were aboard, nearly three times the ship's normal capacity.

The sailing was delayed a day because of the crush of applicants for accommodations but several hundred were left behind.

Their hopes now are pinned on the United States liner Washington, due at Bordeaux, France, Tuesday.

United States lines officials, however, were not sure whether the Washington would call at Genoa after leaving the French port. They assumed that a decision would depend on whether Italy entered the war by that time.

Third-class passengers, more than two-thirds of those on board, stood in line from early morning for the formalities of embarkation. Although precedence was given to Americans, they were forced to battle through crowds of unhappy refugees from northern and central Europe who resignedly awaited their turn.

Pope Urges More Humanity in War, Asks Golden Rule

Pontiff Expresses Dismay over Widening Area of Conflict

Pope Pius XII

"We beseech both belligerent sides to remember always those duties of humanity which do not lose any of their value under war law and morality," he said.

The Pontiff, replying to the greetings of the cardinals on the occasion of his name day, expressed dismay over the widening area of the conflict. He told them:

"We consider it proper on this occasion to reiterate and to emphasize our anguish in seeing how the treatment accorded non-combatants in more than one area is far from conforming to the principles of humanity.

"God is our witness that in declaring this truth as we must we are moved by neither partisanship nor consideration for any person.

"Personal considerations cannot be a guide to moral judgment concerning actions."

The Pope said populations in occupied areas should be treated "as in a similar case, an invader would like to see his own citizens treated."

He cited as elementary principles of government in occupied areas "a respect for life, honor and the property of citizens; respect of the family and its rights, and on the righteous side, freedom of worship both in private and public, and spiritual aid suitable for the respective peoples and their languages; freedom of religious instruction and education; security of ecclesiastical property and the privilege of bishops to correspond with their clergy and flocks in matters concerning the welfare of their souls."

The Pope concluded with a call for further prayer "that the rules

Compulsory Military Training Likely If Germany Wins the War

By REG INGRAHAM

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Compulsory military training for all physically fit American youths was predicted in Congressional circles today as a virtual certainty if Germany wins the European war.

Discussion of such a training system and other methods of augmenting defense has become widespread following President Roosevelt's request that Congress give him powers to call the national guard and organized reserves to active duty in peace time.

Chairman May (D-Ky) of the House Military Committee, saying the United States would have to expand greatly its armed forces if the Allies were defeated, asserted he favored immediate expansion of the regular army to 500,000 men. It now is limited by law to 280,000, although only 227,000 of that number actually have been enlisted.

Compulsory Training Cheaper

Other members of the committee voiced the opinion that the compulsory training method, long the accepted practice in many European nations, would be more economical than attempting to maintain a large force of permanent troops and

Fierce Fighting Continues To Cover Allied Withdrawal from Flanders; Nazi Losses Heavy

By The Associated Press

Bombs were dropped Sunday on England and France as a foretaste of the Nazi air power the Allies expect to be launched on them full force as the war spread in the dying hours of the Franco-British retreat from Flanders.

Continuing the aerial assaults set upon the southern French port of Marseille Saturday, Nazi bombers rained explosives on Lyon in the Sunday foray and the British broadcasting corporation estimated casualties there at forty.

An unidentified plane dropped two bombs in the open country of Norfolk, about 125 miles northeast of London, with no damage reported.

The French estimated Germany had thrown 200,000 men against the last defenders of the port of escape and said they had been repulsed, wave upon wave, with the attackers sinking in reddening pools through which they waded waist-deep in the canals opened by the Allies to stay the pursuit.

140,000 British Saved

War minister Anthony Eden, while acknowledging great losses of men and materials in Flanders, said four-fifths of the British expeditionary force had been rescued, indicating, from available figures that 140,000 Tommies out of the 175,000 originally sent to the continent, were in comparative safety on their watchful homeland.

The official German news agency DNB said the Allied troops drowned in the channel under the bombing of the Nazi air force with naval assistance "represents probably the strength of several divisions." A division contains approximately 15,000.

Three Hudson Bombers Get Best of 40 Enemy Airships

LONDON, June 2 (AP) — Three American-built Hudson bombers, attacking forty German bombers and fighter planes just as they were about to pour death on Allied transports off Dunkerque yesterday, destroyed five bombers and dispersed the remainder of the Nazi formation in a thirteen-minute battle, the air ministry reported tonight.

The ministry also declared in a communique that Royal Air Force fighters destroyed or severely damaged seventy-eight German bombers and fighting planes in the unceasing operations over the Allied retreat at Dunkerque. The ministry said this "sets a new day's record for our fighter pilots."

Thus far today, the ministry said, British fighters have destroyed thirty-five German aircraft over the Dunkerque sector and may have destroyed six others.

The British acknowledged sixteen planes were missing yesterday and eight today.

Repeated bomb attacks on German communications and ammunition dumps also were made yesterday, the ministry added.

The sect members were held in jail overnight. No formal charges were filed against any of them. County Attorney O. E. Gerron previously said the men would not be released until all soluted the flag.

A sudden thunderstorm enabled officers to rescue more than seventy members of the group from an incensed crowd which objected to religious pamphlets they were distributing.

Several fist fights occurred after the party appeared in town yesterday and began distributing its literature. In the course of the street fighting an American flag was produced but members of the sect refused to salute it.

A spokesman said the organization prohibited its members from saluting any man-made thing.

The outburst was one of several in Texas in recent weeks. Members of the organization have been escorted from Del Rio, Brownwood, San Antonio and Harlingen in previous encounters.

Liner Manhattan Leaves Italy for Trip to New York

Carries 2,200 Passengers, Many More Than Usual

GENOA, June 2. (AP)—The United States liner Manhattan, jammed like a troopship with American and foreign refugees, sailed today for New York.

Almost 2,200 passengers were aboard, "nearly three times the ship's normal capacity.

The sailing was delayed a day because of the crush of applicants for accommodations but several hundred were left behind.

Their hopes now are pinned on the United States liner Washington, due at Bordeaux, France, Tuesday.

United States lines officials, however, were not sure whether the Washington would call at Genoa after leaving the French port. They assumed that a decision would depend on whether Italy entered the war by that time.

Third-class passengers, more than two-thirds of those on board, stood in line from early morning for the formalities of embarkation. Although precedence was given to Americans, they were forced to battle through crowds of unhappy refugees from northern and central Europe who resignedly awaited their turn.

British Ambassador To Belgium Missing

London, June 2. (AP) — Official sources confirmed a report today that Sir Lancelot Oliphant, British ambassador to Berlin, has been missing since he left Bruges to join the Belgian government in France.

The government, these sources said, was making "every effort" to find Sir Lancelot. His wife returned to England before he disappeared.

Pope Urges More Humanity in War, Asks Golden Rule

Pontiff Expresses Dismay over Widening Area of Conflict

Pope Pius XII

"We beseech both belligerent sides to remember always those duties of humanity which do not lose any of their value under war law and morality," he said.

The Pontiff, replying to the greetings of the cardinals on the occasion of his name day, expressed dismay over the widening area of the conflict. He told them:

"We consider it proper on this occasion to reiterate and to emphasize our anguish in seeing how the treatment accorded non-combatants in more than one area is far from conforming to the principles of humanity.

God is our witness that in declaring this truth as we must we are moved by neither partisanship nor consideration for any person.

"Personal considerations cannot be a guide to moral judgment concerning actions."

The Pope said populations in occupied areas should be treated "as in a similar case, an invader would like to see his own citizens treated."

He cited as elementary principles of government in occupied areas "a respect for life, honor and the property of citizens; respect of the family and its rights, and on the rightious side, freedom of worship both in private and public, and spiritual aid suitable for the respective peoples and their languages; freedom of religious instruction and education; security of ecclesiastical property and the privilege of bishops to correspond with their clergy and flocks in matters concerning the welfare of their souls."

The Pope concluded with a call for further prayer "that the rules

Fierce Fighting Continues To Cover Allied Withdrawal from Flanders; Nazi Losses Heavy

By The Associated Press

Bombs were dropped Sunday on England and France as a foretaste of the Nazi air power the Allies expect to be launched on them full force as the war spread in the dying hours of the Franco-British retreat from Flanders.

Continuing the aerial assaults set upon the southern French port of Marseille Saturday, Nazi bombers rained explosives on Lyon in the Sunday foray and the British broadcasting corporation estimated casualties there at forty.

An unidentified plane dropped two bombs in the open country of Norfolk, about 125 miles northeast of London, with no damage reported.

The French estimated Germany had thrown 200,000 men against the last defenders of the port of escape and said they had been repulsed, wave upon wave, with the attackers sinking in reddening pools through which they waded waist-deep in the canals opened by the Allies to stay the pursuit.

140,000 British Saved

War minister Anthony Eden, while acknowledging great losses of men and materials in Flanders, said four-fifths of the British expeditionary force had been rescued, indicating, from available figures that 140,000 Tommies out of the 175,000 originally sent to the continent, were in comparative safety on their watchful homeland.

The official German news agency DNB said the Allied troops drowned in the channel under the bombing of the Nazi air force with naval assistance "represents probably the strength of several divisions." A division contains approximately 15,000).

The British air ministry said its

LONDON, June 2 (AP) — Three American-built Hudson bombers, attacking forty German bombers and fighter planes just as they were about to pour death on Allied transports off Dunkerque yesterday, destroyed five bombers and dispersed the remainder of the Nazi formation in a thirteen-minute battle, the air ministry reported tonight.

The ministry also declared in a communique that Royal Air Force fighters destroyed or severely damaged seventy-eight German bombers and fighting planes in the unceasing operations over the Allied retreat at Dunkerque. The ministry said this "sets a new day's record for our fighter pilots."

Thus far today, the ministry said, British fighters have destroyed thirty-five German aircraft over the Dunkerque sector and may have destroyed six others.

The British acknowledged sixteen planes were missing yesterday and eight today.

Repeated bomb attacks on German communications and ammunition dumps also were made yesterday, the ministry added.

Compulsory Military Training Likely If Germany Wins the War

By REG INGRAHAM

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Compulsory military araining for all physically fit American youths was predicted in Congressional circles today as a virtual certainty if Germany wins the European war.

Discussion of such a training system and other methods of augmenting defense has become widespread following President Roosevelt's request that Congress give him powers to call the national guard and organized reserves to active duty in peace time.

Chairman May (D-Ky) of the House Military Committee, saying the United States would have to expand greatly its armed forces if the Allies were defeated, asserted he favored immediate axpansion of the regular army to 500,000 men. It now is limited by law to 280,000, although only 227,000 of that number actually have been enlisted.

Compulsory Training Cheaper

Other members of the committee voiced the opinion that the compulsory training method, long the accepted practice in many European nations, would be more economical than attempting to maintain a large force of permanent troops and

GERMANS DROP BOMBS IN FRENCH CITIES

Italy Is Mobilizing for Entrance into the War

Mussolini Said To Have Given Roosevelt Facts On His Position

N Duce and President Believed To Have Discussed Situation, but Both Remain Silent

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 2.—The authoritative Fascist Editor Giovanni Ansaldo disclosed today that Italy is carrying out general mobilization in preparation for Italy's entrance into the war, generally expected any day.

"Mobilization is under way," declared Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, in his weekly broadcast to Italian troops.

He explained, however, that it was being conducted with individual summons rather than by the alarm general call of former times.

Ansaldo indicated Italy's reason for entering the war was to make her weight felt as a nation whose people could not tolerate a position of inferiority as well as gaining a share of the spoils from the British and French empires.

Political circles assumed that Premier Mussolini told President Roosevelt as much in a recent exchange of messages between them. Responsible Italians said the Duce undoubtedly stated his position frankly.

Roosevelt's Views Secret

Whether Mr. Roosevelt has raised the possibility of unfavorable American reaction to an Italian war move was not possible to ascertain. But this was considered possible in the light of new statements volunteered by authoritative Fascists Friday that threats were not likely to influence Mussolini.

In any event, the impression that Italy would be in the war within a fortnight if not sooner was intensified after the exchange of messages.

Ansaldo declared the Italian people must know why they are likely to be called to war and named the reasons as moral and political.

Of the first, he demanded to know "how a people like ours, with all our energy, could remain outside a great contest like the present one, in which all the great peoples of Europe are participating and

Swiss Bag Three German Bombers

Two Are Brought Down within Sight of the Capital

BERN, June 2. (AP)—Swiss fighting planes shot down another German bomber today—the third in twenty-four hours.

The aerial violation of Swiss territory was coincident with massed German bombing raids from the Rhine airfields against the rich industrial region of the Rhone valley in France.

The first two Nazi planes were brought down yesterday afternoon, one within sight of the Swiss capital. The one destroyed today was returning from a Rhone valley raid and crossed Swiss territory near Yverdon on Neuchatel Lake, ignoring the warning of Swiss anti-aircraft batteries.

A Swiss fighting plane tried to warn the German pilot back, but the bomber suddenly opened fire. The Swiss returned the shots, and the bomber burst into flames.

The crew managed to put out the fire and the plane landed in a field where it was surrounded by Swiss soldiers who had seen the fight.

A German officer and three members of the crew drew revolvers while the fifth member tried to set the plane on fire. When the Swiss warned they would shoot, the officer and his companions surrendered, and the plane was seized.

Since Saturday morning German planes have been operating from bases in Baden and the Black Forest against the Rhone valley objectives.

It was reported from Berlin and in diplomatic quarters in Bern that Italy plans to enter the war when Allied aviation becomes sufficiently crippled to no longer threaten industries of the Po valley.

Invaders Plan Great Drive To Take Paris

REPORTED CAPTURED

Gen. Rene Prioux

General Rene Jacques - Adolf Prioux, commander of the harried French forces in the Flanders "pocket" is reported by the German High Command to have been captured. He had been leading the rear guard holding back the Nazis while the trapped Allied forces were escaping by sea to England.

Air Attacks Believed only Preparatory to Mass Attacks

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 3—A mighty Nazi drive aimed at Paris was predicted by military observers today after German air raids on the French harbor of Marseille abruptly spread the war to the shores of the Mediterranean a bare 100 miles from Italy.

With Italy apparently on the fence awaiting Premier Mussolini's decision for war or peace, the German high command reported today that two great merchant ships had been set afire in Marseille harbor, the busiest in France.

The bombers then headed up the Rhone valley, important French industrial region, dropping bombs on the rail line between Marseille and Lyon.

Marseille is about 100 miles from the French-Italian frontier and only a little further from the French island of Corsica which Fascists have demanded for their empire.

(The mass bombing of the Rhone valley Saturday was described by the French as one of the heaviest of the war. A British broadcasting corporation report heard in New York indicated that the raids were repeated Sunday, hitting the city of Lyon.

(The forays were interpreted generally as a German gesture to assure Italy — reported mobilizing — that Nazi air power can aid her despite demands on it for the campaign in the north.

(At least 56 persons were killed and 190 wounded in a half dozen cities and towns in the path of the German air raiders. The French acknowledged that one merchantman, an English freighter loaded with cotton, was hit at Marseille.)

While the war theater broadened suddenly to the south, the Germans continued to press retreating allies in the Dunkerque area.

The high command reported that Nieuport, French channel port east of the embarkation point of the withdrawing British expeditionary force, had fallen into German hands after sharp fighting, along with Adinkerke and Ghyvelde.

The British continued to hold embattled Dunkerque in the face of a constant blast of artillery fire and pulverizing bombardments by German warplanes, the high command acknowledged.

But DNB, official German news agency, said the number of French and English soldiers drowned in the channel from ships sunk in the withdrawal "represents probably the strength of several divisions."

A DNB dispatch from the front predicted the fall of Dunkerque, declaring the German air force would "see to it that the last resistance is broken."

"One ship after another has been sunk by the German airforce and navy on the (French) coast, in the channel or in the North Sea," the agency said, and the British transport fleet at Dunkerque has been dispersed or destroyed.

There still was no tabulation of the amount of booty taken in Flanders and Artois but the communique said 200 cannon of all sizes were taken from one Allied army alone.

Recapitulating the successes of German air squadrons against Allied seapower, it said:

"In all, four warships and 11 transports with a total tonnage of 54,000 have been sunk. Fourteen warships (two cruisers, two light cruisers, one anti-aircraft cruiser, six destroyers, two torpedo boats and one speedboat) as well as 48 merchant ships with a total tonnage of 160,000 have been damaged by bomb hits.

Four-Fifths of B. E. F. Rescued From Nazi Trap

British Prepare To Fight "Inevitable" Invasion

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 2 — More than four-fifths of the British expeditionary force has been saved from the German trap in Flanders in an "epic" fight, War Secretary Anthony Eden declared tonight while an aroused Britain feverishly prepared to battle a German invasion which is generally regarded as inevitable.

The war secretary broadcast his praise of the B.E.F. to the empire and to the United States, asserting that the "loss to us has been heavy" but the "bulk" of the B.E.F. has been rescued.

Eden's talk indicated more than 140,000 British soldiers has been brought home safely — and they still are arriving. The B.E.F. originally contained 175,000 soldiers but no official figures have been made available on its strength at the time the blitzkrieg struck May 10.

The secretary spoke shortly after the Royal Air Force reported new triumphs in its ceaseless battle against the Nazi air force in the Dunkerque area, where Allied troops are embarking for the hazardous voyage across the fire-swept English channel.

Many Planes Destroyed

The air ministry announced yesterday destroying or seriously damaging 28 German bombers and fighting planes at Dunkerque. Sixteen British planes were missing.

Then the ministry in a second communique reported that fighter planes had destroyed thirty-five German aircraft thus far today at a cost of eight missing fighters.

The air ministry also said the British airmen were pounding German communications and ammunition dumps in support of the rear-

British and French Speakers Urge Italy Not To Enter European War

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—British and French broadcasters joined today in a declaration that there are no differences between the Allies and Italy which negotiation and good will could not cure.

"The Allied governments had for a long time past endeavored to meet all legitimate Italian aspirations," said a shortwave broadcast of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

"But the Italian government has never been willing to enter into any conversation on that topic.

"There are no differences between Great Britain and Italy which require armed solutions or which could not be solved by mutual good will. Great Britain desires nothing but friendship with Italy, a friendship which follows a real community of interests.

"If the Italian government decides to enter the war the responsibility will be hers and Great Britain will know how to meet the aggression."

The French broadcast was in similar vein — an appeal to the Italian people to stay out of war and an assertion that all differences between France and Italy could be removed by negotiations.

The broadcasts were picked up by the CBS listening station.

U. S. May Trade Planes To Help Allied Nations

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — President Roosevelt was reported reliably today to have before him a proposal that the administration authorize the army and navy to "trade in" some of their older war material to manufacturers who in turn could sell them to the Allies for immediate delivery.

This suggestion was said to have been laid before the president by Senator Pepper (D-Fla) at a White House conference yesterday. Although Pepper would not comment on it in any way, there were indications that the question was being looked into by the administration's legal and tactical experts.

What Mr. Roosevelt's attitude might be was not disclosed. Some administration advisors are known to have expressed doubt about the wisdom of the proposal, however, contending that the United States could not afford to reduce its own air forces at this time.

The air corps has more than 200 two-motor bombers which already are being replaced as obsolescent, but it was argued by critics of the plan that if they were good enough to help the Allies they would be valuable to the United States in

Expert Predicts Germany Will Extend Military Economy

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—Dr. Melchior Palyi, former economic adviser to the Berlin Deutschebank, asserted today that a German victory would see the Nazi "military economy" extended to all Europe and would result in monetary inflation in the United States.

"If Germany wins, she will attempt on a big scale the military economy she is now running on a small scale," he said in a university of Chicago Roundtable Broadcast.

"General von Seeckt, commander of the German Republican army, who built up the nucleus of the present German military machine, told me repeatedly that Germany had lost the last war because she thought she had only to organize the military forces, forgetting that mobilization of the nation's economy also was needed.

"The Germans have learned their lesson in the last war. Britain, under its new regime, is just learning hers."

War preparations in the United States "will mean inflation," he said, with more money being printed although there may be no more jobs.

Bone, Brown, Lee and Wiley Offer Plans in Speeches

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Methods of financing the national defense program and war if it should come were discussed tonight by four senators in remarks prepared for the American forum of the air. The speakers were Bone (D-Wash), Lee (D-Okla), Brown (D-Mich) and Wiley (D-Wis).

Bone urged legislation drafting capital as well as man-power in time of war. Financing a war by addding billions "to the already swollen debt," he said, "would lead to a runaway inflation, which in itself would be sufficient to smash the capitalist system."

Lee advocated a war-time money raising system under which the purchase of bonds would be compulsory, instead of voluntary as in the World War. He would have the bonds bear such low interest rates that there would be little profit.

Brown said that despite "hoped-for economy," the only answer to the problem of financing the national defense "is an annual tax bill of about twice what it has been in the past." He said many different means of taxation were possible, including a ten percent increase in income taxes, additional excise taxes, taxation of government bonds and a levy on war profits.

Wiley termed "feasible" three methods of raising money which he said were under consideration in Washington. These he listed as broadening the income tax base, a five percent tax on all incomes over $500 payable at the source, and an additional five percent tax on all incomes without exemptions.

Senator Capper (R-Kans) said in another address prepared for broadcasting that the administration's proposal to increase income taxes

German Infantry Fails in Effort To Take Seaport

Dunkerque Held at Terrific Cost to the Invaders

By The Associated Press

PARIS, June 2 — Waves of German infantrymen wallowing waist-deep in Dunkerque's protecting floodwaters launched a supreme effort today to wrest that channel port from the Allies but the French high command proclaimed tonight that Dunkerque's defenses "still hold."

The French called the battle against the German blitzkrieg to the English channel a historic example of "heroic tenacity."

The greater part of the battered armies drawn back to the channel coast, to the Dunkerque exit from the "hell in Flanders," has embarked, said the nightly French communique.

French military circles estimated Germany had thrown fifteen divisions — around 200,000 men — into the assault to wipe out the Allies' last foothold in the Flanders battle-zone.

The high command declared that instead of the Allied surrender which Germany had counted on since the withdrawal to Dunkerque was ordered, the Reich's blitz legions had been compelled to fight "incessantly under the most severe and violent conditions."

The retreat was pictured as an epic rearguard action which kept the enemy under constant fire and subject to "numerous" counter-attacks.

Retreat Very Difficult

"This retreat was accomplished by troops pressed on all sides, deprived of rest for twenty days and suddenly uncovered on their left by the capitulation of King Leopold," said the communique.

"This will remain an example of heroic tenacity in the history of the French and British armies."

Germany paid for her successes, the French said, with "immense loss of life and material."

The German sweep along the Belgian channel coast to form the northern jaw of a pincers on the British and French troops already cut off by the German salient through northern France to the channel had been facilitated by last Tuesday's surrender of the Belgian army at the order of Leopold III.

Planes Drop Food

Allied troops whose lines of supply were still cut, including the little British garrison holding the Calais citadel, were being supplied by planes which parachuted food and ammunition.

While the no-quarter contest for Dunkerque raged on in what the French call a "reciprocal strategical pause" in the war the fighting eased along the Somme and Aisne rivers and the eastern front.

The latter action was confined to artillery fire and some automatic arms fire in the region of Rethel," said the high command.

The semi-official Telefrance agency declared that German air raids this week-end on Marseille and other ports of southeastern France, in which the Germans were said to have lost twelve planes, were intended to show Italy she can count on German support in any action against France.

Premier Paul Reynaud visited the Somme front today with Vice Premier Henri Philippe Petain and Raoul Dautry, ministry of armament, and on his return to Paris said "the morale of the army was never higher."

German air raids were renewed in southeastern France where casualties from yesterday's bombs were fifty-six dead and 100 injured. Thirty were killed at Marseille.

Southeast Invaded

Alarms were shrilled in the southeast early today in the Rhone valley and anti-aircraft guns barked long and loud at the invaders. An official report said five German bombers were shot down yesterday.

(The British broadcasting corporation reported forty more casualties in a bombing of Lyon today.)

Several industrial towns and even the health resort of Aix-Les-Bains were reported attacked yesterday.

Havas news agency said the raiders aimed at railway lines, among other objectives. The French acknowledged that a British merchant ship was hit at Marseille.

(The German high command said the Lyon-Marseille railway was damaged at several places and two "great" merchant ships were bombed at Marseille.)

Allied shelling, machine-gun and rifle fire and the strafing of low-flying planes were blended into a defensive holocaust to meet the Nazi at Dunkerque although the city was under German fire from field guns almost ringing the town.

The German guns were said to be pouring out a ceaseless bombardment to cover the infantry movements and blast the British and French from their fiercely - held point of debarkation from Flanders fields.

Merciless combat developed as the Nazi soldiers, no longer shielded by tanks, plunged into the flood from opened coastal canals.

Wave after wave of German troops strove to cross the water Hazard, it was said, and each showed great gaps as the individual attacks ended. The survivors stumbled back to the high ground and the dead and wounded disappeared in the few feet of water.

Bursting shells geysered the water, churing it into a muddy and bloody froth.

Await Next Nazi Move

That was the picture of the siege of Dunkerque as pieced together from reports reaching this capital as it awaited Germany's next move — against France on the Somme-Aisne line, about seventy miles from Paris, or against England, just across the channel. At Dunkerque the English coast is about forty miles away but only twenty-two from the Calais region.

The sea, let in around Dunkerque to form a great protecting moat like the water barrier of a medieval castle, almost encircled the city.

Twenty-five miles down the coast from Dunkerque at Calais a little British garrison, cut off for a week and making a last stand in the thick-walled seventeenth century citadel, was reported beating off German attacks virtually engulfing that channel port.

Outnumbered and provisioned by parachutes, the garrison signaled last night it was still holding out. The British had taken refuge in the citadel after being forced back through Calais, step by step in heavy fighting.

The latest German attacks on the Somme front, during last night, were reported repulsed. These included attempts to cross the Somme river at Corbie and Peronne in inflated rubber boats.

Military circles called the present phase of operations outside Dunkerque—despite their ferocity—a "strategical pause"—in the general progress of the war.

They were not sure, however, how long the so-called pause might last. This phase is regarded as a pause merely because the direction of the next German offensive has not become apparent.

The Dunkerque drive, of course, was aimed at a complete domination of the Flanders battlefield. The Allies clung to the city at least to keep the way open for the rest of the French rearguard, withdrawing from the inner plain.

There has been a suggestion, however, that the Allies might try to hold Dunkerque indefinitely as a spearpoint in the channel flank of the Germans.

It was felt here that German mechanized equipment would have to undergo considerable overhaul and replacement before the next real offensive can take shape.

WAR CHARIOTS RIGHT OFF THE ASSEMBLY LINE

Important arm of mechanized warfare is the tank corps. Greatly outnumbered in this weapon at beginning of the war, the Allies now are rushing thousands to the front to stem the Nazi blitzkrieg. Here is an imposing array of fast baby tanks as they came off the assembly line in a French factory.

case this country faced an emergency in this hemisphere during the year or so that would be required to replace them.

Advised of the existence of the proposal, Senator Austin, the assistant Republican leader, told reporters he would favor it if the trade-in could be worked out without weakening the nation's defense forces.

As tentatively outlined, the plan provides that the army and navy would select some of their older warplanes and trade them in to manufacturers to apply on the cost of new models coming out in the next few months, much as the purchaser of an automobile trades in his old car on the new one.

500 Planes Available

Advocates estimated that 500 planes still fit for fighting purposes, although not of the latest type, might thus be obtained by the Allies at once.

Pepper has tried previously, without success, to put through legislation authorizing the army and navy to sell to the Allies planes which they considered they could spare. This proposal was rejected by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, 12 to 1.

Meanwhile, Congressional wheels are geared to whirl rapidly this week in turning out major sections of the president's defense program, which reliable sources now estimate involves a total of $4,672,000,000.

A House appropriations committee prepared to go to work on budget estimates covering about $1,375,000,000 in additional extraordinary expenditures and contract authorizations for the army and navy, suggested by the president last week in a message increasing previous requests.

The addition of this amount to prospective defense costs stirred widespread talk of imposing more taxes than would be levied by the bill introduced in the house last week, with administration approval, to raise about $656,000,000 of additional revenue a year.

fighter planes had destroyed or severely damaged seventy-eight Nazi bombers in the Dunkerque area Saturday for a new record day of success. It added that sixteen British plans were missing.

The French Sunday night communique said Germany's territorial success in Flanders "was compensated for by immense loss of life and material."

Battleship Not Sunk

The German high command's communique made no mention of the sinking of the 33,950-ton British battleship Nelson which was claimed Saturday by an authorized press spokesman in Berlin and promptly denied in London.

Saturday's bombing in the Rhone valley of southern France killed at least fifty-six and wounded 100 in a half dozen towns and cities during raids regarded in French circles as flirtations designed to induce Italy to take the fateful step to the fiery altar of war. French spokesmen, while describing the Rhone valley bombing as one of the heaviest of war, saw political rather that primary military motives in the attacks on the Mediterranean and inland.

Germany claimed successful bomb hits on two merchant ships in Marseille and the French acknowledged that one British freighter was fired.

French Morale High

The French premier Reynaud, after a visit to the Somme front Sunday, accompanied by Vice-Premier Petain, announced "the morale of the army was never higher."

With the Somme front some seventy miles to the north, and the Rhone valley bombings on the south, Paris appeared to be the next Nazi objective. At least such a move was discussed widely in Berlin, with attacks from the north and south foreseen as flanking movement through the low countries and across northern France.

Italy, reported mobilizing, still hesitated.

Nearly 2,200 refugees, mostly Americans, pulled out of Genoa on the U. S. liner Manhattan and 800 others sailed for America from Galway, Ireland, on the U. S. Liner President Roosevelt.

Pope Issues Appeal

Pope Pius beseeched the belligerents to "remember always those duties of humanity which do not lose any of their value under war law and morality."

Recalling his experience as the Papal representative at Munich during the world war, he extended his paternal love "to all our sons and daughters, both those of the German populations who are always dear to us and among whom we spent many years of our life, and to those of the Allied states to which we are also bound by so many pleasing and pious memories."

Rumbles came from both ends of the Mediterranean. Turkish Premier Refik Saydam told his people that their army stood "ready to repel any eggression from any side." He did not mention the mutual assistance pact with the Allies or the possibility of war with Italy.

An authoritative Spanish journalist-spokesman for the government said Britain's hold of Gibraltar was "a useless offense" and said "true friendship between England and Spain will start" when the "rock" is returned to Spain.

These statements were significant because of Italy's long-held aspiration to establish authority over "Mar Nostrum" — "our sea," a feat which is impossible with others holding the Mediterranean's entries and exits.

would have the advantage of building up a tremendous reserve of trained fighters.

Representative Smith (D-Conn) said it was estimated that approximately 1,500,000 youths reach military service age each year and that if even fifty percent of them were physically fit they would form an adequate standing army.

Smith said the desirable method would be to take those 750,000 youths into the army and navy immediately before they enter their business or professional careers and give them one year of military training. Thereafter, they could be called back for periodic 'brush up' training.

Representative Costello (D-Calif) said he thought the United States would have to resign itself to an annual national defense bill of at least $2,000,000,000. In normal years, the army and navy combined got much less than half that sum.

Reynaud Praises The Red Cross

PARIS, June 2 (AP via radio)—Premier Paul Reynaud, speaking to the United States today on "The Work of the Red Cross in the War," said France in these distressing times "is especially appreciative of the gestures of those who have remained her faithful friends and have been in a position to help her."

Of these, he said, the Red Cross has been among the foremost.

"With its inexhaustible generosity it has been the admirable spokesman of the big-hearted nation which has always set a great example," the premier said, adding that he spoke in the name of Belgians, Dutch, British and others as well.

France, he said, is already setting up its organization for aiding the Red Cross in the distribution of aid to the refugees.

"Thus at the very time when brutal forces pursue its action x x x the American Red Cross and its French protege are affirming the victorious power of righteous humanity."

Reynaud went to the Somme front today with Vice-Premier Henri Philippe Petain and Raoul Dautry, minister of armament, and announced upon his return to Paris that "the morale of the army was never higher."

Abuse of Freedom Help to Tyrants, Dr. Holloway Says

WESTMINSTER, Md., June 2 (AP)—Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland college, said today that when the privileges of freedom are abused "tyrants will rise" to take away the liberties of free people.

Dr. Holloway spoke at college baccalaureate services in Alumni hall. Besides graduates and other college students, members of Westminster Church congregation attended.

"I would argue that if you believe in God you believe in Christ," Dr. Holloway declared, "but if you do not believe in God nor in Christ then the universe is not governed by moral law; then war, aggression, imperialism may be right and the world's dictators may be right and China may be the oppressor, not the oppressed.

"If there is no moral authority higher than man, then whether or not a thing is right depends on whether or not you can get away with it.

"I maintain that Hitler is wrong whether he gets away with it or not, because I believe in moral law founded in God."

"This age of freedom has made us feel that we can do as we please; that any external restraints are in themselves wrong.

"To be sure, freedom is one of man's greatest gifts, but wherever the privileges of freedom are abused, tyrants will rise to rule us and to rob of us of our liberties."

Browder Named By Communists To Head Ticket

Alabama Negro Will Be His Running Mate in Campaign

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Earl Russell Browder, the Wichita, Kas., boy who grew up to become America's No. 1 Communist, was clamorously nominated for president of the United States today at the Communist party's convention in Madison Square Garden.

Browder, leader of the party, is free on bail on appeal from a four-year prison sentence for using a fraudulent passport.

He was the party's candidate in 1936 and polled 80,000 votes.

Nominated for vice president was James W. Ford, Alabama negro.

The proceedings were broadcast over two national radio networks, NBC and Mutual, in the face of an unsuccessful eleventh-hour effort by former Rep. John J. O'Connor, New York Democrat, to have the government ban the broadcast, and other opposition.

Network member stations in a dozen large cities, including Philadelphia, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Wichita, announced they were not carrying the program, and the Catholic War Veterans, Inc., urged a national "listeners' boycott" on the ground that the affair was unAmerican.

The convention adopted a platform opposing President Roosevelt's national defense program and calling for support of "the peace policy of the Soviet Union."

Frank Joyce Held By Scotland Yard

LONDON, June 3—(Monday) (AP)—Frank Joyce, 22-year-old brother of William Joyce, identified in some British quarters as "Lord Haw Haw," the Oxford-speaking German radio broadcaster, was arrested under defense regulations and confined to Brixton jail.

Scotland yard detectives arrested Joyce Saturday night. Another brother, Quentin, 25, an air ministry clerk until the outbreak of the war, has been interned for some time for his propaganda activities.

Frank was employed on the British Broadcasting Company technical staff until early this year.

The brothers were members of the National Socialist League, a Fascist organization, which was disbanded last August.

Sweden Prepares To Protect Children

STOCKHOLM, June 2 (AP)—(Via Radio)—New measures to protect population against air raids, including removal of 65,000 children from Stockholm and other large Swedish cities, were announced today.

The children will be removed between June 10 and 15.

These measures were taken as Premier Per Albin Hansson told the Congress of the Swedish Socialist party that Swedish is not threatened by the war and that he believed no one has aggressive intentions against the only Scandinavian nation thus far uninvaded.

All bridges, railway crossings and industrial establishments in Sweden have been closely guarded for several weeks.

The Stockholm Central railway station may not be entered by foreigners without special permit.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Without the fanfare attending the spectacular undertaking to create an air force of 50,000 planes, the United States is preparing to turn out essential arms of more conventional types on a scale reminiscent of World War days.

In the supplementary preparedness estimates to be detailed to Congress this week, $200,000,000 is earmarked for new government munitions plants and for expansion of existing facilities, aside from a similar outlay already approved by the Senate.

The bare figures suggest that the task of supplying weapons and ammunition for a prospective army of a million men, expanding a navy which may well be the world's mightiest, and creating an air force larger even than Germany's, is of a magnitude that will be widely appreciated only when dollars begin to be translated into buildings, machinery and bustling industrial activity.

Prospective American outlays for defense already are heavier than those of Great Britain on the eve of the European conflict. There is even a logical basis of comparison between this country's sudden efforts to make its defenses secure and Germany's switch to a war economy in 1933.

Will Build Large Plants

Under war and navy department plans, several huge powder and shell-loading plants such as were put up hurriedly a quarter century ago and subsequently scrapped are to be built immediately, almost entirely in the middle west.

Factories to produce high explosives and possibly chemicals must be erected soon, some of the administration's top military advisors contend, if the purposes of the vast defense efforts are to be realized.

These are apart from "stand by" aircraft factories. Plans for upwards of thirty of these are ready in the event private industry should prove unequal to the demands of the aviation phase of the program. President Roosevelt has said that any such plants would be private-operated, however.

The government plants are only for the production of munitions which can not readily be obtained by contract, officials said. Private industry is to be relied on as in the past for the bulk of the output, possibly nine-tenths, they added.

Supplying arms in mass quantities is a vast and costly undertaking, and just now the most vital portion of the whole preparedness campaign.

Better Prepared in 1917

On the eve of entry into the World War, the United States was better prepared in many respects than now. For instance, war orders of the allies had increased the American capacity to produce smokeless powder 25 or 30 times. Existing capacity is far less, about 25,000,000 pounds a year.

Despite the war orders, only a score or so American concerns were engaged early in 1917 in the manufacture of ammunition, big guns, rifles, machine guns and other important ordnance supplies. At the armistice 8,000 plants were working on army ordnance contracts alone.

About all the army and navy have left from the war-time effort is experience and a plant at Muscle Shoals where chemicals were turned out. Officials predict this plant, now manufacturing fertilizer, will be shifted to the production of military chemicals.

The World War experience was reflected in the 1920 national defense act, under which the war and navy departments have been preparing in voluminous detail to harness industry to military purposes in war the records of 20,000 or so plants are available and about half of these have been tentatively assigned munitions production tasks for wartime.

guard fight put up by the Allies as they retreat toward Dunkerque and await ships.

"It is the spirit of the B.E.F. that has won through," Eden declared. "Man for man the British proved themselves superior to the Germans wherever they met. x x x The triumph is a triumph of an army. There is no braver epic in all our annals."

"We must make good our losses and we must win this war," the minister said. "We need more planes, more tanks, more guns. The people of this country must work as never before."

Eden's call for more and more work at home coincided with the launching of a vast agricultural program designed to bolster Britain's food supply.

Many Troops Arrive

At the same time, a constant stream of war-weary British and French soldiers poured into the country and the home guard pushed the coordination of secret defense plans intended to combat any invasion by Germany — whether by sea or from the air.

A strict watch is being kept on Britain's roads. One motorist died today of rifle wounds suffered when he failed to answer a sentry's challenge to halt on the highway. Four others in his car were injured.

With the Nazis standing at the crossroads — poised either for an assault upon England or a drive against Paris, or both — the Britains were taking every precaution.

Retreat Nearly Completed

An indication that the British retreat may be nearly completed was seen in the arrival in England of a British brigade which was reported to have been part of the rearguard. The brigade, in the Flanders battle from start to finish, was credited with marching over forty miles on one day of the campaign.

Of the original British expeditionary force of 175,000 men, it was said unofficially yesterday that only one division, considered only a remnant of its normal strength of 15,000 men, remained as a rear guard with two French divisions.

To plug holes bored in the nation's food supply by Germany's occupation of Denmark and Holland, minister of agriculture Robert S. Hudson broadcast a plan to increase the production of every one of Britain's 300,000 farms, cultivate derelict land, raise wages and prices for farm products and stem to drift of labor from the farms to other industries.

Thousands on Move

Thousands of men and children were on the move today — British and French soldiers reaching England from what they described as the "hell" of Flanders and 48,000 London children leaving the eastern and southeastern coastal areas for "safer" regions in Wales and central England.

British factories worked night and day throughout the week-end, forging weapons for defense against invasion and to re-equip the army withdrawn from Flanders.

The war office disclosed that the army needs more youths from eighteen to 19½ years old for "very important duties" in the home defense. These, at the same time, would be trained for army service which they begin at the age of twenty.

Every foot of cabin space was made available. Cabins normally occupied by three persons were fitted for seven. The rich and not-so-prosperous were compelled to make sacrifices in privacy and comfort.

Many woeful tales were told by passengers. Many foreign refugees had abandoned their possessions in flight. One Belgian from Antwerp, accompanied by his wife and child, said they traveled eighteen days in refugee columns which were continuously bombed and machine-gunned by Nazi planes.

Chaplain Thomas Addresses Class Of Midshipmen

Urges Them To Lead Lives Devoted to Truth and Worship

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 2 (AP)—The 456 members of the Naval Academy graduating class attending baccalaureate services in the academy chapel today were urged by Chaplain William N. Thomas to lead lives devoted to truth, service and worship.

Soft light filtered through memorial windows dedicated to Admiral Farragut and other naval heroes as chaplain Thomas—using as his text "For Me To Live Is Christ"—preached from a flag-bedecked chancel.

The blue and gold uniformed midshipmen, attending their last chapel service before graduation Thursday, sat in the center of the recently remodelled chapel, surrounded by sweethearts, relatives and friends.

"The test of a man's philosophy of life," Chaplain Thomas said, "is what he does in a crisis . . . what do you consider necessary that you may really live? That is always an important question. It is particularly pertinent to the plans of men who are setting their courses for life.

"Figuratively speaking, you have spent the last four years going down a long corridor towards a door that opens into a world where men are testing by practical application their theories of what it means to live.

" . . . Now that these doors are swinging open, your teachers, parents and others could wish you a far happier and saner world than that into which you are about to go. But the fact remains that it is what it is this morning because human beings have made it so and if it is to be any better tomorrow it will be because you and your generation are not satisfied with living as it is directed in the present environment.

" . . . The heart of the world is crushed over the destructions of war . . . but there are still intangible treasures that will survive as long as man survives. No change of material possessions can rob a man of what he carries in his own soul."

The communique omitted also reports on activity on the main battle-front from the channel at Abbeville along the Somme and Aisne rivers to Montmedy.

Varied Program To Mark Outdoor Concert Tomorrow By Fort Hill High Band

A varied program will feature the free outdoor concert to be presented at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night by the Fort Hill high school band at the Fort Hill stadium.

Several marches will be played, including Sousa's "U. S. Field Artillery March" and "Washington Post March," Wagner's "Under the Double Eagle" and Fucik's "Entry of the Gladiator."

One of the highlights of the program will be a symphonic band arrangement of Irving Berlin's popular patriotic composition, "God Bless America."

By request, the band will repeat its novelty rendition of "Coming Around the Mountain," and several other novelty numbers will also be presented. Popular selections will include "Alice Blue Gown."

The Band Parents will conduct a bake sale and sell refreshments.

By The Associated Press

PARIS, June 2 — Waves of German infantrymen wallowing waist-deep in Dunkerque's protecting floodwaters launched a supreme effort today to wrest that channel port from the Allies but the French high command proclaimed tonight that Dunkerque's defenses "still hold."

The French called the battle against the German blitzkrieg to the English channel a historic example of "heroic tenacity."

The greater part of the battered armies drawn back to the channel coast, to the Dunkerque exit from the "hell in Flanders," has embarked, said the nightly French communique.

French military circles estimated Germany had thrown fifteen divisions — around 200,000 men — into the assault to wipe out the Allies' last foothold in the Flanders battlezone.

The high command declared that instead of the Allied surrender which Germany had counted on since the withdrawal to Dunkerque was ordered, the Reich's blitz legions had been compelled to fight "incessantly under the most severe and violent conditions."

The retreat was pictured as an epic rearguard action which kept the enemy under constant fire and subject to "numerous" counter-attacks.

Retreat Very Difficult

"This retreat was accomplished by troops pressed on all sides, deprived of rest for twenty days and suddenly uncovered on their left by the capitulation of King Leopold," said the communique.

"This will remain an example of heroic tenacity in the history of the French and British armies."

Germany paid for her successes, the French said, with "immense loss of life and material."

The German sweep along the Belgian channel coast to form the northern jaw of a pincers on the British and French troops already cut off by the German salient through northern France to the channel had been facilitated by last Tuesday's surrender of the Belgian army at the order of Leopold III.

Planes Drop Food

Allied troops whose lines of supply were still cut, including the little British garrison holding the Calais citadel, were being supplied by planes which parachuted food and ammunition.

While the no-quarter contest for Dunkerque raged on in what the French call a "reciprocal strategical pause" in the war the fighting eased along the Somme and Aisne rivers and the eastern front.

The latter action was confined to "artillery fire and some automatic arms fire in the region of Rethel," said the high command.

The semi-official Telefrance agency declared that German air raids this week-end on Marseille and other ports of southeastern France, in which the Germans were said to have lost twelve planes, were intended to show Italy she can count on German support in any action against France.

Premier Paul Reynaud visited the Somme front today with Vice Premier Henri Philippe Petain and Raoul Dautry, ministry of armament, and on his return to Paris said "the morale of the army was never higher."

German air raids were renewed in southeastern France where casualties from yesterday's bombs were fifty-six dead and 100 injured. Thirty were killed at Marseille.

Southeast Invaded

Alarms were shrilled in the southeast early today in the Rhone valley and anti-aircraft guns barked long and loud at the invaders. An official report said five German bombers were shot down yesterday. (The British broadcasting corporation reported forty more casualties in a bombing of Lyon today.)

Several industrial towns and even the health resort of Aix-Les-Bains were reported attacked yesterday.

Havas news agency said the raiders aimed at railway lines, among other objectives. The French acknowledged that a British merchant ship was hit at Marseille.

(The German high command said the Lyon-Marseille railway was damaged at several places and two "great" merchant ships were bombed at Marseille.)

Allied shelling, machine-gun and rifle fire and the strafing of low-flying planes were blended into a defensive holocaust to meet the Nazi at Dunkerque although the city was under German fire from field guns almost ringing the town.

The German guns were said to be pouring out a ceaseless bombardment to cover the infantry movements and blast the British and French from their fiercely - held point of debarkation from Flanders fields.

Merciless combat developed as the Nazi soldiers, no longer shielded by tanks, plunged into the flood from opened coastal canals.

Wave after wave of German troops strove to cross the water Hazard, it was said, and each showed great gaps as the individual attacks ended. The survivors stumbled back to the high ground and the dead and wounded disappeared in the few feet of water.

Bursting shells geysered the water, churing it into a muddy and bloody froth.

Await Next Nazi Move

That was the picture of the siege of Dunkerque as pieced together from reports reaching this capital as it awaited Germany's next move — against France on the Somme-Aisne line, about seventy miles from Paris, or against England, just across the channel. At Dunkerque the English coast is about forty miles away but only twenty-two from the Calais region.

The sea, let in around Dunkerque to form a great protecting moat like the water barrier of a medieval castle, almost encircled the city.

Twenty-five miles down the coast from Dunkerque at Calais a little British garrison, cut off for a week and making a last stand in the thick-walled seventeenth century citadel, was reported beating off German attacks virtually engulfing that channel port.

Outnumbered and provisioned by parachutes, the garrison signaled last night it was still holding out. The British had taken refuge in the citadel after being forced back through Calais, step by step in heavy fighting.

The latest German attacks on the Somme front, during last night, were reported repulsed. These included attempts to cross the Somme river at Corbie and Peronne in inflated rubber boats.

Military circles called the present phase of operations outside Dunkerque—despite their ferocity—a "strategical pause"—in the general progress of the war.

They were not sure, however, how long the so-called pause might last. This phase is regarded as a pause merely because the direction of the next German offensive has not become apparent.

The Dunkerque drive, of course, was aimed at a complete domination of the Flanders battlefield. The Allies clung to the city at least to keep the way open for the rest of the French rearguard, withdrawing from the inner plain.

There has been a suggestion, however, that the Allies might try to hold Dunkerque indefinitely as a spearpoint in the channel flank of the Germans.

It was felt here that German mechanized equipment would have to undergo considerable overhaul and replacement before the next real offensive can take shape.

WAR CHARIOTS RIGHT OFF THE ASSEMBLY LINE

Important arm of mechanized warfare is the tank corps. Greatly outnumbered in this weapon at beginning of the war, the Allies now are rushing thousands to the front to stem the Nazi blitzkrieg. Here is an imposing array of fast baby tanks as they came off the assembly line in a French factory.

500 Planes Available

Advocates estimated that 500 planes still fit for fighting purposes, although not of the latest type, might thus be obtained by the Allies at once.

Pepper has tried previously, without success, to put through legislation authorizing the army and navy to sell to the Allies planes which they considered they could spare. This proposal was rejected by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, 12 to 1.

Meanwhile, Congressional wheels are geared to whirl rapidly this week in turning out major sections of the president's defense program, which reliable sources now estimate involves a total of $4,672,000,000.

A House appropriations committee prepared to go to work on budget estimates covering about $1,375,000,000 in additional extraordinary expenditures and contract authorizations for the army and navy, suggested by the president last week in a message increasing previous requests.

The addition of this amount to prospective defense costs stirred widespread talk of imposing more taxes than would be levied by the bill introduced in the house last week, with administration approval, to raise about $656,000,000 of additional revenue a year.

Pope Pius beseeched the belligerents to "remember always those duties of humanity which do not lose any of their value under war law and morality."

Recalling his experience as the Papal representative at Munich during the world war, he extended his paternal love "to all our sons and daughters, both those of the German populations who are always dear to us and among whom we spent many years of our life, and to those of the Allied states to which we are also bound by so many pleasing and pious memories."

Rumbles came from both ends of the Mediterranean. Turkish Premier Refik Saydam told his people that their army stood "ready to repel any eggression from any side." He did not mention the mutual assistance pact with the Allies or the possibility of war with Italy.

An authoritative Spanish journalist-spokesman for the government said Britain's hold of Gibraltar was "a useless offense" and said "true friendship between England and Spain will start" when the "rock" is returned to Spain.

These statements were significant because of Italy's long-held aspiration to establish authority over "Mar Nostrum" — "our sea," a feat which is impossible with others holding the Mediterranean's entries and exits.

would have the advantage of building up a tremendous reserve of trained fighters.

Representative Smith (D-Conn) said it was estimated that approximately 1,500,000 youths reach military service age each year and that if even fifty percent of them were physically fit they would form an adequate standing army.

Smith said the desirable method would be to take those 750,000 youths into the army and navy immediately before they enter their business or professional careers and give them one year of military training. Thereafter, they could be called back for periodic 'brush up' training.

Representative Costello (D-Calif) said he thought the United States would have to resign itself to an annual national defense bill of at least $2,000,000,000. In normal years, the army and navy combined got much less than half that sum.

Reynaud Praises The Red Cross

PARIS, June 2 (AP via radio)—Premier Paul Reynaud, speaking to the United States today on "The Work of the Red Cross in the War," said France in these distressing times "is especially appreciative of the gestures of those who have remained her faithful friends and have been in a position to help her."

Of these, he said, the Red Cross has been among the foremost.

"With its inexhaustible generosity it has been the admirable spokesman of the big-hearted nation which has always set a great example," the premier said, adding that he spoke in the name of Belgians, Dutch, British and others as well.

France, he said, is already setting up its organization for aiding the Red Cross in the distribution of aid to the refugees.

"Thus at the very time when brutal forces pursue its action x x x the American Red Cross and its French protege are affirming the victorious power of righteous humanity."

Reynaud went to the Somme front today with Vice-Premier Henri Philippe Petain and Raoul Dautry, minister of armament, and announced upon his return to Paris that "the morale of the army was never higher."

Abuse of Freedom Help to Tyrants, Dr. Holloway Says

WESTMINSTER, Md., June 2 (AP)—Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland college, said today that when the privileges of freedom are abused "tyrants will rise" to take away the liberties of free people.

Dr. Holloway spoke at college baccalaureate services in Alumni hall. Besides graduates and other college students, members of Westminster Church congregation attended.

"I would argue that if you believe in God you believe in Christ," Dr. Holloway declared, "but if you do not believe in God nor in Christ then the universe is not governed by moral law; then war, aggression, imperialism may be right and the world's dictators may be right and China may be the oppressor, not the oppressed.

"If there is no moral authority higher than man, then whether or not a thing is right depends on whether or not you can get away with it.

"I maintain that Hitler is wrong whether he gets away with it or not, because I believe in moral law founded in God."

"This age of freedom has made us feel that we can do as we please; that any external restraints are in themselves wrong.

"To be sure, freedom is one of man's greatest gifts, but wherever the privileges of freedom are abused, tyrants will rise to rule us and to rob of us of our liberties."

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Washington will address the seventieth annual commencement tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Baltimore Editor Dies at Age 66

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—George W. Evans, 66, night editor of the Sun for seventeen years, died early today after a long illness.

A native of Canton, Md., Evans first served as a police reporter on the old Baltimore American, later went with the old Baltimore Herald, and then with the Baltimore News, where he became news editor and makeup editor. He resigned from the News in 1923.

He is survived by his widow, two sons, William S. and Alwyn M. Evans, and a daughter, Miss Mary Isabelle Evans.

Browder Named By Communists To Head Ticket

Alabama Negro Will Be His Running Mate in Campaign

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Earl Russell Browder, the Wichita, Kas., boy who grew up to become America's No. 1 Communist, was clamorously nominated for president of the United States today at the Communist party's convention in Madison Square Garden.

Browder, leader of the party, is free on bail on appeal from a four-year prison sentence for using a fraudulent passport.

He was the party's candidate in 1936 and polled 80,000 votes.

Nominated for vice president was James W. Ford, Alabama negro.

The proceedings were broadcast over two national radio networks, NBC and Mutual, in the face of an unsuccessful eleventh-hour effort by former Rep. John J. O'Connor, New York Democrat, to have the government ban the broadcast, and other opposition.

Network member stations in a dozen large cities, including Philadelphia, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Wichita, announced they were not carrying the program, and the Catholic War Veterans, Inc., urged a national "listeners' boycott" on the ground that the affair was unAmerican.

The convention adopted a platform opposing President Roosevelt's national defense program and calling for support of "the peace policy of the Soviet Union."

Frank Joyce Held By Scotland Yard

LONDON, June 3—(Monday) (AP)—Frank Joyce, 22-year-old brother of William Joyce, identified in some British quarters as "Lord Haw Haw," the Oxford-speaking German radio broadcaster, was arrested under defense regulations and confined to Brixton jail.

Scotland yard detectives arrested Joyce Saturday night. Another brother, Quentin, 25, an air ministry clerk until the outbreak of the war, has been interned for some time for his propaganda activities.

Frank was employed on the British Broadcasting Company technical staff until early this year.

The brothers were members of the National Socialist League, a Fascist organization, which was disbanded last August.

Sweden Prepares To Protect Children

STOCKHOLM, June 2 (AP)—(Via Radio)—New measures to protect population against air raids, including removal of 65,000 children from Stockholm and other large Swedish cities, were announced today.

The children will be removed between June 10 and 15.

These measures were taken as Premier Per Albin Hansson told the Congress of the Swedish Socialist party that Swedish is not threatened by the war and that he believed no one has aggressive intentions against the only Scandinavian nation thus far uninvaded.

All bridges, railway crossings and industrial establishments in Sweden have been closely guarded for several weeks.

The Stockholm Central railway station may not be entered by foreigners without special permit.

"If Italy should stay out of the contest," he declared, "it would signify irreparable decadence, a kind of disqualification.

Italy's Objectives

Discussing political aspects of potential Italian intervention, Ansaldo named Corsica, Tunisia, Gibraltar and Suez as Italian objectives.

For several weeks, reservists have been receiving pink cards calling them up individually, the authorities thus obviating the necessity of posting a general mobilization proclamation.

When these forces might be sent into action to realize Italy's "aspirations" remained tonight an unanswered question on every Italian's lips.

Many had thought that the day might be next Tuesday, June 4, when the cabinet meets.

However, the newspaper Il Resto Del Carlino said that date was excluded. It expressed the conviction, nevertheless, that Italy would move "soon."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Without the fanfare attending the spectacular undertaking to create an air force of 50,000 planes, the United States is preparing to turn out essential arms of more conventional types on a scale reminiscent of World War days.

In the supplementary preparedness estimates to be detailed to Congress this week, $200,000,000 is earmarked for new government munitions plants and for expansion of existing facilities, aside from a similar outlay already approved by the Senate.

The bare figures suggest that the task of supplying weapons and ammunition for a prospective army of a million men, expanding a navy which may well be the world's mightiest, and creating an air force larger even than Germany's, is of a magnitude that will be widely appreciated only when dollars begin to be translated into buildings, machinery and bustling industrial activity.

Prospective American outlays for defense already are heavier than those of Great Britain on the eve of the European conflict. There is even a logical basis of comparison between this country's sudden efforts to make its defenses secure and Germany's switch to a war economy in 1933.

Will Build Large Plants

Under war and navy department plans, several huge powder and shell-loading plants such as were put up hurriedly a quarter century ago and subsequently scrapped are to be built immediately, almost entirely in the middle west.

Factories to produce high explosives and possibly chemicals must be erected soon, some of the administration's top military advisors contend, if the purposes of the vast defense efforts are to be realized.

These are apart from "stand by" aircraft factories. Plans for upwards of thirty of these are ready in the event private industry should prove unequal to the demands of the aviation phase of the program. President Roosevelt has said that any such plants would be private-operated, however.

The government plants are only for the production of munitions which can not readily be obtained by contract, officials said. Private industry is to be relied on as in the past for the bulk of the output, possibly nine-tenths, they added.

Supplying arms in mass quantities is a vast and costly undertaking, and just now the most vital portion of the whole preparedness campaign.

Better Prepared in 1917

On the eve of entry into the World War, the United States was better prepared in many respects than now. For instance, war orders of the allies had increased the American capacity to prodduce smokeless powder 25 or 30 times. Existing capacity is far less, about 25,000,000 pounds a year.

Despite the war orders, only a score or so American concerns were engaged early in 1917 in the manufacture of ammunition, big guns, rifles, machine guns and other important ordnance supplies. At the armistice 8,000 plants were working on army ordnance contracts alone.

About all the army and navy have left from the war-time effort is experience and a plant at Muscle Shoals where chemicals were turned out. Officials predict this plant, now manufacturing fertilizer, will be shifted to the production of military chemicals.

The World War experience was reflected in the 1920 national defense act, under which the war and navy departments have been preparing in voluminous detail to harness industry to military purposes in war the records of 20,000 or so plants are available and about half of these have been tentatively assigned munitions production tasks for wartime.

guard fight put up by the Allies as they retreat toward Dunkerque and await ships.

"It is the spirit of the B.E.F. that has won through," Eden declared. "Man for man the British proved themselves superior to the Germans wherever they met. x x x The triumph is a triumph of an army. There is no braver epic in all our annals."

"We must make good our losses and we must win this war," the minister said. "We need more planes, more tanks, more guns. The people of this country must work as never before."

Eden's call for more and more work at home coincided with the launching of a vast agricultural program designed to bolster Britain's food supply.

Many Troops Arrive

At the same time, a constant stream of war-weary British and French soldiers poured into the country and the home guard pushed the coordination of secret defense plans intended to combat any invasion by Germany — whether by sea or from the air.

A strict watch is being kept on Britain's roads. One motorist died today of rifle wounds suffered when he failed to answer a sentry's challenge to halt on the highway. Four others in his car were injured.

With the Nazis standing at the crossroads — poised either for an assault upon England or a drive against Paris, or both — the Britains were taking every precaution.

Retreat Nearly Completed

An indication that the British retreat may be nearly completed was seen in the arrival in England of a British brigade which was reported to have been part of the rearguard. The brigade, in the Flanders battle from start to finish, was credited with marching over forty miles on one day of the campaign.

Of the original British expeditionary force of 175,000 men, it was said unofficially yesterday that only one division, considered only a remnant of its normal strength of 15,000 men, remained as a rear guard with two French divisions.

To plug holes bored in the nation's food supply by Germany's occupation of Denmark and Holland, minister of agriculture Robert S. Hudson broadcast a plan to increase the production of every one of Britain's 300,000 farms, cultivate derelict land, raise wages and prices for farm products and stem to drift of labor from the farms to other industries.

Thousands on Move

Thousands of men and children were on the move today — British and French soldiers reaching England from what they described as the "hell" of Flanders and 48,000 London children leaving the eastern and southeastern coastal areas for "safer" regions in Wales and central England.

British factories worked night and day throughout the week-end, forging weapons for defense against invasion and to re-equip the army withdrawn from Flanders.

The war office disclosed that the army needs more youths from eighteen to 19½ years old for "very important duties" in the home defense. These, at the same time, would be trained for army service which they begin at the age of twenty.

hours, were told they could not embark because they had failed to obtain exit visas, now required by Italian authorities on passports of citizens of the allied countries.

Every foot of cabin space was made available. Cabins normally occupied by three persons were fitted for seven. The rich and not-so-prosperous were compelled to make sacrifices in privacy and comfort.

Many woeful tales were told by passengers. Many foreign refugees had abandoned their possessions in flight. One Belgian from Antwerp, accompanied by his wife and child, said they traveled eighteen days in refugee columns which were continuously bombed and machine-gunned by Nazi planes.

Chaplain Thomas Addresses Class Of Midshipmen

Urges Them To Lead Lives Devoted to Truth and Worship

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 2 (AP)—The 456 members of the Naval Academy graduating class attending baccalaureate services in the academy chapel today were urged by Chaplain William N. Thomas to lead lives devoted to truth, service and worship.

Soft light filtered through memorial windows dedicated to Admiral Farragut and other naval heroes as chaplain Thomas—using as his text "For Me To Live Is Christ"—preached from a flag-bedecked chancel.

The blue and gold uniformed midshipmen, attending their last chapel service before graduation Thursday, sat in the center of the recently remodelled chapel, surrounded by sweethearts, relatives and friends.

"The test of a man's philosophy of life," Chaplain Thomas said, "is what he does in a crisis . . . what do you consider necessary that you may really live? That is always an important question. It is particularly pertinent to the plans of men who are setting their courses for life.

"Figuratively speaking, you have spent the last four years going down a long corridor towards a door that opens into a world where men are testing by practical application their theories of what it means to live.

" . . . Now that these doors are swinging open, your teachers, parents and others could wish you a far happier and saner world than that into which you are about to go. But the fact remains that it is what it is this morning because human beings have made it so and if it is to be any better tomorrow it will be because you and your generation are not satisfied with living as it is directed in the present environment.

" . . . The heart of the world is crushed over the destructions of war . . . but there are still intangible treasures that will survive as long as man survives. No change of material possessions can rob a man of what he carries in his own soul."

There was no mention in today's communique of the sinking of the 33,950-ton British battleship Nelson, one of Britain's newest and mightiest dreadnaughts, announced yesterday by an authorized spokesman at a foreign press conference.

The German press carried stories of the reported sinking under New York dateline, quoting the American press.

The communique omitted also reports on activity on the main battlefront from the channel at Abbeville along the Somme and Aisne rivers to Montmedy.

But military observers were awaiting a tremendous offensive on this line, the road to Paris.

Varied Program To Mark Outdoor Concert Tomorrow By Fort Hill High Band

A varied program will feature the free outdoor concert to be presented at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night by the Fort Hill high school band at the Fort Hill stadium.

Several marches will be played, including Sousa's "U. S. Field Artillery March" and "Washington Post March," Wagner's "Under the Double Eagle" and Fucik's "Entry of the Gladiator."

One of the highlights of the program will be a symphonic band arrangement of Irving Berlin's popular patriotic composition, "God Bless America."

By request, the band will repeat its novelty rendition of "Coming Around the Mountain," and several other novelty numbers will also be presented. Popular selections will include "Alice Blue Gown."

The Band Parents will conduct a bake sale and sell refreshments.

Colored Woman Asks Divorce

Cruelty, desertion and non-support are charged by Mrs. Elinor Lee Simms, colored, in a suit docketed in ircuit court asking a partial divorce from Thomas Henry Simms, said to be part-owner of the Silver Grill, a North Mechanic street cafe.

The suit, filed by Attorney Elmer B. Gower, says that Simms treated his wife in "cruel and inhuman fashion," struck and beat her, deserted her, "comported himself with complete disregard of his martial obligations" and refuses to contribute adequately to her support. Payment of counsel fees and alimony is asked.

The couple was wed here July 6, 1936.

There Was Only One Thing Wrong with the Way This Horse Won. He Ran Too Fast

BY BERNARD METCALF

"Man you're crazy to try a stunt like that." It was George Booker who spoke.

"Listen, George," said James Simmons, "I know my business and I never overlook anything that may trip me up. There's $25,000 added money in that race and I don't intend to let it get away from me." Simmons took a vial from the hand of a third man present.

"This," he said holding it up before him, "is going to make a lot of money for me and it will also put my stable back on a paying basos."

"But, Jim," interrupted Booker, "you can't get away with a trick like that in a big race like the Carlton Handicap. Doping a horse to make him win is a thing of the past among smart race horse trainers."

"Maybe so," retorted Simmons, "but this is different."

"I can't see how it is," continued Booker, "a doped horse is a doped horse, and they now have a way to tell if a horse has been doped and it's fool-proof." At the last remark Simmons laughed loudly.

"Is that so?" He asked scornfully. Turning to the man from whom he had taken the vial he said. "Professor, I want you to explain everything about the stuff in this vial to George, he doesn't seem to get what I'm driving at."

"Well," drawled the self-style professor and chemist, "nowadays they have a certain test which is designed to determine if a horse has been given any kind of stimulant to make him win a race. Frankly, it is very good, but—" and he leaned forward in his chair as though to give his words greater emphasis—"I have perfected a chemical that cannot be detected even by this test. Believe me, George, it'll make a horse run the race of its life."

For the first time during the conversation George Booker seemed to understand. "I get it. When the horse finishes in the race there is no sign of a drug in his body."

"Bright boy," said Simmons, "that's exactly it."

"You see," continued the professor, "the heat of a horse's body during a race is sufficient to kill every trace of the chemical in his body, less than two minutes after the race is over. Therefore, when the test is made there is no trace of a drug of any kind."

The following day Booker and Simmons were busy making the rounds of everyone they thought might lend them money.

"Our only hope is Jack Lawson," said Booker. "If we don't get it from him we're sunk." Hastily they made their way to Lawson's place of business.

"Hello, fellows," Lawson greeted them in the confines of his office. "What can I do for you?"

"Lend me $1,000," replied Simmons bluntly.

"You ask for it like it was a glass of water."

"Maybe I do," Simmons retorted, "but I need it badly. I'll return it before the end of the week."

"You'll have to put up collateral for a loan of that size," said Lawson dryly.

"Collateral?" cried Simmons, "Haven't I always paid you when I made a loan?"

"Yes," relpied Lawson, "but you've never asked me for this much before. I'll have to have security."

Taken back by this turn of affairs, Simmons was silent. A long period of mental deliberation followed.

"I'll mortgage my stable to you for the $1,000," he said finally, "everything in it except my horse Keg O' Beer which runs in the Carleton Handicap day after tomorrow."

"I don't know anything about race horses," returned Lawson. "What could I do with a racing stable?"

"You don't have to know anything about race horses" said Simmons, "my stable is easily worth $9,000 and you know it. The only reason I'm asking for a mere $1,000 is because that's all I need. I'll pay you back in a few days."

"O. K. you win," said Lawson, as he reached for a pen to draw up the contract.

The day of the race had come. The Professor had prepared his special formula, the chemical with which Keg O' Beer, Simmons' horse, was to be doped. The horse was given the stimulant and appeared more spry than ever before. In the paddock Simmons was giving instructions to his jockey, Booker and the Professor were standing by.

"Martin," said Simmons to the boy, "I want you to be especially alert at the post today and get that horse away from there on time. I don't want you to use the whip unless, of course, it is absolutely necessary, which I don't think it will be." The last remark was made with a wink at Booker and the Professor.

The horses were at the post for the running of the Cartalon Handicap with $25,000 in added money as the prize. Amid the wild shouts of the jockeys, the horses broke from the barrier and were off to a perfect start. Although Simmons' horse did not assume the lead at the break, he was right up in the thick of contention fighting for it. Simmons and Becker were watching closely. The Professor's gaze seemed to be more concerned with the horse's reaction to the drug, than to the final outcome of the race. Suddenly Keg O' Beer's legs seemed to find new speed, he began to pass horses as though they were standing still. Coming into the stretch Martin, the jockey, could hardly control the horse as he passed the field. Simmons and Booker were dancing with glee. There was no doubt the Cartalon Handicap was now his as he increased his lead with every stride.

A low murmur ran through the crowd because Keg O' Beer was a long shot in the betting. A few minutes passed, during which the three men were too happy to notice anything around them. Suddenly a voice thundered from the loud speakers in the grandstands.

"The winner is disqualified!" it said. The three conspirators stopped in their tracks as though shot. In their joy at seeing Keg O' Beer come in first they failed to see a small sign reading "Inquiry," which was posted beside his number when it was posted as the winner.

The drug administered by the professor had done its work. In giving the horse added speed it also gave him added strength. He had therefore been disqualified for bumping into and interfering with other horses when he put on his burst of speed as the horses headed into the stretch.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Healthy Babies Put Van Winkle On His Mettle

Infants Should Sleep Practically All the Time, Doctor Says

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

The very young baby ought to sleep practically all the time when not being fed or bathed; at two or three months, nineteen to twenty hours; at six months he should sleep about twelve hours at night with only one regular interruption at night for feeding. He should also have, both morning and afternoon, a nap of about two hours each period. These naps, which may grow shorter, should continue at the age of a year, with a twelve-hour period at night.

Later, the morning nap may grow shorted and shorter when it finally will be abandoned at the age of two or so. Thereafter, until school interrupts, the afternoon nap is very essential.

Nothing so essential to good sleep habits as strict regularity. A variation of fifteen minutes may entirely upset them. A separate bed is important. There should be enough cotton pads and blankets so these articles need never be left wet after the baby's clothing has been changed.

Beware of Draughts

The temperature of the sleeping room should not be over sixty degrees, but well ventilated without draughts. The windows should be open all night, preferably with a canvas screen. Though there should be no disturbing noises, the infant will easily adapt himself to the usual home noises.

After several weeks, sleep out-of-doors may be desirable. Some recommend that the baby should not be out in temperature much below forty degrees. In a crowded city, a well ventilated room may be better. If you have followed such a program strictly and your baby does not go to sleep readily, or sleeps restlessly, consult your physician.

Be sure you do not allow yourself to train your baby to command you to take him up, to take him into bed with you, to lie down with him or beside him, to feed him off schedule, and the like. Most sleep problems in young children grow out of the human frailties of their parents—easy to say, hard to correct in ourselves and just as hard for others whom we advise, to correct. Always was, always will be. Good luck.

Mine-sealing Projects Helpful

Annual Discharge of Acid Waste Cut More than Million Tons

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—Mine-sealing projects in coal states bordering the Ohio river and its tributaries have cut to a little more than half a million tons the annual discharge of sulphuric acid waste into the Ohio river.

The figures were given in published records of hearings before a House appropriations sub-committee on work relief funds for the next fiscal year.

"Prior to the beginning of the WPA mine-sealing projects in October, 1935," Dr. J. W. Mountain, assistant surgeon general reported, "it was estimated that approximately 1,024,000 tons of sulphuric acid were discharged annually into the Ohio river and its tributaries from abandoned coal mines.

"Projects in operation since that time in Maryland, West Virginia and Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Tennessee, Alabama, Pennsylvania and Kentucky have reduced the amount of acid waste discharged from abandoned coal mines approximately 400,000 tons."

Dr. Mountin reported that 3,743 mines have been sealed under the program.

He explained that high proprotions of sulfuric acid are found in seepage from the abandoned mines, and when drained into streamy destroys the fish and renders the water practically unfit for use as a public water supply."

The acid, he added, was formed by oxygen cominging with moisture and iron sulphides and other sulphur compounds. He declared:

"Excluding the air from these abandoned coal mines prevents the formation of sulphuric acid; it thereby reduces the amount of acid in the streams that receive mine drainage water."

For some not to be martyred is a marytyrdom.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, on Thursday, June 6, 1940, the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, will hold their first annual B. & O. day in Cumberland, Maryland; a day set aside by them to focus the attention of the public upon the importance of the Railroad to Cumberland; and

WHEREAS, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company is an important unit in the economic life of Cumberland; its shops and facilities here a keynote of the Baltimore and Ohio system; the payroll of the Company an important contribution to the purchasing power of the City, and its employees numbered among our best citizens.

NOW, THEREFORE: As Mayor of the City of Cumberland, and on behalf of the members of the Council, I hereby proclaim Thursday, June 6, as B. & O. day in Cumberland, and I call upon the entire citizenry to cooperate to the extent they can, so that the day may be a memorable one. In honoring this great transportation Company, we honor ourselves; as this Railroad is the pioneer Railroad through the City, and we vividly recall the celebration at Halethorpe several years ago. We deem it an honor at this time, to aid this very worthy movement for the betterment of Cumberland, and for a more congenial feeling between the workers and the officials of the Railroad Company, in designating this B. & O. day. We sincerely trust that the visit of the officials to our City, the second in the State of Maryland, will be one that will be remembered by them with much pleasure and satisfaction.

Given under my hand and seal this 31st day of May, 1940, with the Corporate Seal of the City of Cumberland hereto attached.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF CUMBERLAND:

There Was Only One Thing Wrong with the Way This Horse Won. He Ran Too Fast

BY BERNARD METCALF

"Man you're crazy to try a stunt like that." It was George Booker who spoke.

"Listen, George," said James Simmons, "I know my business and I never overlook anything that may trip me up. There's $25,000 added money in that race and I don't intend to let it get away from me." Simmons took a vial from the hand of a third man present.

"This," he said holding it up before him, "is going to make a lot of money for me and it will also put my stable back on a paying basos."

"You Can't Get Away With a Trick Like That"

"Maybe so," retorted Simmons, "but this is different."

"I can't see how it is," continued Booker, "a doped horse is a doped horse, and they now have a way to tell if a horse has been doped and it's fool-proof." At the last remark Simmons laughed loudly.

"Is that so?" He asked scornfully. Turning to the man from whom he had taken the vial he said. "Professor, I want you to explain everything about the stuff in this vial to George, he doesn't seem to get what I'm driving at."

"Well," drawled the self-style professor and chemist, "nowadays they have a certain test which is designed to determine if a horse has been given any kind of stimulant to make him win a race. Frankly, it is very good, but—" and he leaned forward in his chair as though to give his words greater emphasis—"I have perfected a chemical that cannot be detected even by this test. Believe me, George, it'll make a horse run the race of its life."

For the first time during the conversation George Booker seemed to understand. "I get it. When the horse finishes in the race there is no sign of a drug in his body."

"Bright boy," said Simmons, "that's exactly it."

"You see," continued the professor, "the heat of a horse's body during a race is sufficient to kill every trace of the chemical in his body, less than two minutes after the race is over. Therefore, when the test is made there is no trace of a drug of any kind."

The following day Booker and Simmons were busy making the rounds of everyone they thought might lend them money.

"Our only hope is Jack Lawson," said Booker. "If we don't get it from him we're sunk." Hastily they made their way to Lawson's place of business.

"Hello, fellows," Lawson greeted them in the confines of his office. "What can I do for you?"

"Lend me $1,000," replied Simmons bluntly.

"You ask for it like it was a glass of water."

"Maybe I do," Simmons retorted, "but I need it badly. I'll return it before the end of the week."

"You'll have to put up collateral for a loan of that size," said Lawson dryly.

"Collateral?" cried Simmons, "Haven't I always paid you when I made a loan?"

"Yes," relpied Lawson, "but you've never asked me for this much before. I'll have to have security."

Taken back by this turn of affairs, Simmons was silent. A long period of mental deliberation followed.

"I'll mortgage my stable to you for the $1,000," he said finally, "everything in it except my horse Keg O' Beer which runs in the Carleton Handicap day after tomorrow."

"I don't know anything about race horses," returned Lawson. "What could I do with a racing stable?"

"You don't have to know anything about race horses" said Simmons, "my stable is easily worth $9,000 and you know it. The only reason I'm asking for a mere $1,000 is because that's all I need. I'll pay you back in a few days."

"O. K. you win," said Lawson, as he reached for a pen to draw up the contract.

The day of the race had come. The Professor had prepared his special formula, the chemical with which Keg O' Beer, Simmons' horse, was to be doped. The horse was given the stimulant and appeared more spry than ever before. In the paddock Simmons was giving instructions to his jockey. Booker and the Professor were standing by.

"Martin," said Simmons to the boy, "I want you to be especially alert at the post today and get that horse away from there on time. I don't want you to use the whip unless, of course, it is absolutely necessary, which I don't think it will be." The last remark was made with a wink at Booker and the Professor.

The horses were at the post for the running of the Cartalon Handicap with $25,000 in added money as the prize. Amid the wild shouts of the jockeys, the horses broke from the barrier and were off to a perfect start. Although Simmons' horse did not assume the lead at the break, he was right up in the thick of contention fighting for it. Simmons and Becker were watching closely. The Professor's gaze seemed to be more concerned with the horse's reaction to the drug, than to the final outcome of the race. Suddenly Keg O' Beer's legs seemed to find new speed, he began to pass horses as though they were standing still. Coming into the stretch Martin, the jockey, could hardly control the horse as he passed the field. Simmons and Booker were dancing with glee. There was no doubt the Cartalon Handicap was now his as he increased his lead with every stride.

A low murmur ran through the crowd because Keg O' Beer was a long shot in the betting. A few minutes passed, during which the three men were too happy to notice anything around them. Suddenly a voice thundered from the loud speakers in the grandstands.

"The winner is disqualified!" it said. The three conspirators stopped in their tracks as though shot. In their joy at seeing Keg O' Beer come in first they failed to see a small sign reading "Inquiry," which was posted beside his number when it was posted as the winner.

The drug administered by the professor had done its work. In giving the horse added speed it also gave him added strength. He had therefore been disqualified for bumping into and interfering with other horses when he put on his burst of speed as the horses headed into the stretch.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Tomorrow. Glamour and desperation meet at a bedside. "Reunion," by E Willis.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, on Thursday, June 6, 1940, the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, will hold their first annual B. & O. day in Cumberland, Maryland; a day set aside by them to focus the attention of the public upon the importance of the Railroad to Cumberland; and

WHEREAS, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company is an important unit in the economic life of Cumberland; its shops and facilities here a keynote of the Baltimore and Ohio system; the payroll of the Company an important contribution to the purchasing power of the City, and its employees numbered among our best citizens.

NOW, THEREFORE: As Mayor of the City of Cumberland, and on behalf of the members of the Council, I hereby proclaim Thursday, June 6, as B. & O. day in Cumberland, and I call upon the entire citizenry to cooperate to the extent they can, so that the day may be a memorable one. In honoring this great transportation Company, we honor ourselves; as this Railroad is the pioneer Railroad through the City, and we vividly recall the celebration at Halethorpe several years ago. We deem it an honor at this time, to aid this very worthy movement for the betterment of Cumberland, and for a more congenial feeling between the workers and the officials of the Railroad Company, in designating this B. & O. day. We sincerely trust that the visit of the officials to our City, the second in the State of Maryland, will be one that will be remembered by them with much pleasure and satisfaction.

Given under my hand and seal this 31st day of May, 1940, with the Corporate Seal of the City of Cumberland hereto attached.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF CUMBERLAND:
By: Harry Irvine
Mayor.

ATTEST:
S. E. Grimminger
City Clerk.

The Third Term Exceeds The War as a Menace

GREATER than the danger of any invasion of this continent by a foreign power as an immediate threat to American institutions and to a continuance of the personal liberties of the citizens of the United States, is the deepening shadow of a third term effort by President Roosevelt.

If successful, such an effort would effectively nullify the constitutional safeguards against executive usurpation and lead to a completely altered and restricted way of life for every American.

That there is to be such an effort no informed person now seriously questions. Indeed, if Mr. Roosevelt did not entertain such purpose he would openly have renounced it at a time when the international situation cries out for personal ambitions to give way to an unselfish national unity.

Every act and every policy of the New Deal dictator over the past seven years has pointed unerringly in the direction of increasing the president's personal powers to rule or ruin in the manner he and his radical advisers and bureaucratic puppet creations see fit, even to embracing the attempt, partially successful, of making the Supreme Court of the United States a political satrap.

Through the powers already gained by the proclaiming of a long succession of "national emergencies" the New Deal administration now wields almost complete control over the nation's monetary system, over wages and hours of labor, over communications, tariffs, banking, the growing or curtailment of crops, the securities markets and in many other fields.

Few can doubt that another New Deal endorsement at the polls in November would be accepted as a "mandate" to make these and additional powers sought by the executive, both an absolute and permanent grant.

No American participation in a foreign war, or a defensive war, would be necessary under such circumstances to achieve this Rooseveltian and New Deal objective of quasi-totalitarianism.

The members of the Republican party, no less than its leaders, foresee the perils of the situation but welcome the challenge it creates.

They believe that the time has come for the American people, once and for all, to determine whether we are to remain a nation of free people, under a representative form of government or whether we are to relinquish our individual rights and prerogatives as citizens, in favor of an adaptation of some imported ideology of government, such as is now blasting the lives and devastating the hopes and homes of millions of innocent and helpless men, women and children abroad.

This is the issue of the coming national election and no other issue can becloud it.

For 150 years the American people have bulwarked the constitution by adherence to the tradition against a third term for any president, as advised by George Washington, a precept forcefully reiterated by Jefferson, Jackson and other Democrats, as well as Republicans. The framers of the constitution itself were many of them in favor of a single term for the president but the sound judgment and common sense of the citizenry was finally relied upon to exercise restraint upon personal ambition.

In the case of Mr. Roosevelt, he has made it evident that he is not amenable to the dictates of self-restraint and his personal ambition and lust for power seem insatiable.

It, therefore, rests with the American people, war or no war, to reject this bid for unlimited tenure of office and for unlimited powers.

That they will do just this, and in summary fashion, at the November election cannot be doubted, unless we are to believe that we have lost completely our capacity and genius for self government and have abandoned all the ideals of democracy that, as a nation, we have cherished and fought for since the Declaration of Independence.

New Relief Spendings Should Be Earmarked

WITH the budget shot to pieces and the lid of the debt limit about to blow off, Congress may have to provide another huge fund for unemployment relief before adjournment.

The New Deal plan is to appropriate a lump sum to be scattered at the "discretion" of the president within a period of eight months, instead of stretching it out through a year. During most of the eight-month period the campaign will be on. Heretofore in election years the WPA has hired additional thousands of workers in pivotal states, and then dumped them overobard after election.

In Pennsylvania, Ohio, and other states which went Republican in spite of this New Deal misuse of public money, the WPA took reprisal by making excessive cuts in its rolls, thus attempting to inflame the public against Republican administrations on account of the ensuing distress.

Scandals in the WPA administration continue, as revealed by the investigation by the House subcommittee on Appropriations. A determined effort will be made by members of both parties to thwart the New Deal scheme to prostitute the WPA once more in an election year.

The only method by which political use of public money can be prevented is to earmark every dollar of the fund granted to WPA. Congress holds the purse-strings for the time being. It can dictate how the money shall be spent—whether for actual relief of distress or for political purposes.

One of the plans looks to diversion of about half a million of relief funds to the office of Government Reports, a New Deal propaganda agency. The House has already turned down a budget item of $1,055,000 which Mr. Roosevelt submitted for the perpetuation of this political agency with public money. To grant the sum now asked out of relief money would be, in literal truth, "playing politics with human misery."

Earmark every dollar of relief funds, gentlemen of Congress, or you will see much of it snatched from the needy and used for New Deal politics.

Defense Commission Should Have Definite Powers

DARLING'S CARTOON printed on this page further emphasizes the need heretofore pointed out by this newspaper for Congress to define the duties and powers of the new Commission on National Defense appointed by President Roosevelt, which body is really not what its name denotes.

This is for the reason that the council, or board, as appointed possesses only advisory powers. It is merely an adjunct to the statutory council, which comprises Secretaries Woodring, Edison, Ickes, Wallace, Hopkins and Perkins. Adding them to the New Dealers on the commission, who are Leon Henderson, Sidney Hillman, Chester Davis, William McReynolds and possibly Harriet Elliott, there is a total of ten or twelve New Dealers. There are only three on the commission who are not New Dealers, namely, Knudsen, Stettinius and Budd. Wherefore the set-up, although widely advertised as "non-political", is wholly a New Deal outfit, and only the New Dealers in it have any power.

Serious doubts are accordingly entertained that this advisory group—"curious and illogical," Gen. Hugh S. Johnson terms it—will function as it should function, and there is fear that in the circumstances it will repeat the failure of a like commission in 1917. For this reason, it is up to Congress to give the commission the authority it should have if it is to function properly. Otherwise it will serve merely as a smoke screen and be unable to check or offset continued New Deal blundering.

A Thought about Rum Running and Taxes

AN EXCHANGE notes that, although prohibition ended six years ago, the Internal Revenue Bureau is still making war on bootleggers, illicit distillers and rum runners. The trouble is not confined to the mountain regions, traditional home of the moonshiners, as the two largest booze conspiracy cases since prohibition broke only the other day in New York and Oklahoma.

In Oklahoma, 169 men were indicted for conspiracy to take liquor into the dry states of Oklahoma and Kansas—a federal offense under the liquor law enforcement act of 1936. In New York, 122 men were indicted on charges of distributing 400,000 gallons of alcohol about New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania over a ten-month period, dodging $1,600,000 in taxes thereby.

The reminder enforces the thought that if congressmen plaster too heavy additional taxes on wines, liquors and beers, in coping with the expenses of the enlarged national defense program, the inevitable result will be a big increase in illicit manufacture and sale—and purchase. That, of course, would entail further expense in the work of running down the violators. Thus, revenue may be lost instead of gained. The thought again impresses the need of fiscal sanity in government, something made even more necessary by the new burdens we are assuming.

Oklahoma wonders why the government cuts down trees in the Grand River basin while planting them on the Cimarron dunes. As FDR says, we are on our way, and in all directions.

To avoid chronic illness, says a physician, we shouldn't worry over the stock market. To which ninety-nine per cent of us reply: "What stock market?"

Henry Ford says he could make a thousand airplanes a day himself, but who would go up in them?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

My father told me there's a Fool-Killer in this world . . . and I know he told me true . . . I used to imagine what a Fool-Killer looked like. He had long, skinny arms that could reach for miles. He had eyes that could see through walls and around corners. He wore a black cloak that shrouded his face. When he laughed he sent a ghastly chortle across the world. Charming fellow, that Fool-Killer.

Marshall Maslin

If you played follow-the-leader and took stupid chances, the Fool-Killer would see you and get you, sure as anything. If you went swimming where there were deep and treacherous holes, the Fool-Killer would pull you under. And if you walked too close to the heels of a wicked horse, he would know it before the horse did and put a bug in its ear.

For some time I believed in him more devoutly than I did in my Guardian Angel, but gradually my faith faded away. I had taken a few silly chances and nothing had happened. I had seen other boys doing dangerous things and the Fool-Killer hadn't gotten them either . . . So I became an unbeliever and stayed that way for ten or fifteen years, until I discovered that I didn't know as much as I thought I did . . . But now, again, I believe there's a Fool-Killer.

There IS a strange spirit abroad in the world that punishes fools more sternly than it punishes villains. It seems to know that most of our crimes are sin of stupidity rather than of wickedness. We lose our friends through forgetfulness; we injure people through thoughtlessness; we are cruel because we cannot imagine how much hurt it is possible to do in this life.

We read books and think that the written wisdom has percolated to our hearts. We hear wise men talk and we imagine that our ears can make us wise, too. We are so often Fools when we think we know the truth, and the Fool-Killer waits for us at every crisis and at every casual moment in our lives.

It's sad, but it's true. I believe in that Fool-Killer, and YOU had better believe in him, too.

Spanish Swindle Has a Long Life, Augen Recalls

By EDWIN C. HILL

Mr. Hymie Augen has been making some gloomy observations lately about the gullibility of Americans, as distinguished from other peoples.

Edwin C. Hill

He is afraid we will never learn. Most of us shouldn't be let out after dark. He wonders if we shouldn't have a law that the victim of a fraud should be sent to prison with the defrauder. The least we could do, thinks Mr. Augen, would be to put in the public schools demonstrations of the sanded deck, the long roll and the needled roulette wheel, so the public would know how to protect itself.

What fills Mr. Augen with both nostalgia and disgust is this news from Washington about the State department warning all citizens to look out for the "Spanish swindle," as it is worked in Mexico. Our unsuspecting citizen gets a letter from a Mexican "attorney," in behalf of a client who is in jail as the result of a conspiracy to defraud him of an heritage or perhaps some hidden treasure. If the citizen can contribute to procuring the victim's release, he will share in the sequestered or impounded fortune.

Growing up around Red Hook, Gowanus Creek and the Brooklyn Navy Yard, meeting seafaring men and less diligent and reputable members of our floating population, Mr. Augen knew all about this Spanish swindle when he was a small boy. He thought everybody else knew, and he's amazed and indignant over our national backwardness.

x x x

The Old Satchel Trick

"Now you take the old satchel trick," said Mr. Augen. "I remember—"

"I thought you were talking about the Spanish swindle," I interrupted. But there was no stopping him. He had to have it his way.

"As I was saying, this satchel trick was meant for foreigners, mostly Italians. But Italians are smart. After they had been over here a while they began to read the papers and this satchel trick was just a laugh. It was that way with the money machine and things like that. It got so they couldn't take a hick from those small-time countries the way they used to. The worst of it was they quit working on each other and started clipping Americans and it don't look like we were as smart as they were.

Almost Homesick

"It almost makes me homesick to hear of this Spanish swindle again. Whenever there was a slick-looking gent come around where we were with a big roll we used to say maybe he has been down home in Mexico working that old Spanish swindle that my grandfather had told me about. That was always a good bet, and maybe he was up here making a list of people that was fat as a seal and would feel all busted up about some poor prisoner and want to help him get loose and get his fortune, or maybe get a cut himself.

"That's how it is with saps. They will be one of two kinds. They will be the kind that always wants to do good and save somebody or something, or they will be the percentage guys that when somebody says if we can just grease this judge or something you'll get yours, they reach for their poke. That old Spanish swindle gets them both. The one that worked it the most in my day was slick, good-looking guy who went by the name of Tulio Conchez, although that wasn't his real name. He said he did best with nice guys who didn't like to see anybody robbed and put in jail, etc. It makes me sad to think that people could be such saps."

Ants in Our Pants

I asked Mr. Augen why Americans should be any more gullible than any other people. "Haven't we always been holding the bags for somebody?" he asked. "Haven't we been rooked and gouged and double keel-hauled and come back for more?"

"But, why?" I insisted.

"Maybe we had it too easy," he said. "Maybe we was just innocent and trying to do good. Maybe we had ants in our pants and couldn't mind our own business. You tell me why." The question went into the suspense file.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THIS IS NO TIME TO LOSE CONFIDENCE

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 2—The aim of this column today is to make clear one effect of events in Europe on the United States. The effect here dealt with is one of very many. Though the phase here described is small, it has a most serious bearing on the future.

Mark Sullivan

To begin, go for a moment to Amsterdam in Holland. There, the week the Germans set up whatever is to be their form of government of Holland for the immediate future. Since the actual conquest of Holland, early in May, a German military official has had sole authority. Beginning this week the authority is to be divided between a German military and a German civil official. The nature of Germany's government of Holland is not made fully clear in the despatches. Apparently many of the former Holland laws are to be kept in effect for the time being. In the despatch there is a significant phrase, "commercial relations with the Reich."

However, the precise nature of Germany's dominion over Holland during the indefinite future is not material. It is enough that Germany is in possession of Holland, can do with Holland what she wishes.

Gets Dependencies

Now come across the ocean. In the West Indies and South America are some dependencies of Holland, Dutch Guiana and some small islands. Strictly, we must say former dependencies of Holland. Since Germany has by arms acquired dominion over Holland in Europe, she has by that same act acquired rights over Holland dependencies on this side of the ocean (and elsewhere). Germany's right over the Dutch dependencies in our hemisphere are identical with the rights over Holland in Europe. The difference, for the present, is that Germany cannot exercise her rights in the West Indies—she cannot take actual physical possession of this Dutch territory over here as she has of Holland.

The reason Germany cannot, for the present, take physical possession of the Dutch dependencies in the West Indies, is that she cannot get to them—because the British and French are still in control of the sea.

Can Take Them if Winner

But if Germany wins the war, if she completely conquers British and France, she can then take physical possession of the Dutch territory in the West Indies. She can run up the Swastika flag there. She can set up a German government there. She will own these West Indies islands, as completely as she owns Berlin. She can do what she wishes there. She can fortify these West Indies islands. She can set up a naval base there. She can set up an airplane base there.

Now we come to the concern of the United States. The United States cannot permit Germany to take possession of these West Indies islands. We cannot permit it because it would be a violation of our century-old Monroe doctrine. We cannot permit it because those islands are close to the Panaman canal. We cannot permit it because Germany, once in possession of those West Indies islands, could make, or at least attempt, any sort of degree of conquest she chooses in the Western Hemisphere. That we cannot permit Germany to take possession of this Holland territory in the Western Hemisphere is conceded by practically every one.

Some Dissenters

Not quite every one. There are some dissenters. These dissenters interpose various "maybes." They say, "maybe" Germany would not want to expand her power in the Western Hemisphere. They say "maybe" Germany would not wish to attack, or interfere with, the interests of the United States. They say "maybe." Germany will give us assurances that she will not, as the phrase is, "bother the United States." They say "maybe" the contingency will not arise—maybe Germany won't actually conquer England and France; maybe the war will end in a treaty by which Germany will not undertake to take possession of territory in the Western Hemisphere.

But "maybe" is wishful thinking. "Maybe" is hardly a sound basis for a national policy. Most Americans would prefer to look the problem in the face, as it stands.

What to do about it? Shall we go down there right away and take possession of those islands and territory, before Germany undertakes to assert her possession? That would entail definie consequences, for that would be in effect an act of war against Germany. Shall we wait until the contingency actually arises, until what lawyers call the "overt act," until Germany actually takes physical possession of those islands?

May Act With Force

If we wait until then, Germany may act with force. Germany may by that time have conquered Britain, and have possession of the British navy. If Germany thus has a powerful navy and if we then undertake to prevent her from taking possession of that territory, we will in that case be obliged to do so with our navy. It will take all our navy. And with our navy busy there, what might Japan do in the Pacific?

I have told this problem in terms of a very small example, the tiny possessions of Holland in the West Indies and South America. Exactly the same problem is ahead of us in extremely large terms. What is said about these small Dutch dependencies applies equally to the quite large dependencies of Britain and France in the Western Hemisphere, including Canada. If Britain and France are completely conquered by Germany, Germany will have, over all the British and French portions of the Western Hemisphere, the same rights which today she has over the Holland dependencies.

The inescapable fact is that the United States has an immense interest in seeing that Germany does not conquer England and France. From that inescapable fact arises an inference equally inescapable. Look it in the face, reader.

McCurdy Is Upheld by Federation

Baltimore Labor Union Group Declares He Has Performed Duties Capably

Editor The Cumberland News:

It has been brought to our attention, through an article appearing in the Baltimore Sun under date of Wednesday, May 29, that the so-called Western Maryland Industrial Union Council, which is trying to disrupt the bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland, is complaining of Joseph P. McCurdy occupying a position as a member of the Maryland State Unemployment Compensation Board.

This complaint is made solely because Mr. McCurdy is the head of a bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland and because his appointment was endorsed by the unanimous vote of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, which is composed of 104 bona fide labor organizations. The duties of his office are being performed as capably as any similar board in the country and the labor movement of Baltimore sincerely appreciates Governor O'Conor's reappointment of Joseph P. McCurdy. We know the governor has made no mistake.

In Mr. McCurdy's reappointment we know that the working people of the state of Maryland will have no legitimate complaint. We feel that the attack on Mr. McCurdy is not in the best interests of the working people of the state of Maryland but is a purely personal one on the part of a few disgruntled would-be labor leaders in Maryland only.

Very truly yours,
BALTIMORE FEDERATION OF LABOR.

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

It is a good sign that job opportunities for college graduates this spring are more numerous than a year ago. In its annual spring survey, covering 154 colleges and universities, one life insurance company has found that calls for graduates are more numerous than a year ago, and that in turn topped 1938. Most of the colleges report certain placement of seventy-five per cent and above, and many are confident of 100 per cent.

The demand for trained engineers in the war industries accounts for some of this increase, no doubt. But the fact that young men who have specifically trained for places in industry are getting them is encouraging, for it removes just that many from the all-too-long lines of ambitious young men who have been facing a future without clear opportunity. That is the one thing, ultimately, that the nation cannot stand.

Authority Seen As Requisite for Plane Production

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 2 — Could Henry Ford produce 1,000 planes a day at River Rouge? He could if all designs were alike, adapted to present production methods and there were no constant design changes. The success of Henry Ford in producing 10,000 automobiles a day was his invention of uniformity of design and interchangeability of parts. Under existing conditions of flux and uncertainty, Mr. Ford could no more produce 1,000 planes a day than he could produce 10,000.

Henry Ford

There is another terrible bottleneck—impossible military standards of perfection which take no stock of our facilities for production. That stopped us over and over again in the World war. There could be the same precision in civilian production. But the commercial producer has to consider two other factors—commercial price and adaptability to existing facilities for mass production. The naval and military brass hat is apt to ignore this entirely.

Fault Discerned

Henry Ford, in creating the first Tin Lizzie that put America on wheels, had the genius to see exactly this fault. He built a car that would do all that was required of it in ninety per cent of cases, but which sacrificed no more to the theoretical perfection than was necessary to do the work required and met the requirement of price and production. Charlie Nash did the same thing. On this beginning we have gradually moved closer to automotive perfection at a price low enough and production high enough to permit general use.

It is quite clear that exactly these American principles have given the Germans overwhelming command of the air. They build a plane with no highly perfumed niceties, but good enough to do its deadly work and remain 100 hours in the air without overhauling. We build for 500 hours without repair and with a collection of niceties that multiply costs and divide production. It is increasingly doubtful whether the increased perfection in design produces enough increased efficiency to justify it—especially considering its fatal slowing up.

An Example

For example, an automobile "tolerance" (which means the margin allowed short of blueprint perfection) is 1/1000 of an inch. Our aircraft designers call for 1/10,000. That makes an almost impossible production problem. A chrome nickel aircraft crankshafe forging starts out at 860 pounds and is first hogged off, then machined off and finally polished off to seventy-four pounds — to the precision of an astronomical lens. It sounds absurd. Is it necessary? I don't know. To me after heartbreaking experiences with God awful tolerances and blunders in ordnance design and specifications of guns, shells and machine guns in the World war, it seems incredible.

Knudsen a Genius

I don't know, but I'll bet Bill Knudsen knows. As a machinist, he is a genius. As an adept at getting the boys around a table and composing differences between perfectionists of the engineering department, and salesmen who want the stuff "day before yesterday" and in quantity, he ought to get agreement in this similar problem.

He can do this if he has full authority and the loyal constant and aggressive support of the president. Mr. Rosevelt never gave that to anybody in his life. Knudsen can't do it at all if he has to filter through or be short-circuited by Mr. Hopkins and Muddom Sec, who wouldn't know the difference between a "tolerance" and the "toleration" of permitting Fifth Column Communist to flourish.

Most Important

It is perhaps the most important element in our deadly problem. Big Indian football player, Jim Thorpe, used to say to fine young opposing tacklers, "Better let old Jim run." If they didn't, the stretcher bearers usually came running out. Mr. Knudsen is not so violent. He is the most modest and least assertive of men. But if they don't "let old Bill run", he won't get the quick production we need so desperately and the failure of this pussyfooting, political, inadequate, stop-gap, makeshift industrial control will lick this administration in November.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Bennett Clark, Democrat, of Missouri

Simply because an emergency has developed abroad, are we going to turn over lump sums to the same outfit of bunglers that apparently wasted the $6,000,000,000 we spent, without finding out what it is to be spent for, and whether we are to have any better defense after we spend the additional money than we now have?

If successful, such an effort would effectively nullify the constitutional safeguards against executive usurpation and lead to a completely altered and restricted way of life for every American.

That there is to be such an effort no informed person now seriously questions. Indeed, if Mr. Roosevelt did not entertain such purpose he would openly have renounced it at a time when the international situation cries out for personal ambitions to give way to an unselfish national unity.

Every act and every policy of the New Deal dictator over the past seven years has pointed unerringly in the direction of increasing the president's personal powers to rule or ruin in the manner he and his radical advisers and bureaucratic puppet creations see fit, even to embracing the attempt, partially successful, of making the Supreme Court of the United States a political satrap.

Through the powers already gained by the proclaiming of a long succession of "national emergencies" the New Deal administration now wields almost complete control over the nation's monetary system, over wages and hours of labor, over communications, tariffs, banking, the growing or curtailment of crops, the securities markets and in many other fields.

Few can doubt that another New Deal endorsement at the polls in November would be accepted as a "mandate" to make these and additional powers sought by the executive, both an absolute and permanent grant.

No American participation in a foreign war, or a defensive war, would be necessary under such circumstances to achieve this Rooseveltian and New Deal objective of quasi-totalitarianism.

The members of the Republican party, no less than its leaders, foresee the perils of the situation but welcome the challenge it creates.

They believe that the time has come for the American people, once and for all, to determine whether we are to remain a nation of free people, under a representative form of government or whether we are to relinquish our individual rights and prerogatives as citizens, in favor of an adaptation of some imported ideology of government, such as is now blasting the lives and devastating the hopes and homes of millions of innocent and helpless men, women and children abroad.

This is the issue of the coming national election and no other issue can becloud it.

For 150 years the American people have bulwarked the constitution by adherence to the tradition against a third term for any president, as advised by George Washington, a precept forcefully reiterated by Jefferson, Jackson and other Democrats, as well as Republicans. The framers of the constitution itself were many of them in favor of a single term for the president but the sound judgment and common sense of the citizenry was finally relied upon to exercise restraint upon personal ambition.

In the case of Mr. Roosevelt, he has made it evident that he is not amenable to the dictates of self-restraint and his personal ambition and lust for power seem insatiable.

It, therefore, rests with the American people, war or no war, to reject this bid for unlimited tenure of office and for unlimited powers.

That they will do just this, and in summary fashion, at the November election cannot be doubted, unless we are to believe that we have lost completely our capacity and genius for self government and have abandoned all the ideals of democracy that, as a nation, we have cherished and fought for since the Declaration of Independence.

New Relief Spendings Should Be Earmarked

WITH the budget shot to pieces and the lid of the debt limit about to blow off, Congress may have to provide another huge fund for unemployment relief before adjournment.

The New Deal plan is to appropriate a lump sum to be scattered at the "discretion" of the president within a period of eight months, instead of stretching it out through a year. During most of the eight-month period the campaign will be on. Heretofore in election years the WPA has hired additional thousands of workers in pivotal states, and then dumped them overobard after election.

In Pennsylvania, Ohio, and other states which went Republican in spite of this New Deal misuse of public money, the WPA took reprisal by making excessive cuts in its rolls, thus attempting to inflame the public against Republican administrations on account of the ensuing distress.

Scandals in the WPA administration continue, as revealed by the investigation by the House subcommittee on Appropriations. A determined effort will be made by members of both parties to thwart the New Deal scheme to prostitute the WPA once more in an election year.

The only method by which political use of public money can be prevented is to earmark every dollar of the fund granted to WPA. Congress holds the purse-strings for the time being. It can dictate how the money shall be spent—whether for actual relief of distress or for political purposes.

One of the plans looks to diversion of about half a million of relief funds to the office of Government Reports, a New Deal propaganda agency. The House has already turned down a budget item of $1,055,000 which Mr. Roosevelt submitted for the perpetuation of this political agency with public money. To grant the sum now asked out of relief money would be, in literal truth, "playing politics with human misery."

Earmark every dollar of relief funds, gentlemen of Congress, or you will see much of it snatched from the needy and used for New Deal politics.

Defense Commission Should Have Definite Powers

DARLING'S CARTOON printed on this page further emphasizes the need heretofore pointed out by this newspaper for Congress to define the duties and powers of the new Commission on National Defense appointed by President Roosevelt, which body is really not what its name denotes.

This is for the reason that the council, or board, as appointed possesses only advisory powers. It is merely an adjunct to the statutory council, which comprises Secretaries Woodring, Edison, Ickes, Wallace, Hopkins and Perkins. Adding them to the New Dealers on the commission, who are Leon Henderson, Sidney Hillman, Chester Davis, William McReynolds and possibly Harriet Elliott, there is a total of ten or twelve New Dealers. There are only three on the commission who are not New Dealers, namely, Knudsen, Stettinius and Budd. Wherefore the set-up, although widely advertised as "non-political", is wholly a New Deal outfit, and only the New Dealers in it have any power.

Serious doubts are accordingly entertained that this advisory group—"curious and illogical," Gen. Hugh S. Johnson terms it—will function as it should function, and there is fear that in the circumstances it will repeat the failure of a like commission in 1917. For this reason, it is up to Congress to give the commission the authority it should have if it is to function properly. Otherwise it will serve merely as a smoke screen and be unable to check or offset continued New Deal blundering.

A Thought about Rum Running and Taxes

AN EXCHANGE notes that, although prohibition ended six years ago, the Internal Revenue Bureau is still making war on bootleggers, illicit distillers and rum runners. The trouble is not confined to the mountain regions, traditional home of the moonshiners, as the two largest booze conspiracy cases since prohibition broke only the other day in New York and Oklahoma.

In Oklahoma, 169 men were indicted for conspiracy to take liquor into the dry states of Oklahoma and Kansas—a federal offense under the liquor law enforcement act of 1936. In New York, 122 men were indicted on charges of distributing 400,000 gallons of alcohol about New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania over a ten-month period, dodging $1,600,000 in taxes thereby.

The reminder enforces the thought that if congressmen plaster too heavy additional taxes on wines, liquors and beers, in coping with the expenses of the enlarged national defense program, the inevitable result will be a big increase in illicit manufacture and sale—and purchase. That, of course, would entail further expense in the work of running down the violators. Thus, revenue may be lost instead of gained. The thought again impresses the need of fiscal sanity in government, something made even more necessary by the new burdens we are assuming.

Oklahoma wonders why the government cuts down trees in the Grand River basin while planting them on the Cimarron dunes. As FDR says, we are on our way, and in all directions.

To avoid chronic illness, says a physician, we shouldn't worry over the stock market. To which ninety-nine per cent of us reply: "What stock market?"

Henry Ford says he could make a thousand airplanes a day himself, but who would go up in them?

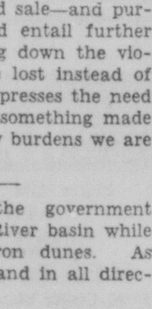
By MARSHALL MASLIN

My father told me there's a Fool-Killer in this world . . . and I know he told me true . . . I used to imagine what a Fool-Killer looked like. He had long, skinny arms that could reach for miles. He had eyes that could see through walls and around corners. He wore a black cloak that shrouded his face. When he laughed he sent a ghastly chortle across the world. Charming fellow, that Fool-Killer.



Marshall Maslin

If you played follow-the-leader and took stupid chances, the Fool-Killer would see you and get you, sure as anything. If you went swimming where there were deep and treacherous holes, the Fool-Killer would pull you under. And if you walked too close to the heels of a wicked horse, he would know it before the horse did and put a bug in its ear.

For some time I believed in him more devoutly than I did in my Guardian Angel, but gradually my faith faded away. I had taken a few silly chances and nothing had happened. I had seen other boys doing dangerous things and the Fool-Killer hadn't gotten them either . . . So I became an unbeliever and stayed that way for ten or fifteen years, until I discovered that I didn't know as much as I thought I did . . . But now, again, I believe there's a Fool-Killer.

There IS a strange spirit abroad in the world that punishes fools more sternly than it punishes villains. It seems to know that most of our crimes are sin of stupidity rather than of wickedness. We lose our friends through forgetfulness; we injure people through thoughtlessness; we are cruel because we cannot imagine how much hurt it is possible to do in this life.

We read books and think that the written wisdom has percolated to our hearts. We hear wise men talk and we imagine that our ears can make us wise, too. We are so often Fools when we think we know the truth, and the Fool-Killer waits for us at every crisis and at every casual moment in our lives.

It's sad, but it's true. I believe in that Fool-Killer, and YOU had better believe in him, too.

Spanish Swindle Has a Long Life, Augen Recalls

By EDWIN C. HILL

Mr. Hymie Augen has been making some gloomy observations lately about the gullibility of Americans, as distinguished from other peoples.

Edwin C. Hill

He is afraid we will never learn. Most of us shouldn't be let out after dark. He wonders if we shouldn't have a law that the victim of a fraud should be sent to prison with the defrauder. The least we could do, thinks Mr. Augen, would be to put in the public schools demonstrations of the sanded deck, the long roll and the needled roulette wheel, so the public would know how to protect itself.

What fills Mr. Augen with both nostalgia and disgust is this news from Washington about the State department warning all citizens to look out for the "Spanish swindle," as it is worked in Mexico. Our unsuspecting citizen gets a letter from a Mexican "attorney," in behalf of a client who is in jail as the result of a conspiracy to defraud him of an heritage or perhaps some hidden treasure. If the citizen can contribute to procuring the victim's release, he will share in the sequestered or impounded fortune.

Growing up around Red Hook, Gowanus Creek and the Brooklyn Navy Yard, meeting seafaring men and less diligent and reputable members of our floating population, Mr. Augen knew all about this Spanish swindle when he was a small boy. He thought everybody else knew, and he's amazed and indignant over our national backwardness.

x x x

The Old Satchel Trick

"Now you take the old satchel trick," said Mr. Augen. "I remember—"

"I thought you were talking about the Spanish swindle," I interrupted. But there was no stopping him. He had to have it his way.

"As I was saying, this satchel trick was meant for foreigners, mostly Italians. But Italians are smart. After they had been over here a while they began to read the papers and this satchel trick was just a laugh. It was that way with the money machine and things like that. It got so they couldn't take a hick from those small-time countries the way they used to. The worst of it was they quit working on each other and started clipping Americans and it don't look like we were as smart as they were.

Almost Homesick

"It almost makes me homesick to hear of this Spanish swindle again. Whenever there was a slick-looking gent come around where we were with a big roll we used to say maybe he has been down home in Mexico working that old Spanish swindle that my grandfather had told me about. That was always a good bet, and maybe he was up here making a list of people that was fat as a seal and would feel all busted up about some poor prisoner and want to help him get loose and get his fortune, or maybe get a cut himself.

"That's how it is with saps. They will be one of two kinds. They will be the kind that always wants to do good and save somebody or something, or they will be the percentage guys that when somebody says if we can just grease this judge or something you'll get yours, they reach for their poke. That old Spanish swindle gets them both. The one that worked it the most in my day was slick, good-looking guy who went by the name of Tulio Conchez, although that wasn't his real name. He said he did best with nice guys who didn't like to see anybody robbed and put in jail, etc. It makes me sad to think that people could be such saps."

x x x

Ants in Our Pants

I asked Mr. Augen why Americans should be any more gullible than any other people. "Haven't we always been holding the bags for somebody?" he asked. "Haven't we been rooked and gouged and double keel-hauled and come back for more?"

"But, why?" I insisted.

"Maybe we had it too easy," he said. "Maybe we was just innocent and trying to do good. Maybe we had ants in our pants and couldn't mind our own business. You tell me why." The question went into the suspense file.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THIS IS NO TIME TO LOSE CONFIDENCE

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 2—The aim of this column today is to make clear one effect of events in Europe on the United States. The effect here dealt with is one of very many. Though the phase here described is small, it has a most serious bearing on the future.

Mark Sullivan

To begin, go for a moment to Amsterdam in Holland. There, the week the Germans set up whatever is to be their form of government of Holland for the immediate future. Since the actual conquest of Holland, early in May, a German military official has had sole authority. Beginning this week the authority is to be divided between a German military and a German civil official. The nature of Germany's government of Holland is not made fully clear in the despatches. Apparently many of the former Holland laws are to be kept in effect for the time being. In the despatch there is a significant phrase, "commercial relations with the Reich."

However, the precise nature of Germany's dominion over Holland during the indefinite future is not material. It is enough that Germany is in possession of Holland, can do with Holland what she wishes.

Gets Dependencies

Now come across the ocean. In the West Indies and South America are some dependencies of Holland, Dutch Guiana and some small islands. Strictly, we must say former dependencies of Holland. Since Germany has by arms acquired dominion over Holland in Europe, she has by that same act acquired rights over Holland dependencies on this side of the ocean (and elsewhere). Germany's right over the Dutch dependencies in our hemisphere are identical with the rights over Holland in Europe. The difference, for the present, is that Germany cannot exercise her rights in the West Indies—she cannot take actual physical possession of this Dutch territory over here as she has of Holland.

The reason Germany cannot, for the present, take physical possession of the Dutch dependencies in the West Indies, is that she cannot get to them—because the British and French are still in control of the sea.

Can Take Them if Winner

But if Germany wins the war, if she completely conquers British and France, she can then take physical possession of the Dutch territory in the West Indies. She can run up the Swastika flag there. She can set up a German government there. She will own these West Indies islands, as completely as she owns Berlin. She can do what she wishes there. She can fortify these West Indies islands. She can set set up a naval base there. She can set up an airplane base there.

Now we come to the concern of the United States. The United States cannot permit Germany to take possession of these West Indies islands. We cannot permit it because it would be a violation of our century-old Monroe doctrine. We cannot permit it because those islands are close to the Panaman canal. We cannot permit it because Germany, once in possession of those West Indies islands, could make, or at least attempt, any sort of degree of conquest she chooses in the Western Hemisphere. That we cannot permit Germany to take possession of this Holland territory in the Western Hemisphere is conceded by practically every one.

Some Dissenters

Not quite every one. There are some dissenters. These dissenters interpose various "maybes." They say, "maybe" Germany would not want to expand her power in the Western Hemisphere. They say "maybe" Germany would not wish to attack, or interfere with, the interests of the United States. They say "maybe." Germany will give us assurances that she will not, as the phrase is, "bother the United States." They say "maybe" the contingency will not arise—maybe Germany won't actually conquer England and France; maybe the war will end in a treaty by which Germany will not undertake to take possession of territory in the Western Hemisphere.

But "maybe" is wishful thinking. "Maybe" is hardly a sound basis for a national policy. Most Americans would prefer to look the problem in the face, as it stands.

What to do about it? Shall we go down there right away and take possession of those islands and territory, before Germany undertakes to assert her possession? That would entail definie consequences, for that would be in effect an act of war against Germany. Shall we wait until the contingency actually arises, until what lawyers call the "overt act," until Germany actually takes physical possession of those islands?

May Act With Force

If we wait until then, Germany may act with force. Germany may by that time have conquered Britain, and have possession of the British navy. If Germany thus has a powerful navy, and if we then undertake to prevent her from taking possession of that territory, we will in that case be obliged to do so with our navy. It will take all our navy. And with our navy busy there, what might Japan do in the Pacific?

I have told this problem in terms of a very small example, the tiny possessions of Holland in the West Indies and South America. Exactly the same problem is ahead of us in extremely large terms. What is said about these small Dutch dependencies applies equally to the quite large dependencies of Britain and France in the Western Hemisphere, including Canada. If Britain and France are completely conquered by Germany, Germany will have, over all the British and French portions of the Western Hemisphere, the same rights which today she has over the Holland dependencies.

The inescapable fact is that the United States has an immense interest in seeing that Germany does not conquer England and France. From that inescapable fact arises an inference equally inescapable. Look it in the face, reader.

McCurdy Is Upheld by Federation

Baltimore Labor Union Group Declares He Has Performed Duties Capably

Editor The Cumberland News:

It has been brought to our attention, through an article appearing in the Baltimore Sun under date of Wednesday, May 29, that the so-called Western Maryland Industrial Union Council, which is trying to disrupt the bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland, is complaining of Joseph P. McCurdy occupying a position as a member of the Maryland State Unemployment Compensation Board.

This complaint is made solely because Mr. McCurdy is the head of a bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland and because his appointment was endorsed by the unanimous vote of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, which is composed of 104 bona fide labor organizations. The duties of his office are being performed as capably as any similar board in the country and the labor movement of Baltimore sincerely appreciates Governor O'Conor's reappointment of Joseph P. McCurdy. We know the governor has made no mistake.

In Mr. McCurdy's reappointment we know that the working people of the state of Maryland will have no legitimate complaint. We feel that the attack on Mr. McCurdy is not in the best interests of the working people of the state of Maryland but is a purely personal one on the part of a few disgruntled would-be labor leaders in Maryland only.

Very truly yours,
BALTIMORE FEDERATION OF LABOR.

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

It is a good sign that job opportunities for college graduates this spring are more numerous than a year ago. In its annual spring survey, covering 154 colleges and universities, one life insurance company has found that calls for graduates are more numerous than a year ago, and that in turn topped 1938. Most of the colleges report certain placement of seventy-five per cent and above, and many are confident of 100 per cent.

The demand for trained engineers in the war industries accounts for some of this increase, no doubt. But the fact that young men who have specifically trained for places in industry are getting them is encouraging, for it removes just that many from the all-too-long lines of ambitious young men who have been facing a future without clear opportunity. That is the one thing, ultimately, that the nation cannot stand.

Authority Seen As Requisite for Plane Production

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 2 — Could Henry Ford produce 1,000 planes a day at River Rouge? He could if all designs were alike, adapted to present production methods and there were no constant design changes. The success of Henry Ford in producing 10,000 automobiles a day was his invention of uniformity of design and interchangeability of parts. Under existing conditions of flux and uncertainty, Mr. Ford could no more produce 1,000 planes a day than he could produce 10,000.

Henry Ford

There is another terrible bottleneck—impossible military standards of perfection which take no stock of our facilities for production. That stopped us over and over again in the World war. There could be the same precision in civilian production. But the commercial producer has to consider two other factors—commercial price and adaptability to existing facilities for mass production. The naval and military brass hat is apt to ignore this entirely.

Fault Discerned

Henry Ford, in creating the first Tin Lizzie that put America on wheels, had the genius to see exactly this fault. He built a car that would do all that was required of it in ninety per cent of cases, but which sacrificed no more to the theoretical perfection than was necessary to do the work required and met the requirement of price and production. Charlie Nash did the same thing. On this beginning we have gradually moved closer to automotive perfection at a price low enough and production high enough to permit general use.

It is quite clear that exactly these American principles have given the Germans overwhelming command of the air. They build a plane with no highly perfumed niceties, but good enough to do its deadly work and remain 100 hours in the air without overhauling. We build for 500 hours without repair and with a collection of niceties that multiply costs and divide production. It is increasingly doubtful whether the increased perfection in design produces enough increased efficiency to justify it—especially considering its fatal slowing up.

An Example

For example, an automobile "tolerance" (which means the margin allowed short of blueprint perfection) is 1/1000 of an inch. Our aircraft designers call for 1/10,000. That makes an almost impossible production problem. A chrome nickel aircraft crankshafe forging starts out at 860 pounds and is first hogged off, then machined off and finally polished off to seventy-four pounds — to the precision of an astronomical lens. It sounds absurd. Is it necessary? I don't know. To me after heartbreaking experiences with God awful tolerances and blunders in ordnance design and specifications of guns, shells and machine guns in the World war, it seems incredible.

Knudsen a Genius

I don't know, but I'll bet Bill Knudsen knows. As a machinist, he is a genius. As an adept at getting the boys around a table and composing differences between perfectionists of the engineering department, and salesmen who want the stuff "day before yesterday" and in quantity, he ought to get agreement in this similar problem.

He can do this if he has full authority and the loyal constant and aggressive support of the president. Mr. Rosevelt never gave that to anybody in his life. Knudsen can't do it at all if he has to filter through or be short-circuited by Mr. Hopkins and Muddom Sec, who wouldn't know the difference between a "tolerance" and the "toleration" of permitting Fifth Column Communist to flourish.

Most Important

It is perhaps the most important element in our deadly problem. Big Indian football player, Jim Thorpe, used to say to fine young opposing tacklers, "Better let old Jim run." If they didn't, the stretcher bearers usually came running out. Mr. Knudsen is not so violent. He is the most modest and least assertive of men. But if they don't "let old Bill run", he won't get the quick production we need so desperately and the failure of this pussyfooting, political, inadequate, stop-gap, makeshift industrial control will lick this administration in November.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Bennett Clark, Democrat, of Missouri

Simply because an emergency has developed abroad, are we going to turn over lump sums to the same outfit of bunglers that apparently wasted the $6,000,000,000 we spent, without finding out what it is to be spent for, and whether we are to have any better defense after we spend the additional money than we now have?

Bacteria Tends To Evade Most Dishwashers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

To what extent is disease spread by unclean eating utensils?

There is no question that a great many bacteria are left on eating utensils both in public restaurants and in homes even after thorough cleaning. But they cannot do very much harm.

A bacteriologic survey of public places in which food or beverages were sold was made in a small town. The cleanliness of the kitchens was good; metal sinks were used; clean towels were used for drying. Bacterioligic swabs taken from the edges of glasses, spoons and forks which would come in contact with the mouth were made especially after the noon or evening rush period. Temperature of the wash water was from about 100 to 140 degrees with a rinse of from about fifty to 150 degrees.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Naturally, as all bacterioligists know, a certain number of bacteria would be present. But the amount of bacteria on these utensils and in the rinse and wash water was very much higher than would be considered normal, even though the temperature of the wash and rinse water was high enough to kill many bacteria.

Chlornie Added

It was found that if a chlorine concentration of 100 parts per million water is used, however, that the results are very much different and highly gratifying. Every other feature — the temperature of the water, the cleanliness of the towels and the care of washing was the same, the only change was in the addition of a small amount of chlorine to the water.

A great many people cling to a stubborn dislike of the chlorine taste of water, but it has been proved over and over again that in this concentration it is harmless and certainly it is valuable, especially in the summer time, in preventing epidemics of food infection.

Use of Vitamin B

Is Vitamin B useful in neuralgia as well as neuritis?

We haven't very many reports on the use of Vitamin B in the painful form of neuritis, generally called "neuralgia." Its usefulness has been demonstrated when the nerves are involved on the muscular side causing paralysis, but when on the sensory side, causing pain, Vitamin B does not seem to work quite so well.

In a great many of the late reports on the usefulness of vitamins, it seems to me evident that the action of the vitamin is like that of a drug rather than a replacement factor. In other words, it could not be said that the Vitamin B in these cases of neuralgia was absent from the diet, and that this absence caused the neuralgia; rather that thiamin chloride, which is concentrated Vitamin B1, acts in neuralgia as a drug and must be given by the physician in larger quantities than would ordinarily be taken in the food.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

There is a very useful plant which is so accommodating it will grow in soil which is too poor for most other plants. Furthermore, this plant will grow in full shade. The scientific name of this very cooperative plant is Aegopodium, or Bishop's-weed. It is also commonly called Goutweed because years ago in England the leaves of the plant were boiled and then used as a poultice in the treatment of gout. The plant should be better known and more frequently used for it is splendid for foliage purposes and the variegated markings of its leaves makes it attractive in shady spots.

The leaves of Bishop's-weed are margined with white, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The plants are fast-growing, forming mats of foliage which are especially useful for edging purposes or as a low ground cover. It grows about 12 inches high.

Bishop's-weed blooms in June, having small white flowers. The plants can easily be increased by dividing the roots in either Spring or Fall.

State Sponsors More Projects

Records Show Trend Away from Community Sponsorship

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—A trend away from sponsorship Work Project Administration projects by local communities in West Virginia is shown in public records of hearings on work relief appropriations for the next fiscal year.

Instead of local units developing projects, the trend showed, greater propostions of the WPA funds in West Virginia are going to state-sponsored jobs.

The trend was reported by F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, in response to questioning by Representative Johnson (D-WVa), who said:

"What I am complaining so much about is your loading on the federal government when I know our state government is able to do a lot of things that it is not doing. That is what I am trying to get at; I am trying to relieve the local people who are now down to about rock bottom, when the state is on top."

A study of West Virginia projects submitted to the committee by Harrington showed that in the July, 1937 to June, 1938 period state agencies accounted for fifty-seven per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent in 1938-1939, and sixty-nine per cent of federal funds in 1939-1940.

"As between 1937 and 1939, consecutively," Harrington reported, "the local agencies as a group dropped from forty-three per cent to thirty-one per cent in their sponsorship of work projects administration projects as measured by the value in federal funds of projects approved for operation."

Walsh Urges Prompt Removal of Prisoners

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—Legislation requiring prompt removal of prisoners from sentencing courts to the state penitentiary or the house of correction was proposed today by Attorney General William C. Walsh.

Ruling at the request of Chairman Willis R. Jones of the department of correction, Walsh held that county sheriffs should not delay transportation of convicted prisoners. Additional unofficial sentences of as much as thirty days are sometimes imposed through such delay.

Officials explained that the sheriffs are paid mileage for such trips to penal institutions and frequently wait until a number of prisoners are ready for transportation. By taking several at a time, the officer may claim mileage for each although making but one trip.

Walsh advised Jones that, while circuit court judges could recognize time served in jails, and alter sentences accordingly, magistrates could not and that "it would seem that legislation is required to solve this situation."

Ruling on a similar question last year, the attorney general noted a specific case of a prisoner who spent twenty-six days in a county jail before he was taken to the house of correction to start a twelve-month term.

Walsh suggested at that time that attorneys for prisoners should take immediate steps to have time served in jail, after sentencing, credited to the prisoners.

Theaters Today

Legion Sponsored Shows To Remain This Week

Beauty, talent, fun and thrills are promised in the twenty shows on the Cetlin and Wilson World on Parade midway which will remain at Community ball park for another week to give Cumberland fun lovers who missed the big shows last week on account of bad weather a chance to see them.

Thrill rides including, two ferris wheels over which Zacchini is shot nightly as a free attraction, are included.

Other shows on the gladway include Speedy Merrill's Wall of Death motordrome; Miss America tableau revue done in the Ziegfeld manner; Carl Lauther's side show of human oddities from all parts of the world including the monkey girl, the alligator skin boy, the ossified man, the miracle girl, Tex Yates, the knife thrower; Jessie Franks, the lady punching bag champion; Pop-eye, the sword swallower; the Stranger than it Seems show, the Harlem minstrel show, the Fitzpatrick's wild life exhibit, Van Ault's penny arcade with many miniature movie episodes and other fun for a penny; and other attractions.

The shows are sponsored by the Forty and Eight funmaking organization of the Fort Cumberland Post of the American Legion.

Picture Has Son Of Famous Horse

A brief dispatch from Budapest, Hungary, telling of the death of a thirty-one-year-old stallion "Conversano," one of the famous Lipizan horses from Vienna's Spanish Riding Academy, was of particular interest in Hollywood.

The great-grandson of "Conversano" plays the title role in the motion picture "Florian," Winfield Sheehan's initial offering as a producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which comes today to the Maryland theater.

Twenty-three years ago "Conversano" was shipped from Vienna to Budapest when the last Emperor of Austria became the last king of Hungary, Charles I. The thousand-year-old coronation ceremony required a white horse on which the new king rides to the top of a mound of earth gathered from all the countries in the kingdom.

It was "Conversano" that carried the new ruler through the coronation ceremony before more than 150,000 spectators, the last coronation of Hungary, on December 30, 1916.

The motion picture, "Florian," which is a story of the famed Lipizan horses, is based on Felix Salten's novel and features one of the beautiful white horses which was presented to Maria Jeritza by the Austrian government as a token of esteem for her work in the Vienna Imperial Opera. Mme. Jeritza is Mrs. Sheehan in private life.

DANCING STAR

Deanna Durbin Is Presented at Embassy

The offering differs from Deanna's "Three Smart Girls," made some two and a half years ago. Since then Deanna has become recognized as an actress as well as the possessor of an amazing voice.

In "Three Smart Girls Grow up," Deanna is seen as a very rich girl, and she wears a wardrobe in keeping with her station in life. It is the first time she has ever been seen with a full outfit of "nice" clothes. Too, she wears her first evening gown in several sequences of the production.

The 16-year-old soprano sings four songs in the picture: "Invitation to the Dance," by Weber; "The Last Rose of Summer," from Flotow's opera "Martha"; "La Capinera" (The Wren), by Sir Julius Benedict; and "Because," by Edw. Teschemacher and Guy D'Hardelot.

In the supporting cast are seen Charles Winninger, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, William Lundigan, Robert Cummings, Nella Walker, and Ernest Cossart.

Liberty Picture Made By New Color Process

New color reproduction in photography is revealed through the Cosmo-color process by "Isle of Destiny," the Fine Arts Picture distributed by RKO Radio and showing at the New Liberty theater tomorrow with William Gargan, Wallace Ford and June Lang featured.

Cosmocolor, the production reveals, does not make the demands of other color processes. For instance, the same amount of light is not necessary, nor do the actors need to apply so much makeup. In fact, the women players do not need as much makeup for Cosmocolor as they normally use for the street.

In "Isle of Destiny" June Lang plays the role of a society aviatrix who gets entangled in the dangerous plot of a crafty gun running chief while on a round-the-world flight. William Gargan and Wallace Ford play rough-and-ready Marine pilots in search of adventure—and the same girl. Elmer Clifton directed "Isle of Destiny."

Johnson Choir Sings In Technicolor Film

Hall Johnson, towering negro with an infectious smile, lends the services of his choir to the silver screen in "Swanee River," story of Stephen C. Foster, the great American troubadour, a Twentieth Century-Fox technicolor production which brings Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds and Al Jolson to the Garden theater today.

Foster was the first composer to recognize the value and validity of the negro mood in music and to give it expression in such well-loved songs as "The Old Folks at Home", "Old Black Joe", "My Old Kentucky Home" and countless others.

Also on the Garden program is "Eternally Yours", starring Loretta Young and David Niven.

Bacteria Tends To Evade Most Dishwashers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

To what extent is disease spread by unclean eating utensils?

There is no question that a great many bacteria are left on eating utensils both in public restaurants and in homes even after thorough cleaning. But they cannot do very much harm.

A bacteriologic survey of public places in which food or beverages were sold was made in a small town. The cleanliness of the kitchens was good; metal sinks were used; clean towels were used for drying. Bacterioligic swabs taken from the edges of glasses, spoons and forks which would come in contact with the mouth were made especially after the noon or evening rush period. Temperature of the wash water was from about 100 to 140 degrees with a rinse of from about fifty to 150 degrees.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Naturally, as all bacterioligists know, a certain number of bacteria would be present. But the amount of bacteria on these utensils and in the rinse and wash water was very much higher than would be considered normal, even though the temperature of the wash and rinse water was high enough to kill many bacteria.

Chlornie Added

It was found that if a chlorine concentration of 100 parts per million water is used, however, that the results are very much different and highly gratifying. Every other feature — the temperature of the water, the cleanliness of the towels and the care of washing was the same, the only change was in the addition of a small amount of chlorine to the water.

A great many people cling to a stubborn dislike of the chlorine taste of water, but it has been proved over and over again that in this concentration it is harmless and certainly it is valuable, especially in the summer time, in preventing epidemics of food infection.

Use of Vitamin B

Is Vitamin B useful in neuralgia as well as neuritis?

We haven't very many reports on the use of Vitamin B in the painful form of neuritis, generally called "neuralgia." Its usefulness has been demonstrated when the nerves are involved on the muscular side causing paralysis, but when on the sensory side, causing pain, Vitamin B does not seem to work quite so well.

In a great many of the late reports on the usefulness of vitamins, it seems to me evident that the action of the vitamin is like that of a drug rather than a replacement factor. In other words, it could not be said that the Vitamin B in these cases of neuralgia was absent from the diet, and that this absence caused the neuralgia; rather that thiamin chloride, which is concentrated Vitamin B1, acts in neuralgia as a drug and must be given by the physician in larger quantities than would ordinarily be taken in the food.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of King Feature Syndicate, Inc., East Forty-fifth street, New York City. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Reducing and Gaining", "Infant Feeding", "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

There is a very useful plant which is so accommodating it will grow in soil which is too poor for most other plants. Furthermore, this plant will grow in full shade. The scientific name of this very cooperative plant is Aegopodium, or Bishop's-weed. It is also commonly called Goutweed because years ago in England the leaves of the plant were boiled and then used as a poultice in the treatment of gout. The plant should be better known and more frequently used for it is splendid for foliage purposes and the variegated markings of its leaves makes it attractive in shady spots.

The leaves of Bishop's-weed are margined with white, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The plants are fast-growing, forming mats of foliage which are especially useful for edging purposes or as a low ground cover. It grows about 12 inches high.

Bishop's-weed blooms in June, having small white flowers. The plants can easily be increased by dividing the roots in either Spring or Fall.

State Sponsors More Projects

Records Show Trend Away from Community Sponsorship

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—A trend away from sponsorship Work Project Administration projects by local communities in West Virginia is shown in public records of hearings on work relief appropriations for the next fiscal year.

Instead of local units developing projects, the trend showed, greater propostions of the WPA funds in West Virginia are going to state-sponsored jobs.

The trend was reported by F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, in response to questioning by Representative Johnson (D-WVa), who said:

"What I am complaining so much about is your loading on the federal government when I know our state government is able to do a lot of things that it is not doing. That is what I am trying to get at; I am trying to relieve the local people who are now down to about rock bottom, when the state is on top."

A study of West Virginia projects submitted to the committee by Harrington showed that in the July, 1937 to June, 1938 period state agencies accounted for fifty-seven per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent in 1938-1939, and sixty-nine per cent of federal funds in 1939-1940.

"As between 1937 and 1939, consecutively," Harrington reported, "the local agencies as a group dropped from forty-three per cent to thirty-one per cent in their sponsorship of work projects administration projects as measured by the value in federal funds of projects approved for operation."

Walsh Urges Prompt Removal of Prisoners

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—Legislation requiring prompt removal of prisoners from sentencing courts to the state penitentiary or the house of correction was proposed today by Attorney General William C. Walsh.

Ruling at the request of Chairman Willis R. Jones of the department of correction, Walsh held that county sheriffs should not delay transportation of convicted prisoners. Additional unofficial sentences of as much as thirty days are sometimes imposed through such delay.

Officials explained that the sheriffs are paid mileage for such trips to penal institutions and frequently wait until a number of prisoners are ready for transportation. By taking several at a time, the officer may claim mileage for each although making but one trip.

Walsh advised Jones that, while circuit court judges could recognize time served in jails, and alter sentences accordingly, magistrates could not and that "it would seem that legislation is required to solve this situation."

Ruling on a similar question last year, the attorney general noted a specific case of a prisoner who spent twenty-six days in a county jail before he was taken to the house of correction to start a twelve-month term.

Walsh suggested at that time that attorneys for prisoners should take immediate steps to have time served in jail, after sentencing, credited to the prisoners.

Picture Has Son Of Famous Horse

A brief dispatch from Budapest, Hungary, telling of the death of a thirty-one-year-old stallion "Conversano," one of the famous Lippizan horses from Vienna's Spanish Riding Academy, was of particular interest in Hollywood.

The great-grandson of "Conversano" plays the title role in the motion picture "Florian," Winfield Sheehan's initial offering as a producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which comes today to the Maryland theater.

The Third Term Exceeds The War as a Menace

GREATER than the danger of any invasion of this continent by a foreign power as an immediate threat to American institutions and to a continuance of the personal liberties of the citizens of the United States, is the deepening shadow of a third term effort by President Roosevelt.

If successful, such an effort would effectively nullify the constitutional safeguards against executive usurpation and lead to a completely altered and restricted way of life for every American.

That there is to be such an effort no informed person now seriously questions. Indeed, if Mr. Roosevelt did not entertain such purpose he would openly have renounced it at a time when the international situation cries out for personal ambitions to give way to an unselfish national unity.

Every act and every policy of the New Deal dictator over the past seven years has pointed unerringly in the direction of increasing the president's personal powers to rule or ruin in the manner he and his radical advisers and bureaucratic puppet creations see fit, even to embracing the attempt, partially successful, of making the Supreme Court of the United States a political satrap.

Through the powers already gained by the proclaiming of a long succession of "national emergencies" the New Deal administration now wields almost complete control over the nation's monetary system, over wages and hours of labor, over communications, tariffs, banking, the growing or curtailment of crops, the securities markets and in many other fields.

Few can doubt that another New Deal endorsement at the polls in November would be accepted as a "mandate" to make these and additional powers sought by the executive, both an absolute and permanent grant.

No American participation in a foreign war, or a defensive war, would be necessary under such circumstances to achieve this Rooseveltian and New Deal objective of quasi-totalitarianism.

The members of the Republican party, no less than its leaders, foresee the perils of the situation but welcome the challenge it creates.

They believe that the time has come for the American people, once and for all, to determine whether we are to remain a nation of free people, under a representative form of government or whether we are to relinquish our individual rights and prerogatives as citizens, in favor of an adaptation of some imported ideology of government, such as is now blasting the lives and devastating the hopes and homes of millions of innocent and helpless men, women and children abroad.

This is the issue of the coming national election and no other issue can becloud it.

For 150 years the American people have bulwarked the constitution by adherence to the tradition against a third term for any president, as advised by George Washington, a precept forcefully reiterated by Jefferson, Jackson and other Democrats, as well as Republicans. The framers of the constitution itself were many of them in favor of a single term for the president but the sound judgment and common sense of the citizenry was finally relied upon to exercise restraint upon personal ambition.

In the case of Mr. Roosevelt, he has made it evident that he is not amenable to the dictates of self-restraint and his personal ambition and lust for power seem insatiable.

It, therefore, rests with the American people, war or no war, to reject this bid for unlimited tenure of office and for unlimited powers.

That they will do just this, and in summary fashion, at the November election cannot be doubted, unless we are to believe that we have lost completely our capacity and genius for self government and have abandoned all the ideals of democracy that, as a nation, we have cherished and fought for since the Declaration of Independence.

New Relief Spendings Should Be Earmarked

WITH the budget shot to pieces and the lid of the debt limit about to blow off, Congress may have to provide another huge fund for unemployment relief before adjournment.

The New Deal plan is to appropriate a lump sum to be scattered at the "discretion" of the president within a period of eight months, instead of stretching it out through a year. During most of the eight-month period the campaign will be on. Heretofore in election years the WPA has hired additional thousands of workers in pivotal states, and then dumped them overobard after election.

In Pennsylvania, Ohio, and other states which went Republican in spite of this New Deal misuse of public money, the WPA took reprisal by making excessive cuts in its rolls, thus attempting to inflame the public against Republican administrations on account of the ensuing distress.

Scandals in the WPA administration continue, as revealed by the investigation by the House subcommittee on Appropriations. A determined effort will be made by members of both parties to thwart the New Deal scheme to prostitute the WPA once more in an election year.

The only method by which political use of public money can be prevented is to earmark every dollar of the fund granted to WPA. Congress holds the purse-strings for the time being. It can dictate how the money shall be spent—whether for actual relief of distress or for political purposes.

One of the plans looks to diversion of about half a million of relief funds to the office of Government Reports, a New Deal propaganda agency. The House has already turned down a budget item of $1,055,000 which Mr. Roosevelt submitted for the perpetuation of this political agency with public money. To grant the sum now asked out of relief money would be, in literal truth, "playing politics with human misery."

Earmark every dollar of relief funds, gentlemen of Congress, or you will see much of it snatched from the needy and used for New Deal politics.

Defense Commission Should Have Definite Powers

DARLING'S CARTOON printed on this page further emphasizes the need heretofore pointed out by this newspaper for Congress to define the duties and powers of the new Commission on National Defense appointed by President Roosevelt, which body is really not what its name denotes.

This is for the reason that the council, or board, as appointed possesses only advisory powers. It is merely an adjunct to the statutory council, which comprises Secretaries Woodring, Edison, Ickes, Wallace, Hopkins and Perkins. Adding them to the New Dealers on the commission, who are Leon Henderson, Sidney Hillman, Chester Davis, William McReynolds and possibly Harriet Elliott, there is a total of ten or twelve New Dealers. There are only three on the commission who are not New Dealers, namely, Knudsen, Stettinius and Budd. Wherefore the set-up, although widely advertised as "non-political", is wholly a New Deal outfit, and only the New Dealers in it have any power.

Serious doubts are accordingly entertained that this advisory group—"curious and illogical," Gen. Hugh S. Johnson terms it—will function as it should function, and there is fear that in the circumstances it will repeat the failure of a like commission in 1917. For this reason, it is up to Congress to give the commission the authority it should have if it is to function properly. Otherwise it will serve merely as a smoke screen and be unable to check or offset continued New Deal blundering.

A Thought about Rum Running and Taxes

AN EXCHANGE notes that, although prohibition ended six years ago, the Internal Revenue Bureau is still making war on bootleggers, illicit distillers and rum runners. The trouble is not confined to the mountain regions, traditional home of the moonshiners, as the two largest booze conspiracy cases since prohibition broke only the other day in New York and Oklahoma.

In Oklahoma, 169 men were indicted for conspiracy to take liquor into the dry states of Oklahoma and Kansas—a federal offense under the liquor law enforcement act of 1936. In New York, 122 men were indicted on charges of distributing 400,000 gallons of alcohol about New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania over a ten-month period, dodging $1,600,000 in taxes thereby.

The reminder enforces the thought that if congressmen plaster too heavy additional taxes on wines, liquors and beers, in coping with the expenses of the enlarged national defense program, the inevitable result will be a big increase in illicit manufacture and sale—and purchase. That, of course, would entail further expense in the work of running down the violators. Thus, revenue may be lost instead of gained. The thought again impresses the need of fiscal sanity in government, something made even more necessary by the new burdens we are assuming.

Oklahoma wonders why the government cuts down trees in the Grand River basin while planting them on the Cimarron dunes. As FDR says, we are on our way, and in all directions.

To avoid chronic illness, says a physician, we shouldn't worry over the stock market. To which ninety-nine per cent of us reply: "What stock market?"

Henry Ford says he could make a thousand airplanes a day himself, but who would go up in them?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

My father told me there's a Fool-Killer in this world . . . and I know he told me true . . . I used to imagine what a Fool-Killer looked like. He had long, skinny arms that could reach for miles. He had eyes that could see through walls and around corners. He wore a black cloak that shrouded his face. When he laughed he sent a ghastly chortle across the world. Charming fellow, that Fool-Killer.

Marshall Maslin

If you played follow-the-leader and took stupid chances, the Fool-Killer would see you and get you, sure as anything. If you went swimming where there were deep and treacherous holes, the Fool-Killer would pull you under. And if you walked too close to the heels of a wicked horse, he would know it before the horse did and put a bug in its ear.

For some time I believed in him more devoutly than I did in my Guardian Angel, but gradually my faith faded away. I had taken a few silly chances and nothing had happened. I had seen other boys doing dangerous things and the Fool-Killer hadn't gotten them either . . . So I became an unbeliever and stayed that way for ten or fifteen years, until I discovered that I didn't know as much as I thought I did . . . But now, again, I believe there's a Fool-Killer.

There IS a strange spirit abroad in the world that punishes fools more sternly than it punishes villains. It seems to know that most of our crimes are sin of stupidity rather than of wickedness. We lose our friends through forgetfulness; we injure people through thoughtlessness; we are cruel because we cannot imagine how much hurt it is possible to do in this life.

We read books and think that the written wisdom has percolated to our hearts. We hear wise men talk and we imagine that our ears can make us wise, too. We are so often Fools when we think we know the truth, and the Fool-Killer waits for us at every crisis and at every casual moment in our lives.

It's sad, but it's true. I believe in that Fool-Killer, and YOU had better believe in him, too.

Spanish Swindle Has a Long Life, Augen Recalls

By EDWIN C. HILL

Mr. Hymie Augen has been making some gloomy observations lately about the gullibility of Americans, as distinguished from other peoples.

Edwin C. Hill

He is afraid we will never learn. Most of us shouldn't be let out after dark. He wonders if we shouldn't have a law that the victim of a fraud should be sent to prison with the defrauder. The least we could do, thinks Mr. Augen, would be to put in the public schools demonstrations of the sanded deck, the long roll and the needled roulette wheel, so the public would know how to protect itself.

What fills Mr. Augen with both nostalgia and disgust is this news from Washington about the State department warning all citizens to look out for the "Spanish swindle," as it is worked in Mexico. Our unsuspecting citizen gets a letter from a Mexican "attorney," in behalf of a client who is in jail as the result of a conspiracy to defraud him of an heritage or perhaps some hidden treasure. If the citizen can contribute to procuring the victim's release, he will share in the sequestered or impounded fortune.

Growing up around Red Hook, Gowanus Creek and the Brooklyn Navy Yard, meeting seafaring men and less diligent and reputable members of our floating population, Mr. Augen knew all about this Spanish swindle when he was a small boy. He thought everybody else knew, and he's amazed and indignant over our national backwardness.

x x x

The Old Satchel Trick

"Now you take the old satchel trick," said Mr. Augen. "I remember—"

"I thought you were talking about the Spanish swindle," I interrupted. But there was no stopping him. He had to have it his way.

"As I was saying, this satchel trick was meant for foreigners, mostly Italians. But Italians are smart. After they had been over here a while they began to read the papers and this satchel trick was just a laugh. It was that way with the money machine and things like that. It got so they couldn't take a hick from those small-time countries the way they used to. The worst of it was they quit working on each other and started clipping Americans and it don't look like we were as smart as they were.

Almost Homesick

"It almost makes me homesick to hear of this Spanish swindle again. Whenever there was a slick-looking gent come around where we were with a big roll we used to say maybe he has been down home in Mexico working that old Spanish swindle that my grandfather had told me about. That was always a good bet, and maybe he was up here making a list of people that was fat as a seal and would feel all busted up about some poor prisoner and want to help him get loose and get his fortune, or maybe get a cut himself.

"That's how it is with saps. They will be one of two kinds. They will be the kind that always wants to do good and save somebody or something, or they will be the percentage guys that when somebody says if we can just grease this judge or something you'll get yours, they reach for their poke. That old Spanish swindle gets them both. The one that worked it the most in my day was slick, good-looking guy who went by the name of Tulio Conchez, although that wasn't his real name. He said he did best with nice guys who didn't like to see anybody robbed and put in jail, etc. It makes me sad to think that people could be such saps."

x x x

Ants in Our Pants

I asked Mr. Augen why Americans should be any more gullible than any other people. "Haven't we always been holding the bags for somebody?" he asked. "Haven't we been rooked and gouged and double keel-hauled and come back for more?"

"But, why?" I insisted.

"Maybe we had it too easy," he said. "Maybe we was just innocent and trying to do good. Maybe we had ants in our pants and couldn't mind our own business. You tell me why." The question went into the suspense file.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THIS IS NO TIME TO LOSE CONFIDENCE

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 2—The aim of this column today is to make clear one effect of events in Europe on the United States. The effect here dealt with is one of very many. Though the phase here described is small, it has a most serious bearing on the future.

Mark Sullivan

To begin, go for a moment to Amsterdam in Holland. There, the week the Germans set up whatever is to be their form of government of Holland for the immediate future. Since the actual conquest of Holland, early in May, a German military official has had sole authority. Beginning this week the authority is to be divided between a German military and a German civil official. The nature of Germany's government of Holland is not made fully clear in the despatches. Apparently many of the former Holland laws are to be kept in effect for the time being. In the despatch there is a significant phrase, "commercial relations with the Reich."

However, the precise nature of Germany's dominion over Holland during the indefinite future is not material. It is enough that Germany is in possession of Holland, can do with Holland what she wishes.

Gets Dependencies

Now come across the ocean. In the West Indies and South America are some dependencies of Holland, Dutch Guiana and some small islands. Strictly, we must say former dependencies of Holland. Since Germany has by arms acquired dominion over Holland in Europe, she has by that same act acquired rights over Holland dependencies on this side of the ocean (and elsewhere). Germany's right over the Dutch dependencies in our hemisphere are identical with the rights over Holland in Europe. The difference, for the present, is that Germany cannot exercise her rights in the West Indies—she cannot take actual physical possession of this Dutch territory over here as she has of Holland.

The reason Germany cannot, for the present, take physical possession of the Dutch dependencies in the West Indies, is that she cannot get to them—because the British and French are still in control of the sea.

Can Take Them if Winner

But if Germany wins the war, if she completely conquers British and France, she can then take physical possession of the Dutch territory in the West Indies. She can run up the Swastika flag there. She can set up a German government there. She will own these West Indies islands, as completely as she owns Berlin. She can do what she wishes there. She can fortify these West Indies islands. She can set set up a naval base there. She can set up an airplane base there.

Now we come to the concern of the United States. The United States cannot permit Germany to take possession of these West Indies islands. We cannot permit it because it would be a violation of our century-old Monroe doctrine. We cannot permit it because those islands are close to the Panaman canal. We cannot permit it because Germany, once in possession of those West Indies islands, could make, or at least attempt, any sort of degree of conquest she chooses in the Western Hemisphere. That we cannot permit Germany to take possession of this Holland territory in the Western Hemisphere is conceded by practically every one.

Some Dissenters

Not quite every one. There are some dissenters. These dissenters interpose various "maybes." They say, "maybe" Germany would not want to expand her power in the Western Hemisphere. They say "maybe" Germany would not wish to attack, or interfere with, the interests of the United States. They say "maybe." Germany will give us assurances that she will not, as the phrase is, "bother the United States." They say "maybe" the contingency will not arise—maybe Germany won't actually conquer England and France; maybe the war will end in a treaty by which Germany will not undertake to take possession of territory in the Western Hemisphere.

But "maybe" is wishful thinking. "Maybe" is hardly a sound basis for a national policy. Most Americans would prefer to look the problem in the face, as it stands.

What to do about it? Shall we go down there right away and take possession of those islands and territory, before Germany undertakes to assert her possession? That would entail definie consequences, for that would be in effect an act of war against Germany. Shall we wait until the contingency actually arises, until what lawyers call the "overt act," until Germany actually takes physical possession of those islands?

May Act With Force

If we wait until then, Germany may act with force. Germany may by that time have conquered Britain, and have possession of the British navy. If Germany thus has a powerful navy, and if we then undertake to prevent her from taking possession of that territory, we will in that case be obliged to do so with our navy. It will take all our navy. And with our navy busy there, what might Japan do in the Pacific?

I have told this problem in terms of a very small example, the tiny possessions of Holland in the West Indies and South America. Exactly the same problem is ahead of us in extremely large terms. What is said about these small Dutch dependencies applies equally to the quite large dependencies of Britain and France in the Western Hemisphere, including Canada. If Britain and France are completely conquered by Germany, Germany will have, over all the British and French portions of the Western Hemisphere, the same rights which today she has over the Holland dependencies.

The inescapable fact is that the United States has an immense interest in seeing that Germany does not conquer England and France. From that inescapable fact arises an inference equally inescapable. Look it in the face, reader.

McCurdy Is Upheld by Federation

Baltimore Labor Union Group Declares He Has Performed Duties Capably

Editor The Cumberland News:

It has been brought to our attention, through an article appearing in the Baltimore Sun under date of Wednesday, May 29, that the so-called Western Maryland Industrial Union Council, which is trying to disrupt the bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland, is complaining of Joseph P. McCurdy occupying a position as a member of the Maryland State Unemployment Compensation Board.

This complaint is made solely because Mr. McCurdy is the head of a bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland and because his appointment was endorsed by the unanimous vote of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, which is composed of 104 bona fide labor organizations. The duties of his office are being performed as capably as any similar board in the country and the labor movement of Baltimore sincerely appreciates Governor O'Conor's reappointment of Joseph P. McCurdy. We know the governor has made no mistake.

In Mr. McCurdy's reappointment we know that the working people of the state of Maryland will have no legitimate complaint. We feel that the attack on Mr. McCurdy is not in the best interests of the working people of the state of Maryland but is a purely personal one on the part of a few disgruntled would-be labor leaders in Maryland only.

Very truly yours,
BALTIMORE FEDERATION OF LABOR,
R. J. Buxbaum,
M. F. Heatley,
Vincent T. McHenry,

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

It is a good sign that job opportunities for college graduates this spring are more numerous than a year ago. In its annual spring survey, covering 154 colleges and universities, one life insurance company has found that calls for graduates are more numerous than a year ago, and that in turn topped 1938. Most of the colleges report certain placement of seventy-five per cent and above, and many are confident of 100 per cent.

The demand for trained engineers in the war industries accounts for some of this increase, no doubt. But the fact that young men who have specifically trained for places in industry are getting them is encouraging, for it removes just that many from the all-too-long lines of ambitious young men who have been facing a future without clear opportunity. That is the one thing, ultimately, that the nation cannot stand.

Authority Seen As Requisite for Plane Production

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 2 — Could Henry Ford produce 1,000 planes a day at River Rouge? He could if all designs were alike, adapted to present production methods and there were no constant design changes. The success of Henry Ford in producing 10,000 automobiles a day was his invention of uniformity of design and interchangeability of parts. Under existing conditions of flux and uncertainty, Mr. Ford could no more produce 1,000 planes a day than he could produce 10,000.

Henry Ford

There is another terrible bottleneck—impossible military standards of perfection which take no stock of our facilities for production. That stopped us over and over again in the World war. There could be the same precision in civilian production. But the commercial producer has to consider two other factors—commercial price and adaptability to existing facilities for mass production. The naval and military brass hat is apt to ignore this entirely.

Fault Discerned

Henry Ford, in creating the first Tin Lizzie that put America on wheels, had the genius to see exactly this fault. He built a car that would do all that was required of it in ninety per cent of cases, but which sacrificed no more to the theoretical perfection than was necessary to do the work required and met the requirement of price and production. Charlie Nash did the same thing. On this beginning we have gradually moved closer to automotive perfection at a price low enough and production high enough to permit general use.

It is quite clear that exactly these American principles have given the Germans overwhelming command of the air. They build a plane with no highly perfumed niceties, but good enough to do its deadly work and remain 100 hours in the air without overhauling. We build for 500 hours without repair and with a collection of niceties that multiply costs and divide production. It is increasingly doubtful whether the increased perfection in design produces enough increased efficiency to justify it—especially considering its fatal slowing up.

An Example

For example, an automobile "tolerance" (which means the margin allowed short of blueprint perfection) is 1/1000 of an inch. Our aircraft designers call for 1/10,000. That makes an almost impossible production problem. A chrome nickel aircraft crankshafe forging starts out at 860 pounds and is first hogged off, then machined off and finally polished off to seventy-four pounds — to the precision of an astronomical lens. It sounds absurd. Is it necessary? I don't know. To me after heartbreaking experiences with God awful tolerances and blunders in ordnance design and specifications of guns, shells and machine guns in the World war, it seems incredible.

Knudsen a Genius

I don't know, but I'll bet Bill Knudsen knows. As a machinist, he is a genius. As an adept at getting the boys around a table and composing differences between perfectionists of the engineering department, and salesmen who want the stuff "day before yesterday" and in quantity, he ought to get agreement in this similar problem.

He can do this if he has full authority and the loyal constant and aggressive support of the president. Mr. Rosevelt never gave that to anybody in his life. Krudsen can't do it at all if he has to filter through or be short-circuited by Mr. Hopkins and Muddom Sec, who wouldn't know the difference between a "tolerance" and the "toleration" of permitting Fifth Column Communist to flourish.

Most Important

It is perhaps the most important element in our deadly problem. Big Indian football player, Jim Thorpe, used to say to fine young opposing tacklers, "Better let old Jim run." If they didn't, the stretcher bearers usually came running out. Mr. Knudsen is not so violent. He is the most modest and least assertive of men. But if they don't "let old Bill run", he won't get the quick production we need so desperately and the failure of this pussyfooting, political, inadequate, stop-gap, makeshift industrial control will lick this administration in November.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Bennett Clark, Democrat, of Missouri

Simply because an emergency has developed abroad, are we going to turn over lump sums to the same outfit of bunglers that apparently wasted the $8,000,000,000 we spent, without finding out what it is to be spent for, and whether we are to have any better defense after we spend the additional money than we now have?

The Third Term Exceeds The War as a Menace

GREATER than the danger of any invasion of this continent by a foreign power as an immediate threat to American institutions and to a continuance of the personal liberties of the citizens of the United States, is the deepening shadow of a third term effort by President Roosevelt.

If successful, such an effort would effectively nullify the constitutional safeguards against executive usurpation and lead to a completely altered and restricted way of life for every American.

That there is to be such an effort no informed person now seriously questions. Indeed, if Mr. Roosevelt did not entertain such purpose he would openly have renounced it at a time when the international situation cries out for personal ambitions to give way to an unselfish national unity.

Every act and every policy of the New Deal dictator over the past seven years has pointed unerringly in the direction of increasing the president's personal powers to rule or ruin in the manner he and his radical advisers and bureaucratic puppet creations see fit, even to embracing the attempt, partially successful, of making the Supreme Court of the United States a political satrap.

Through the powers already gained by the proclaiming of a long succession of "national emergencies" the New Deal administration now wields almost complete control over the nation's monetary system, over wages and hours of labor, over communications, tariffs, banking, the growing or curtailment of crops, the securities markets and in many other fields.

Few can doubt that another New Deal endorsement at the polls in November would be accepted as a "mandate" to make these and additional powers sought by the executive, both an absolute and permanent grant.

No American participation in a foreign war, or a defensive war, would be necessary under such circumstances to achieve this Rooseveltian and New Deal objective of quasi-totalitarianism.

The members of the Republican party, no less than its leaders, foresee the perils of the situation but welcome the challenge it creates.

They believe that the time has come for the American people, once and for all, to determine whether we are to remain a nation of free people, under a representative form of government or whether we are to relinquish our individual rights and prerogatives as citizens, in favor of an adaptation of some imported ideology of government, such as is now blasting the lives and devastating the hopes and homes of millions of innocent and helpless men, women and children abroad.

This is the issue of the coming national election and no other issue can becloud it.

For 150 years the American people have bulwarked the constitution by adherence to the tradition against a third term for any president, as advised by George Washington, a precept forcefully reiterated by Jefferson, Jackson and other Democrats, as well as Republicans. The framers of the constitution itself were many of them in favor of a single term for the president but the sound judgment and common sense of the citizenry was finally relied upon to exercise restraint upon personal ambition.

In the case of Mr. Roosevelt, he has made it evident that he is not amenable to the dictates of self-restraint and his personal ambition and lust for power seem insatiable.

It, therefore, rests with the American people, war or no war, to reject this bid for unlimited tenure of office and for unlimited powers.

That they will do just this, and in summary fashion, at the November election cannot be doubted, unless we are to believe that we have lost completely our capacity and genius for self government and have abandoned all the ideals of democracy that, as a nation, we have cherished and fought for since the Declaration of Independence.

In Oklahoma, 169 men were indicted for conspiracy to take liquor into the dry states of Oklahoma and Kansas—a federal offense under the liquor law enforcement act of 1936. In New York, 122 men were indicted on charges of distributing 400,000 gallons of alcohol about New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania over a ten-month period, dodging $1,600,000 in taxes thereby.

The reminder enforces the thought that if congressmen plaster too heavy additional taxes on wines, liquors and beers, in coping with the expenses of the enlarged national defense program, the inevitable result will be a big increase in illicit manufacture and sale—and purchase. That, of course, would entail further expense in the work of running down the violators. Thus, revenue may be lost instead of gained. The thought again impresses the need of fiscal sanity in government, something made even more necessary by the new burdens we are assuming.

Oklahoma wonders why the government cuts down trees in the Grand River basin while planting them on the Cimarron dunes. As FDR says, we are on our way, and in all directions.

To avoid chronic illness, says a physician, we shouldn't worry over the stock market. To which ninety-nine per cent of us reply: "What stock market?"

Henry Ford says he could make a thousand airplanes a day himself, but who would go up in them?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

My father told me there's a Fool-Killer in this world . . . and I know he told me true . . . I used to imagine what a Fool-Killer looked like. He had long, skinny arms that could reach for miles. He had eyes that could see through walls and around corners. He wore a black cloak that shrouded his face. When he laughed he sent a ghastly chortle across the world. Charming fellow, that Fool-Killer.

Marshall Maslin

If you played follow-the-leader and took stupid chances, the Fool-Killer would see you and get you, sure as anything. If you went swimming where there were deep and treacherous holes, the Fool-Killer would pull you under. And if you walked too close to the heels of a wicked horse, he would know it before the horse did and put a bug in its ear.

For some time I believed in him more devoutly than I did in my Guardian Angel, but gradually my faith faded away. I had taken a few silly chances and nothing had happened. I had seen other boys doing dangerous things and the Fool-Killer hadn't gotten them either . . . So I became an unbeliever and stayed that way for ten or fifteen years, until I discovered that I didn't know as much as I thought I did . . . But now, again, I believe there's a Fool-Killer.

There IS a strange spirit abroad in the world that punishes fools more sternly than it punishes villains. It seems to know that most of our crimes are sin of stupidity rather than of wickedness. We lose our friends through forgetfulness; we injure people through thoughtlessness; we are cruel because we cannot imagine how much hurt it is possible to do in this life.

We read books and think that the written wisdom has percolated to our hearts. We hear wise men talk and we imagine that our ears can make us wise, too. We are so often Fools when we think we know the truth, and the Fool-Killer waits for us at every crisis and at every casual moment in our lives.

It's sad, but it's true. I believe in that Fool-Killer, and YOU had better believe in him, too.

Spanish Swindle Has a Long Life, Augen Recalls

By EDWIN C. HILL

Mr. Hymie Augen has been making some gloomy observations lately about the gullibility of Americans, as distinguished from other peoples.

Edwin C. Hill

He is afraid we will never learn. Most of us shouldn't be let out after dark. He wonders if we shouldn't have a law that the victim of a fraud should be sent to prison with the defrauder. The least we could do, thinks Mr. Augen, would be to put in the public schools demonstrations of the sanded deck, the long roll and the needled roulette wheel, so the public would know how to protect itself.

What fills Mr. Augen with both nostalgia and disgust is this news from Washington about the State department warning all citizens to look out for the "Spanish swindle," as it is worked in Mexico. Our unsuspecting citizen gets a letter from a Mexican "attorney," in behalf of a client who is in jail as the result of a conspiracy to defraud him of an heritage or perhaps some hidden treasure. If the citizen can contribute to procuring the victim's release, he will share in the sequestered or impounded fortune.

Growing up around Red Hook, Gowanus Creek and the Brooklyn Navy Yard, meeting seafaring men and less diligent and reputable members of our floating population, Mr. Augen knew all about this Spanish swindle when he was a small boy. He thought everybody else knew, and he's amazed and indignant over our national backwardness.

x x x

The Old Satchel Trick

"Now you take the old satchel trick," said Mr. Augen. "I remember—"

"I thought you were talking about the Spanish swindle," I interrupted. But there was no stopping him. He had to have it his way.

"As I was saying, this satchel trick was meant for foreigners, mostly Italians. But Italians are smart. After they had been over here a while they began to read the papers and this satchel trick was just a laugh. It was that way with the money machine and things like that. It got so they couldn't take a hick from those small-time countries the way they used to. The worst of it was they quit working on each other and started clipping Americans and it don't look like we were as smart as they were.

x x x

Almost Homesick

"It almost makes me homesick to hear of this Spanish swindle again. Whenever there was a slick-looking gent come around where we were with a big roll we used to say maybe he has been down home in Mexico working that old Spanish swindle that my grandfather had told me about. That was always a good bet, and maybe he was up here making a list of people that was fat as a seal and would feel all busted up about some poor prisoner and want to help him get loose and get his fortune, or maybe get a cut himself.

"That's how it is with saps. They will be one of two kinds. They will be the kind that always wants to do good and save somebody or something, or they will be the percentage guys that when somebody says if we can just grease this judge or something you'll get yours, they reach for their poke. That old Spanish swindle gets them both. The one that worked it the most in my day was slick, good-looking guy who went by the name of Tulio Conchez, although that wasn't his real name. He said he did best with nice guys who didn't like to see anybody robbed and put in jail, etc. It makes me sad to think that people could be such saps."

x x x

Ants in Our Pants

I asked Mr. Augen why Americans should be any more gullible than any other people. "Haven't we always been holding the bags for somebody?" he asked. "Haven't we been rooked and gouged and double keel-hauled and come back for more?"

"But, why?" I insisted.

"Maybe we had it too easy," he said. "Maybe we was just innocent and trying to do good. Maybe we had ants in our pants and couldn't mind our own business. You tell me why." The question went into the suspense file.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THIS IS NO TIME TO LOSE CONFIDENCE

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 2—The aim of this column today is to make clear one effect of events in Europe on the United States. The effect here dealt with is one of very many. Though the phase here described is small, it has a most serious bearing on the future.

Mark Sullivan

To begin, go for a moment to Amsterdam in Holland. There, the week the Germans set up whatever is to be their form of government of Holland for the immediate future. Since the actual conquest of Holland, early in May, a German military official has had sole authority. Beginning this week the authority is to be divided between a German military and a German civil official. The nature of Germany's government of Holland is not made fully clear in the despatches. Apparently many of the former Holland laws are to be kept in effect for the time being. In the despatch there is a significant phrase, "commercial relations with the Reich."

However, the precise nature of Germany's dominion over Holland during the indefinite future is not material. It is enough that Germany is in possession of Holland, can do with Holland what she wishes.

Gets Dependencies

Now come across the ocean. In the West Indies and South America are some dependencies of Holland, Dutch Guiana and some small islands. Strictly, we must say former dependencies of Holland. Since Germany has by arms acquired dominion over Holland in Europe, she has by that same act acquired rights over Holland dependencies on this side of the ocean (and elsewhere). Germany's right over the Dutch dependencies in our hemisphere are identical with the rights over Holland in Europe. The difference, for the present, is that Germany cannot exercise her rights in the West Indies—she cannot take actual physical possession of this Dutch territory over here as she has of Holland.

The reason Germany cannot, for the present, take physical possession of the Dutch dependencies in the West Indies, is that she cannot get to them—because the British and French are still in control of the sea.

Can Take Them if Winner

But if Germany wins the war, if she completely conquers British and France, she can then take physical possession of the Dutch territory in the West Indies. She can run up the Swastika flag there. She can set up a German government there. She will own these West Indies islands, as completely as she owns Berlin. She can do what she wishes there. She can fortify these West Indies islands. She can set up a naval base there. She can set up an airplane base there.

Now we come to the concern of the United States. The United States cannot permit Germany to take possession of these West Indies islands. We cannot permit it because it would be a violation of our century-old Monroe doctrine. We cannot permit it because those islands are close to the Panaman canal. We cannot permit it because Germany, once in possession of those West Indies islands, could make, or at least attempt, any sort of degree of conquest she chooses in the Western Hemisphere. That we cannot permit Germany to take possession of this Holland territory in the Western Hemisphere is conceded by practically every one.

Some Dissenters

Not quite every one. There are some dissenters. These dissenters interpose various "maybes." They say, "maybe" Germany would not want to expand her power in the Western Hemisphere. They say "maybe" Germany would not wish to attack, or interfere with, the interests of the United States. They say "maybe." Germany will give us assurances that she will not, as the phrase is, "bother the United States." They say "maybe" the contingency will not arise—maybe Germany won't actually conquer England and France; maybe the war will end in a treaty by which Germany will not undertake to take possession of territory in the Western Hemisphere.

But "maybe" is wishful thinking. "Maybe" is hardly a sound basis for a national policy. Most Americans would prefer to look the problem in the face, as it stands.

What to do about it? Shall we go down there right away and take possession of those islands and territory, before Germany undertakes to assert her possession? That would entail definie consequences, for that would be in effect an act of war against Germany. Shall we wait until the contingency actually arises, until what lawyers call the "overt act," until Germany actually takes physical possession of those islands?

May Act With Force

If we wait until then, Germany may act with force. Germany may by that time have conquered Britain, and have possession of the British navy. If Germany thus has a powerful navy, and if we then undertake to prevent her from taking possession of that territory, we will in that case be obliged to do so with our navy. It will take all our navy. And with our navy busy there, what might Japan do in the Pacific?

I have told this problem in terms of a very small example, the tiny possessions of Holland in the West Indies and South America. Exactly the same problem is ahead of us in extremely large terms. What is said about these small Dutch dependencies applies equally to the quite large dependencies of Britain and France in the Western Hemisphere, including Canada. If Britain and France are completely conquered by Germany, Germany will have, over all the British and French portions of the Western Hemisphere, the same rights which today she has over the Holland dependencies.

The inescapable fact is that the United States has an immense interest in seeing that Germany does not conquer England and France. From that inescapable fact arises an inference equally inescapable. Look it in the face, reader.

McCurdy Is Upheld by Federation

Baltimore Labor Union Group Declares He Has Performed Duties Capably

Editor The Cumberland News:

It has been brought to our attention, through an article appearing in the Baltimore Sun under date of Wednesday, May 29, that the so-called Western Maryland Industrial Union Council, which is trying to disrupt the bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland, is complaining of Joseph P. McCurdy occupying a position as a member of the Maryland State Unemployment Compensation Board.

This complaint is made solely because Mr. McCurdy is the head of a bona fide labor movement in the state of Maryland and because his appointment was endorsed by the unanimous vote of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, which is composed of 104 bona fide labor organizations. The duties of his office are being performed as capably as any similar board in the country and the labor movement of Baltimore sincerely appreciates Governor O'Conor's reappointment of Joseph P. McCurdy. We know the governor has made no mistake.

In Mr. McCurdy's reappointment we know that the working people of the state of Maryland will have no legitimate complaint. We feel that the attack on Mr. McCurdy is not in the best interests of the working people of the state of Maryland but is a purely personal one on the part of a few disgruntled would-be labor leaders in Maryland only.

Very truly yours,
BALTIMORE FEDERATION OF LABOR,
R. J. Buxbaum,
M. F. Heatley,
Vincent T. McHenry,
Officers.

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

It is a good sign that job opportunities for college graduates this spring are more numerous than a year ago. In its annual spring survey, covering 154 colleges and universities, one life insurance company has found that calls for graduates are more numerous than a year ago, and that in turn topped 1938. Most of the colleges report certain placement of seventy-five per cent and above, and many are confident of 100 per cent.

The demand for trained engineers in the war industries accounts for some of this increase, no doubt. But the fact that young men who have specifically trained for places in industry are getting them is encouraging, for it removes just that many from the all-too-long lines of ambitious young men who have been facing a future without clear opportunity. That is the one thing, ultimately, that the nation cannot stand.

Authority Seen As Requisite for Plane Production

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 2 — Could Henry Ford produce 1,000 planes a day at River Rouge? He could if all designs were alike, adapted to present production methods and there were no constant design changes. The success of Henry Ford in producing 10,000 automobiles a day was his invention of uniformity of design and interchangeability of parts. Under existing conditions of flux and uncertainty, Mr. Ford could no more produce 1,000 planes a day than he could produce 10,000.

Henry Ford

There is another terrible bottleneck—impossible military standards of perfection which take no stock of our facilities for production. That stopped us over and over again in the World war. There could be the same precision in civilian production. But the commercial producer has to consider two other factors—commercial price and adaptability to existing facilities for mass production. The naval and military brass hat is apt to ignore this entirely.

Fault Discerned

Henry Ford, in creating the first Tin Lizzie that put America on wheels, had the genius to see exactly this fault. He built a car that would do all that was required of it in ninety per cent of cases, but which sacrificed no more to the theoretical perfection than was necessary to do the work required and met the requirement of price and production. Charlie Nash did the same thing. On this beginning we have gradually moved closer to automotive perfection at a price low enough and production high enough to permit general use.

It is quite clear that exactly these American principles have given the Germans overwhelming command of the air. They build a plane with no highly perfumed niceties, but good enough to do its deadly work and remain 100 hours in the air without overhauling. We build for 500 hours without repair and with a collection of niceties that multiply costs and divide production. It is increasingly doubtful whether the increased perfection in design produces enough increased efficiency to justify it—especially considering its fatal slowing up.

An Example

For example, an automobile "tolerance" (which means the margin allowed short of blueprint perfection) is 1/1000 of an inch. Our aircraft designers call for 1/10,000. That makes an almost impossible production problem. A chrome nickel aircraft crankshafe forging starts out at 860 pounds and is first hogged off, then machined off and finally polished off to seventy-four pounds — to the precision of an astronomical lens. It sounds absurd. Is it necessary? I don't know. To me after heartbreaking experiences with God awful tolerances and blunders in ordnance design and specifications of guns, shells and machine guns in the World war, it seems incredible.

Knudsen a Genius

I don't know, but I'll bet Bill Knudsen knows. As a machinist, he is a genius. As an adept at getting the boys around a table and composing differences between perfectionists of the engineering department, and salesmen who want the stuff "day before yesterday" and in quantity, he ought to get agreement in this similar problem.

He can do this if he has full authority and the loyal constant and aggressive support of the president. Mr. Rosevelt never gave that to anybody in his life. Knudsen can't do it at all if he has to filter through or be short-circuited by Mr. Hopkins and Muddom Sec, who wouldn't know the difference between a "tolerance" and the "toleration" of permitting Fifth Column Communist to flourish.

Most Important

It is perhaps the most important element in our deadly problem. Big Indian football player, Jim Thorpe, used to say to fine young opposing tacklers, "Better let old Jim run." If they didn't, the stretcher bearers usually came running out. Mr. Knudsen is not so violent. He is the most modest and least assertive of men. But if they don't "let old Bill run", he won't get the quick production we need so desperately and the failure of this pussyfooting, political, inadequate, stop-gap, makeshift industrial control will lick this administration in November.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Bennett Clark, Democrat, of Missouri

Simply because an emergency has developed abroad, are we going to turn over lump sums to the same outfit of bunglers that apparently wasted the $6,000,000,000 we spent, without finding out what it is to be spent for, and whether we are to have any better defense after we spend the additional money than we now have?

Bacteria Tends To Evade Most Dishwashers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

To what extent is disease spread by unclean eating utensils?

There is no question that a great many bacteria are left on eating utensils both in public restaurants and in homes even after thorough cleaning. But they cannot do very much harm.

A bacteriologic survey of public places in which food or beverages were sold was made in a small town. The cleanliness of the kitchens was good; metal sinks were used; clean towels were used for drying. Bacterioligic swabs taken from the edges of glasses, spoons and forks which would come in contact with the mouth were made especially after the noon or evening rush period. Temperature of the wash water was from about 100 to 140 degrees with a rinse of from about fifty to 150 degrees.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Naturally, as all bacterioligists know, a certain number of bacteria would be present. But the amount of bacteria on these utensils and in the rinse and wash water was very much higher than would be considered normal, even though the temperature of the wash and rinse water was high enough to kill many bacteria.

Chlornie Added

It was found that if a chlorine concentration of 100 parts per million water is used, however, that the results are very much different and highly gratifying. Every other feature — the temperature of the water, the cleanliness of the towels and the care of washing was the same, the only change was in the addition of a small amount of chlorine to the water.

A great many people cling to a stubborn dislike of the chlorine taste of water, but it has been proved over and over again that in this concentration it is harmless and certainly it is valuable, especially in the summer time, in preventing epidemics of food infection.

Use of Vitamin B

Is Vitamin B useful in neuralgia as well as neuritis?

We haven't very many reports on the use of Vitamin B in the painful form of neuritis, generally called "neuralgia." Its usefulness has been demonstrated when the nerves are involved on the muscular side causing paralysis, but when on the sensory side, causing pain, Vitamin B does not seem to work quite so well.

In a great many of the late reports on the usefulness of vitamins, it seems to me evident that the action of the vitamin is like that of a drug rather than a replacement factor. In other words, it could not be said that the Vitamin B in these cases of neuralgia was absent from the diet, and that this absence caused the neuralgia; rather that thiamin chloride, which is concentrated Vitamin B1, acts in neuralgia as a drug and must be given by the physician in larger quantities than would ordinarily be taken in the food.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

There is a very useful plant which is so accommodating it will grow in soil which is too poor for most other plants. Furthermore, this plant will grow in full shade. The scientific name of this very cooperative plant is Aegopodium, or Bishop's-weed. It is also commonly called Goutweed because years ago in England the leaves of the plant were boiled and then used as a poultice in the treatment of gout. The plant should be better known and more frequently used for it is splendid for foliage purposes and the variegated markings of its leaves makes it attractive in shady spots.

The leaves of Bishop's-weed are margined with white, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The plants are fast-growing, forming mats of foliage which are especially useful for edging purposes or as a low ground cover. It grows about 12 inches high.

Bishop's-weed blooms in June, having small white flowers. The plants can easily be increased by dividing the roots in either Spring or Fall.

State Sponsors More Projects

Records Show Trend Away from Community Sponsorship

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—A trend away from sponsorship Work Project Administration projects by local communities in West Virginia is shown in public records of hearings on work relief appropriations for the next fiscal year.

Instead of local units developing projects, the trend showed, greater propostions of the WPA funds in West Virginia are going to state-sponsored jobs.

The trend was reported by F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, in response to questioning by Representative Johnson (D-WVa), who said:

"What I am complaining so much about is your loading on the federal government when I know our state government is able to do a lot of things that it is not doing. That is what I am trying to get at; I am trying to relieve the local people who are now down to about rock bottom, when the state is on top."

A study of West Virginia projects submitted to the committee by Harrington showed that in the July, 1927 to June, 1938 period state agencies accounted for fifty-seven per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent in 1938-1939, and sixty-nine per cent of federal funds in 1939-1940.

"As between 1937 and 1939, consecutively," Harrington reported, "the local agencies as a group dropped from forty-three per cent to thirty-one per cent in their sponsorship of work projects administration projects as measured by the value in federal funds of projects approved for operation."

Walsh Urges Prompt Removal of Prisoners

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—Legislation requiring prompt removal of prisoners from sentencing courts to the state penitentiary or the house of correction was proposed today by Attorney General William C. Walsh.

Ruling at the request of Chairman Willis R. Jones of the department of correction, Walsh held that county sheriffs should not delay transportation of convicted prisoners. Additional unofficial sentences of as much as thirty days are sometimes imposed through such delay.

Officials explained that the sheriffs are paid mileage for such trips to penal institutions and frequently wait until a number of prisoners are ready for transportation. By taking several at a time, the officer may claim mileage for each although making but one trip.

Walsh advised Jones that, while circuit court judges could recognize time served in jails, and alter sentences accordingly, magistrates could not and that "it would seem that legislation is required to solve this situation."

Ruling on a similar question last year, the attorney general noted a specific case of a prisoner who spent twenty-six days in a county jail before he was taken to the house of correction to start a twelve-month term.

Walsh suggested at that time that attorneys for prisoners should take immediate steps to have time served in jail, after sentencing, credited to the prisoners.

The shows are sponsored by the Forty and Eight funmaking organization of the Fort Cumberland Post of the American Legion.

Picture Has Son Of Famous Horse

A brief dispatch from Budapest, Hungary, telling of the death of a thirty-one-year-old stallion "Conversano," one of the famous Lipizan horses from Vienna's Spanish Riding Academy, was of particular interest in Hollywood.

The great-grandson of "Conversano" plays the title role in the motion picture "Florian," Winfield Sheehan's initial offering as a producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which comes today to the Maryland theater.

Twenty-three years ago "Conversano" was shipped from Vienna to Budapest when the last Emperor of Austria became the last king of Hungary, Charles I. The thousand-year-old coronation ceremony required a white horse on which the new king rides to the top of a mound of earth gathered from all the countries in the kingdom.

It was "Conversano" that carried the new ruler through the coronation ceremony before more than 150,000 spectators, the last coronation of Hungary, on December 30, 1916.

The motion picture, "Florian," which is a story of the famed Lipizan horses, is based on Felix Salten's novel and features one of the beautiful white horses which was presented to Maria Jeritza by the Austrian government as a token of esteem for her work in the Vienna Imperial Opera. Mme. Jeritza is Mrs. Sheehan in private life.

Deanna Durbin Is Presented at Embassy

The offering differs from Deanna's "Three Smart Girls," made some two and a half years ago. Since then Deanna has become recognized as an actress as well as the possessor of an amazing voice.

In "Three Smart Girls Grow up," Deanna is seen as a very rich girl, and she wears a wardrobe in keeping with her station in life. It is the first time she has ever been seen with a full outfit of "nice" clothes. Too, she wears her first evening gown in several sequences of the production.

The 16-year-old soprano sings four songs in the picture: "Invitation to the Dance," by Weber; "The Last Rose of Summer," from Flotow's opera "Martha"; "La Capinera" (The Wren), by Sir Julius Benedict; and "Because," by Edw. Teschemacher and Guy D'Hardelot.

In the supporting cast are seen Charles Winninger, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, William Lundigan, Robert Cummings, Nella Walker, and Ernest Cossart.

Liberty Picture Made By New Color Process

New color reproduction in photography is revealed through the Cosmo-color process by "Isle of Destiny," the Fine Arts Picture distributed by RKO Radio and showing at the New Liberty theater tomorrow with William Gargan, Wallace Ford and June Lang featured.

Cosmocolor, the production reveals, does not make the demands of other color processes. For instance, the same amount of light is not necessary, nor do the actors need to apply so much makeup. In fact, the women players do not need as much makeup for Cosmocolor as they normally use for the street.

In "Isle of Destiny" June Lang plays the role of a society aviatrix who gets entangled in the dangerous plot of a crafty gun running chief while on a round-the-world flight. William Gargan and Wallace Ford play rough-and-ready Marine pilots in search of adventure—and the same girl. Elmer Clifton directed "Isle of Destiny."

Johnson Choir Sings In Technicolor Film

Hall Johnson, towering negro with an infectious smile, lends the services of his choir to the silver screen in "Swanee River," story of Stephen C. Foster, the great American troubadour, a Twentieth Century-Fox technicolor production which brings Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds and Al Jolson to the Garden theater today.

Foster was the first composer to recognize the value and validity of the negro mood in music and to give it expression in such well-loved songs as "The Old Folks at Home", "Old Black Joe", "My Old Kentucky Home" and countless others.

Also on the Garden program is "Eternally Yours", starring Loretta Young and David Niven.

Bacteria Tends To Evade Most Dishwashers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

To what extent is disease spread by unclean eating utensils?

There is no question that a great many bacteria are left on eating utensils both in public restaurants and in homes even after thorough cleaning. But they cannot do very much harm.

A bacteriologic survey of public places in which food or beverages were sold was made in a small town. The cleanliness of the kitchens was good; metal sinks were used; clean towels were used for drying. Bacterioligic swabs taken from the edges of glasses, spoons and forks which would come in contact with the mouth were made especially after the noon or evening rush period. Temperature of the wash water was from about 100 to 140 degrees with a rinse of from about fifty to 150 degrees.

Naturally, as all bacterioligists know, a certain number of bacteria would be present. But the amount of bacteria on these utensils and in the rinse and wash water was very much higher than would be considered normal, even though the temperature of the wash and rinse water was high enough to kill many bacteria.

Chlornie Added

It was found that if a chlorine concentration of 100 parts per million water is used, however, that the results are very much different and highly gratifying. Every other feature — the temperature of the water, the cleanliness of the towels and the care of washing was the same, the only change was in the addition of a small amount of chlorine to the water.

A great many people cling to a stubborn dislike of the chlorine taste of water, but it has been proved over and over again that in this concentration it is harmless and certainly it is valuable, especially in the summer time, in preventing epidemics of food infection.

Use of Vitamin B

Is Vitamin B useful in neuralgia as well as neuritis?

We haven't very many reports on the use of Vitamin B in the painful form of neuritis, generally called "neuralgia." Its usefulness has been demonstrated when the nerves are involved on the muscular side causing paralysis, but when on the sensory side, causing pain, Vitamin B does not seem to work quite so well.

In a great many of the late reports on the usefulness of vitamins, it seems to me evident that the action of the vitamin is like that of a drug rather than a replacement factor. In other words, it could not be said that the Vitamin B in these cases of neuralgia was absent from the diet, and that this absence caused the neuralgia; rather that thiamin chloride, which is concentrated Vitamin B1, acts in neuralgia as a drug and must be given by the physician in larger quantities than would ordinarily be taken in the food.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

There is a very useful plant which is so accommodating it will grow in soil which is too poor for most other plants. Furthermore, this plant will grow in full shade. The scientific name of this very cooperative plant is Aegopodium, or Bishop's-weed. It is also commonly called Goutweed because years ago in England the leaves of the plant were boiled and then used as a poultice in the treatment of gout. The plant should be better known and more frequently used for it is splendid for foliage purposes and the variegated markings of its leaves makes it attractive in shady spots.

The leaves of Bishop's-weed are margined with white, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The plants are fast-growing, forming mats of foliage which are especially useful for edging purposes or as a low ground cover. It grows about 12 inches high .

Bishop's-weed blooms in June, having small white flowers. The plants can easily be increased by dividing the roots in either Spring or Fall.

State Sponsors More Projects

Records Show Trend Away from Community Sponsorship

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—A trend away from sponsorship Work Project Administration projects by local communities in West Virginia is shown in public records of hearings on work relief appropriations for the next fiscal year.

I trend of local units developing projects, the trend showed, greater propostions of the WPA funds in West Virginia are going to state-sponsored jobs.

The trend was reported by F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, in response to questioning by Representative Johnson (D-WVa), who said:

"What I am complaining so much about is your loading on the federal government when I know our state government is able to do a lot of things that it is not doing. That is what I am trying to get at; I am trying to relieve the local people who are now down to about rock bottom, when the state is on top."

A study of West Virginia projects submitted to the committee by Harrington showed that in the July, 1937 to June, 1938 period state agencies accounted for fifty-seven per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent of the total value in federal funds of projects in West Virginia. In successive years, he reported, state sponsorship represented sixty-six per cent in 1938-1939, and sixty-nine per cent of federal funds in 1939-1940.

"As between 1937 and 1939, consecutively," Harrington reported, "the local agencies as a group dropped from forty-three per cent to thirty-one per cent in their sponsorship of work projects administration projects as measured by the value in federal funds of projects approved for operation."

Walsh Urges Prompt Removal of Prisoners

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—Legislation requiring prompt removal of prisoners from sentencing courts to the state penitentiary or the house of correction was proposed today by Attorney General William C. Walsh.

Ruling at the request of Chairman Willis R. Jones of the department of correction, Walsh held that county sheriffs should not delay transportation of convicted prisoners. Additional unofficial sentences of as much as thirty days are sometimes imposed through such delay.

Officials explained that the sheriffs are paid mileage for such trips to penal institutions and frequently wait until a number of prisoners are ready for transportation. By taking several at a time, the officer may claim mileage for each although making but one trip.

Walsh advised Jones that, while circuit court judges could recognize time served in jails, and alter sentences accordingly, magistrates could not and that "it would seem that legislation is required to solve this situation."

Ruling on a similar question last year, the attorney general noted a specific case of a prisoner who spent twenty-six days in a county jail before he was taken to the house of correction to start a twelve-month term.

Walsh suggested at that time that attorneys for prisoners should take immediate steps to have time served in jail, after sentencing, credited to the prisoners.

Legion Sponsored Shows To Remain This Week

Beauty, talent, fun and thrills are promised in the twenty shows on the Cetlin and Wilson World on Parade midway which will remain at Community ball park for another week to give Cumberland fun lovers who missed the big shows last week on account of bad weather a chance to see them.

Thrill rides including, two ferris wheels over which Zacchini is shot nightly as a free attraction, are included.

Other shows on the gladway include Speedy Merrill's Wall of Death motordrome; Miss America tableau revue done in the Ziegfeld manner; Carl Lauther's side show of human oddities from all parts of the world including the monkey girl, the alligator skin boy, the ossified man, the miracle girl, Tex Yates, the knife thrower; Jessie Franks, the lady punching bag champion; Pop-eye, the sword swallower; the Stranger than it Seems show, the Harlem minstrel show, the Fitzpatrick's wild life exhibit, Van Ault's penny arcade with many miniature movie episodes and other fun for a penny; and other attractions.

The shows are sponsored by the Forty and Eight funmaking organization of the Fort Cumberland Post of the American Legion.

Picture Has Son Of Famous Horse

A brief dispatch from Budapest, Hungary, telling of the death of a thirty-one-year-old stallion "Conversano," one of the famous Lipizan horses from Vienna's Spanish Riding Academy, was of particular interest in Hollywood.

The great-grandson of "Conversano" plays the title role in the motion picture "Florian," Winfield Sheehan's initial offering as a producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which comes today to the Maryland theater.

Twenty-three years ago "Conversano" was shipped from Vienna to Budapest when the last Emperor of Austria became the last king of Hungary, Charles I. The thousand-year-old coronation ceremony required a white horse on which the new king rides to the top of a mound of earth gathered from all the countries in the kingdom.

It was "Conversano" that carried the new ruler through the coronation ceremony before more than 150,000 spectators, the last coronation of Hungary, on December 30, 1916.

The motion picture, "Florian," which is a story of the famed Lippizan horses, is based on Felix Salten's novel and features one of the beautiful white horses which was presented to Maria Jeritza by the Austrian government as a token of esteem for her work in the Vienna Imperial Opera. Mme. Jeritza is Mrs. Sheehan in private life.

Deanna Durbin Is Presented at Embassy

The offering differs from Deanna's "Three Smart Girls," made some two and a half years ago. Since then Deanna has become recognized as an actress as well as the possessor of an amazing voice.

In "Three Smart Girls Grow up," Deanna is seen as a very rich girl, and she wears a wardrobe in keeping with her station in life. It is the first time she has ever been seen with a full outfit of "nice" clothes. Too, she wears her first evening gown in several sequences of the production.

The 16-year-old soprano sings four songs in the picture: "Invitation to the Dance," by Weber; "The Last Rose of Summer," from Flotow's opera "Martha"; "La Capinera" (The Wren), by Sir Julius Benedict; and "Because," by Edw. Teschemacher and Guy D'Hardelot.

In the supporting cast are seen Charles Winninger, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, William Lundigan, Robert Cummings, Nella Walker, and Ernest Cossart.

Liberty Picture Made By New Color Process

New color reproduction in photography is revealed through the Cosmo-color process by "Isle of Destiny," the Fine Arts Picture distributed by RKO Radio and showing at the New Liberty theater tomorrow with William Gargan, Wallace Ford and June Lang featured.

Cosmocolor, the production reveals, does not make the demands of other color processes. For instance, the same amount of light is not necessary, nor do the actors need to apply so much makeup. In fact, the women players do not need as much makeup for Cosmocolor as they normally use for the street.

In "Isle of Destiny" June Lang plays the role of a society aviatrix who gets entangled in the dangerous plot of a crafty gun running chief while on a round-the-world flight. William Gargan and Wallace Ford play rough-and-ready Marine pilots in search of adventure—and the same girl. Elmer Clifton directed "Isle of Destiny."

Johnson Choir Sings In Technicolor Film

Hall Johnson, towering negro with an infectious smile, lends the services of his choir to the silver screen in "Swanee River," story of Stephen C. Foster, the great American troubadour, a Twentieth Century-Fox technicolor production which brings Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds and Al Jolson to the Garden theater today.

Foster was the first composer to recognize the value and validity of the negro mood in music and to give it expression in such well-loved songs as "The Old Folks at Home", "Old Black Joe", "My Old Kentucky Home" and countless others.

Also on the Garden program is "Eternally Yours", starring Loretta Young and David Niven.

Newman Club and Merici Veteran Unit Plan Sport Dance at St. Mary's Hall

A sport dance will be held June 20 at St. Mary's hall, Oldtown road, by St. Mary's Newman club and the Merici Veteran Unit of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade.

This was announced at a meeting of the Newman club Thursday evening at St. Mary's hall. Miss Rita Brinker presided. Miss Dixie Harden acted as secretary. Plans also were discussed for a picnic to be held in the near future.

It was also decided that the Newman club would cooperate with the Merici Veteran Unit in holding a religious vacation school for public school students this summer.

At this meeting a program of musical selections was presented by John Manthiey, Frederick Dodrill, Bernard O'Donnell, John Miller, Edward Weisenmiller, Joseph Mattingly and Donald Harden. Mary Frances Manthiey gave a tap dance and the musical chorus sang.

A present was presented to the Rev. Lawrence P. Landrigan in celebration of his silver jubilee. Father Landrigan is director of the Newman club.

The next meeting will be held June 13 at St. Mary's hall.

Have Church Wedding

The marriage of Miss Martha Lou Williamson, daughter of Mrs. Elsie Williamson, 19 Washington street, and Frederick E. Powell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil C. Powell, 811 Mount Royal avenue, was performed at 9 o'clock Saturday morning at St. Paul's Lutheran church. The Rev. Dr. Hixon T. Bowersox officiated.

Mrs. D. C. Goodfellow was her sister's matron of honor and Ross E. Powell was his brother's best man.

After a wedding trip to New York city, Mr. and Mrs. Powell will reside at 1626 Bedford road.

The bride was graduated from Allegany high school and Catherman's Business school. Mr. Powell was graduated from Charlotte Hall, and is associated with his father in the Cumberland Credit Bureau.

Visitors Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Perry A. Nicklin entertained at their home, 3 Altamont terrace, last evening at a small buffet supper affair in honor of their guests, Dr. and Mrs. Homer E. Tabler and Homer E. Tabler, Jr., of Hancock, and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Johnston, of Uniontown, Pa.

Events in Brief

The Woman's Association of the First Presbyterian church, Washington street, will hold a picnic at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon at Constitution park, to which members and their families are invited. The picnic will close with a Vesper service conducted by the Rev. William A. Eisenberger, pastor of the church. In case of rain the meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening in the lecture hall, Washington street.

The Baltimore and Ohio Women's Music Club, of Baltimore, will entertain at a concert at 3:15 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the recreation hall of Centre Street Methodist church.

Young Cumberland Couple Is Married At College Park Sorority House

An event of unusual interest was solemnized Saturday afternoon at the Kappa Delta sorority house, College Park, when Miss Mary Lee Ross, daughter of W. Taylor Ross and the late Mary Lewis Ross, 309 Decatur street, and Gustavus Warfield, son of Mrs. Eleanor C. Warfield, of Baltimore, formerly of this city, and the late John Ramsey Warfield, were united in marriage. The Rev. John W. Leggett, Baltimore, performed the ceremony.

Preceding the ceremony the bride was graduated with first honors from the College of Home Economics, College Park.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white satin trimmed with pearls and a finger-tip veil of net edged with lace and a lace cap with a halo of pearls.

Miss Adria Smith of Baltimore, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Louise Gaston and Mrs. John Rhind, both of this city. Miss Smith wore pink net with a lace jacket and a shoulder length tulle veil of matching color. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers. The bridesmaids' gowns were duplications of Miss Smith's and they also carried spring flowers. Miss Gaston's was aqua and Mrs. Rhind's blue.

Thomas Wharton, Mount Rainier, was Mr. Warfield's best man and the ushers were William Taylor Ross, Jr., brother of the bride, and John Warfield, brother of the groom.

A reception followed the ceremony, after which the couple left on a brief motor trip. They will reside in Farmingdale, N. J., where Mr. Warfield is pastor of Pierce Memorial Presbyterian church and a student at Princeton Theological Seminary. He was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1939. Both were graduated from Allegany high school.

McGough-Kennedy

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence M. Kennedy, 622 Shriver avenue, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Irene Elizabeth, to Dr. Thomas Francis McGough, Jr., of Pittsburgh, at a nuptial mass, May 22 in St. Agnes' church, Arlington, Va.

The bride was gowned in muted blue and white print crepe with matching redingote and white accessories. Her corsage was of baby white orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Millicent Koelker was maid of honor and wore a brown and natural linen with accessories to match and a corsage of yellow roses.

Edward McGough, Pittsburgh, was his brother's best man.

A breakfast at the Riger Smith hotel, Washington, D. C., followed the ceremony.

The bride was graduated from Catholic Girls' Central high school and the Emergency hospital training school for nurses, Washington, D. C. Dr. McGough is an alumnus of the University of Pittsburgh and the George Washington university school of medicine, Washington, D. C. He is county health officer in Pulaski county, Va.

Following a short stay at Virginia Beach, Dr. and Mrs. McGough will be at home at the Mapleside Inn, Pulaski.

To Be Married June 15

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Mary Geraldine McKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. McKenzie, 50 North Mechanic street, to Philip John Dietz, Baltimore, June 15 at St. Bernard's Catholic church, Baltimore. A breakfast will be served at the Belvedere hotel. The couple will reside in Baltimore.

Are Your Smiles For Guest Only?

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE ARE faces that have company manners. Wear sweet smiles before guests, beam during the merry evening and turn lemony in the family circle. Doesn't make sense. Before loved ones, one should be sunny. They catch gloom out of the atmosphere. But that's not the point; the point is that smiles and laughter keep the facial fibers strong and resilient. Downcast looks let the muscles relax so the outer tissues soften and what then? A flock of wrinkles. Hard lines around the mouth. Furrows between the eyes. Silly for any woman to mark up her face, make it unattractive, old before her time.

When you see teeth clicked together, chin shoved forward as if it were a threat, you can be pretty sure that malice and meanness are stowed away in the chest that's under that chin. It's a face that makes you think of a machine gun.

Keeping sweet should be every woman's business. Going sour can so injure the health that physical symptoms will appear. Brooding, anger, jealousy increase the heart beats, causing the heart to weaken through overwork; it increases blood pressure.

Serious Results

The effect upon appearance is devastating. Appetite flies away, the nervous system jangles like a telephone bell, the digestive system may suffer. It is wise to learn as much as one can about the art of living, because it has much to do in building for happiness and contentment.

The tabloid items offered by cosmetic chemists are cute as a bug's eyebrow, if bugs have eyebrows. You can get all sorts of things for your purse. A tiny bar of mascara with a wee bit of a brush; you can apply it to eyebrows and winkers when you want to freshen up in a hurry.

Lipsticks come in small sizes. Little metal tubes. Push a lever, the top flies open, up comes the lipstick all nicely shaped to make a clear cut application. Cosmetic chemists are doing well by the frail sex. Why shouldn't they? Consider the millions the pretties shovel into their bank accounts.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

SIGNAL THE RIGHT SUIT

WHENEVER it is obvious that your partner is going to shift from the suit in which he wins a trick, to one of the other side suits, it is your job to let him know which you prefer. This is done by experienced campaigners by means of a signal with the card you play to his trick. If it is clearly your lowest card in that suit, you indicate a desire for a lead of the lower-ranking side suit on the next trick. If it is definitely a higher-than-your-lowest card, you are positively asking him to shift to the higher-ranking of the other two suits.

♠ A 10 9 6
♦ K J 6 3
♣ K J 6 3

If your partner leads the A of your heart suit against South's 4-Spades, and the above hand is laid down as dummy, the correct card for you to play on that trick is clearly delineated if you hold any of the following hands:

1. ♠ 5 4 ♥ K Q 8 4 2 ♦ A Q 7 ♣ 7 5 2
2. ♠ 5 4 ♥ K Q 8 4 2 ♦ 7 5 2 ♣ A Q 7
3. ♠ 5 4 3 ♥ K Q 8 4 3 2 ♦ None ♣ 7 5 4 2
4. ♠ 5 4 3 ♥ K Q 8 4 3 2 ♦ 7 5 4 2 ♣ None

With any of these, you stand a very good chance of beating the contract if your partner makes the correct shift, and apparently hardly any chance if he makes the wrong one. Since the dummy shows exactly the same holding in both diamonds and clubs, your partner has nothing to guide him except the card you play.

You urgently wish a diamond lead in the case of hands No. 1 and No. 3, and command its lead by playing the heart 8 on the first trick. With Nos. 2 and 4, you just as urgently desire a lead of clubs, which you indicate with a play of your heart 2, the lowest you can give him.

The low signal is not quite as clear-cut as that of the high card asking for a diamond lead, for the simple reason that there is a slight amount of ambiguity attached to it. Your partner might think you were merely telling him not to repeat the suit and therefore preferred a lead of trumps to cut down the ruffing possibilities for the declarer. However, if your hand happened to be such that you preferred a trump lead, your best play would be the 4, neither emphatically high nor low.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

FIRST CURTAIN for "Maid to Measure" went up at exactly 8 p.m.

Surprisingly, less than a dozen couples came in late. Ordinarily a number of persons will trek down the aisles of a theater while the play is under way, but not tonight; Bill Bailey observed that this audience had wanted to come a bit early, if anything, in order to get a peek inside the mansion, to have a chance to look at it and discuss it before paying tribute to dramatic art.

At 7 p. m. the cast had been nervous, and by 7:30 the actors were in a veritable tension. All, that is, except Bill and Gayle. Bill was experienced at such things; his nerves were hopped up a little, but under control. He backed pretty Gayle into a corner about 7 o'clock and said:

"Listen, kid, you and I are the bosses here. We've got dizzy damsels on our—"

"Bill, hush! They aren't dizzy."

"All damsels are dizzy, but skip that for the moment. What I mean, they'll be shrieking maniacs if you and I don't act calm."

"But I'm scared myself!"

"Okay. But if you show it I'll smack you one. See?" He grinned his infectious grin at Gayle, and she laughed back. "You're the heroine, I'm the big handsome he-man hero. We carry the load. We can't afford the luxury of nerves. We're old troupers, for tonight at least."

Gayle sighed. "I envy the others."

"And they envy you, so that makes it even. Now go back there with 'em and act like a cucumber. And if Jeremy gets to pulling at his collar, discuss archeology with him. Or something."

Bill left her then. He had many details to see to. Makeup. Costumes. Stage sets. Lights—the gardeners had been commandeered for this. Tickets. Bill had a friend at the door taking tickets and greeting people heartily, on the premise that hospitality is valuable in building good will.

He was standing with the friend, chatting, when he noted that the hour was five minutes to eight. He hastened backstage. He had about 10 minutes to put his own makeup on, but that was enough. At 8 o'clock the play was suddenly going.

"Maid to Measure" had nothing spectacular in it, but was based on a three-way love mixup and sprinkled plentifully with clever dialogue and comic situations. It was as spring-timely as violets, as gay and chattery as sparrows under the eaves.

As a matter of fact, everybody in the cast did creditably. Much better than Gayle had dared hope.

"It's not surprising," Bill whispered, excitedly, to Gayle between the second and third acts. "You can do just so much in rehearsals, acting to empty chairs. When you get before an audience, you rise above yourself. I've seen it before. I mean, if you are smart at all. The hams just get hammier."

"I don't believe any of us are ham actors, then. Unless it's me."

He squeezed her arm. "You're swell, Gayle! Honest!"

Next act brought the love scene in which he had to kiss Gayle and make tender love to her under a drapery of vines and flowers (taken from the Merrifield gardens not many feet away.) Bill had arranged especially adroit lighting for this. And there was a full minute's pause during which distant music intensified the mood. They were standing in shadows beside a tree trunk while the music played, off stage.

"We've got 'em, kid!" Bill whispered to Gayle, then.

"Who? Got who?"

"The audience. See? They're entranced. Utterly silent. Let's pour it on 'em now, eh? Make it real!"

Something in Gayle responded to that. For a few seconds she did gaze across the footlights at the 400 people there. They were, as Bill said, enraptured, in the illusion of the love story before them, thrilling vicariously to the sweetness of romance. Gayle wanted them to enjoy it still more, if possible. She closed her eyes, held her breath a moment, and literally transformed herself from Gayle Dixon into Mary Melissa Mayfield, the exquisite young heroine in the ecstasy of first love. She saw in Bill, then, not Bill Bailey, impulsive young ex-collegian who had audaciously talked himself into a job, but—

"Bill darling, it's heaven, heaven at last for me."

Or wait a minute! All at once Gayle realized, even as she acted, that Bill Bailey in real life was almost an exact counterpart of handsome Ted Mallory, hero of the play! A mere change of name couldn't alter him. A few new mannerisms and pet exclamations couldn't change a man. Mallory was a young man out of a job, too, but supremely happy and confident of making good in life. Wasn't that also Bill? Mallory was aggressive, but essentially gentle and kind. And wasn't Bill just like that? Ted Mallory was supposed to be ever so good looking, and wasn't Bill Bailey that way?

These comparisons raced through Gayle's mind while Bill was saying his lines just before the love scene. She said her own easily from memory, and when he held her close to kiss her full on the lips, the sheer rapture of it was no whit artificial, Gayle knew.

The script called for her to kiss him back, lay her cheek against his, look soulfully over the audience and say, "Ted, darling, it's heaven—heaven, at last, for me. Oh, Ted!" The last words she had been coached tremendously, as if about to burst into tears of happiness.

Gayle, though, quite lost herself in that scene. An actor can never afford the pleasure of meditating while acting; one's mind simply must not wander onto extraneous things, personal things.

The hero had been called Ted all evening, but in this climactic moment on the stage Gayle said:

"Bill, darling, it's heaven—heaven at last for me. Oh, Bill!"

Of course the audience caught it.

Five—maybe it was 10—seconds later, so did Gayle herself. All in an instant she realized her mistake.

For one thing, Bill had stiffened. She sensed that she had distracted him. Then, when somebody out front tittered, she realized she had done an appalling thing and, quite apart from any acting she did, she burst into tears.

But for the fact that Bill Bailey had had three years of experience at dramatics in college, "Maid to Measure" might have blown up completely then and there. Bill controlled his quick flash of consternation and ad libbed:

"It is heavenly, Mary Melissa," said he, and that wasn't in the script at all. "Heavenly for me. Please cry all you like. Tears are to be enjoyed when love is behind them."

He held her very close so that she cried into his big chest, and he patted her and snuggled her as a true lover might have done. He rested his head on her hair, and fingered her curls gently, and turned slightly once to kiss the side of her head.

He was standing at the right side of the stage, not two feet from a bower of vines that formed a wing. All at once he perceived Lola Montesa standing near them, concealed from the audience but anxiously watching. Lola had played a guitar and sung a Mexican love song—a bit of extra business Bill had worked in just in order to use Lola's Mexican beauty to advantage. He could whisper instructions to her now, unheard out front.

"Play, Lola!" he ordered. "Play and sing again, off stage! Quick!"

She nodded. She had sensed something of the mixup out there anyway.

"Moonlight is beaming
And starlight is gleaming,
I'm dreaming of you, my
Chiquita—"

She sang it in low, subtle tones, her deep contralto and her guitar chords just seeming to float exquisitely into one's consciousness from nowhere. It was a lovely song—"Cielito Lindo"—and the unseen musician quite captured the mood of the story, or rather enhanced it, built upon it, caused the audience entirely to forget the trivial slip in Gayle's tongue a moment ago. And in this wholly impromptu scene, even the electricians caught the spirit and lowered their lights delicately, fading the brighter glow into a sort of gloaming, then into a twilight blue.

Bill took advantage of the moment to coach Gayle.

"Everything's ducky now, kid," he whispered into her ear. "We've still got 'em—more than ever! It's a swell scene."

There was more of it, five minutes more. And then the play was over. But the tumult and the shouting—figuratively speaking—lasted for long after that. There were six curtain calls, after which the enthusiastic audience swamped Bill and Gayle right on the stage.

"I have already telegraphed Hollywood," Cholly Farrington proclaimed in the next morning's Chronicle-Post. "I know the talent scouts there. If we can't send two young stars immediately to that cinema capital, then I've suddenly turned color blind. Too bad you had to miss the play.

Teas Arranged For Red Cross Relief Fund

Two more teas for the benefit of the war relief fund of the American Red Cross have been announced by Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum, chairman of the Allegany county organizations committee.

On Monday, June 10, the Women's Association of First Presbyterian church will have a silver tea at the manse, 222 Washington street. Mrs. P. G. Ervin is president of the association and Miss Nell Bane, chairman for the tea.

The Cresaptown branch of the Red Cross will hold a silver tea Wednesday from 2 until 5 p. m. in the recreation hall of Cresaptown Methodist church. Mrs. Herbert Armstrong, branch chairman, and Mrs. Harry Barton are co-chairmen for the affair.

Also scheduled for this week is the tea-exchange to be held today from 2 until 5 p. m. at the home of Mrs. William M. Somerville, 110 Washington street. The event is being sponsored by the Girl Scout Council, the troop leaders and the troop committee. Small gifts to be sold at the tea are being assembled by a committee headed by Mrs. Joseph Williams.

Tickets for the Spinsters and Bachelors dance tomorrow night at the Clary Club are available at war relief headquarters, 45 N. Liberty street, or from any member of the newly-organized cotillion groups.

Any organization wishing to sponsor some event for the war relief fund are urged to contact Mrs. Rosenbaum or Mrs. Henry A. Mackey, assistant chairman.

Custard Coating

Sometimes a coating forms over boiled custards. To prevent this, cover the custards tightly as soon as they're cool, and store them in a refrigerator.

Dried apricots, a good source of iron and also fine for flavor, offer the jam maker a way to extend her more expensive fruits with an addition of flavor. These recipes are new and excellent. To prepare apricots, cut them with scissors.

WIFE PRESERVERS

When cotton, linen or rayon has become grayed or yellowed by improper washing and rinsing, add juice of one or two lemons to each three quarts of rinse water.

Silly for any woman to mark up her face, make it unattractive, old before her time.

When you see teeth clicked together, chin shoved forward as if it were a threat, you can be pretty sure that malice and meanness are stowed away in the chest that's under that chin. It's a face that makes you think of a machine gun.

Keeping sweet should be every woman's business. Going sour can so injure the health that physical symptoms will appear. Brooding, anger, jealousy increase the heart beats, causing the heart to weaken through overwork; it increases blood pressure.

Serious Results

The effect upon appearance is devastating. Appetite flies away, the nervous system jangles like a telephone bell, the digestive system may suffer. It is wise to learn as much as one can about the art of living, because it has much to do in building for happiness and contentment.

The tabloid items offered by cosmetic chemists are cute as a bug's eyebrow, if bugs have eyebrows. You can get all sorts of things for your purse. A tiny bar of mascara with a wee bit of a brush; you can apply it to eyebrows and winkers when you want to freshen up in a hurry.

Lipsticks come in small sizes. Little metal tubes. Push a lever, the top flies open, up comes the lipstick all nicely shaped to make a clear cut application. Cosmetic chemists are doing well by the frail sex. Why shouldn't they? Consider the millions the pretties shovel into their bank accounts.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

FIRST CURTAIN for "Maid to Measure" went up at exactly 8 p.m.

Surprisingly, less than a dozen couples came in late. Ordinarily a number of persons will trek down the aisles of a theater while the play is under way, but not tonight; Bill Bailey observed that this audience had wanted to come a bit early, if anything, in order to get a peek inside the mansion, to have a chance to look at it and discuss it before paying tribute to dramatic art.

At 7 p. m. the cast had been nervous, and by 7:30 the actors were in a veritable tension. All, that is, except Bill and Gayle. Bill was experienced at such things; his nerves were hopped up a little, but under control. He backed pretty Gayle into a corner about 7 o'clock and said:

"Listen, kid, you and I are the bosses here. We've got dizzy damsels on our—"

"Bill, hush! They aren't dizzy."

"All damsels are dizzy, but skip that for the moment. What I mean, they'll be shrieking maniacs if you and I don't act calm."

"But I'm scared myself!"

"Okay. But if you show it I'll smack you one. See?" He grinned his infectious grin at Gayle, and she laughed back. "You're the heroine, I'm the big handsome he-man hero. We carry the load. We can't afford the luxury of nerves. We're old troupers, for tonight at least."

Gayle sighed. "I envy the others."

"And they envy you, so that makes it even. Now go back there with 'em and act like a cucumber. And if Jeremy gets to pulling at his collar, discuss archeology with him. Or something."

Bill left her then. He had many details to see to. Makeup. Costumes. Stage sets. Lights—the gardeners had been commandeered for this. Tickets. Bill had a friend at the door taking tickets and greeting people heartily, on the premise that hospitality is valuable in building good will.

He was standing with the friend, chatting, when he noted that the hour was five minutes to eight. He hastened backstage. He had about 10 minutes to put his own makeup on, but that was enough. At 8 o'clock the play was suddenly going.

"Maid to Measure" had nothing spectacular in it, but was based on a three-way love mixup and sprinkled plentifully with clever dialogue and comic situations. It was as spring-timely as violets, as gay and chattery as sparrows under the eaves.

As a matter of fact, everybody in the cast did creditably. Much better than Gayle had dared hope.

"It's not surprising," Bill whispered, excitedly, to Gayle between the second and third acts. "You can do just so much in rehearsals, acting to empty chairs. When you get before an audience, you rise above yourself. I've seen it before. I mean, if you are smart at all. The hams just get hammier."

"I don't believe any of us are ham actors, then. Unless it's me."

He squeezed her arm. "You're swell, Gayle! Honest!"

Next act brought the love scene in which he had to kiss Gayle and make tender love to her under a drapery of vines and flowers (taken from the Merrifield gardens not many feet away.) Bill had arranged especially adroit lighting for this. And there was a full minute's pause during which distant music intensified the mood. They were standing in shadows beside a tree trunk while the music played, off stage.

"We've got 'em, kid!" Bill whispered to Gayle, then.

"Who? Got who?"

"The audience. See? They're entranced. Utterly silent. Let's pour it on 'em now, eh? Make it real!"

Something in Gayle responded to that. For a few seconds she did gaze across the footlights at the 400 people there. They were, as Bill said, enraptured, in the illusion of the love story before them, thrilling vicariously to the sweetness of romance. Gayle wanted them to enjoy it still more, if possible. She closed her eyes, held her breath a moment, and literally transformed herself from Gayle Dixon into Mary Melissa Mayfield, the exquisite young heroine in the ecstasy of first love. She saw in Bill, then, not Bill Bailey, impulsive young ex-collegian who had audaciously talked himself into a job, but—

Or wait a minute! All at once Gayle realized, even as she acted, that Bill Bailey in real life was almost an exact counterpart of handsome Ted Mallory, hero of the play! A mere change of name couldn't alter him. A few new mannerisms and pet exclamations couldn't change a man. Mallory was a young man out of a job, too, but supremely happy and confident of making good in life. Wasn't that also Bill? Mallory was aggressive, but essentially gentle and kind. And wasn't Bill just like that? Ted Mallory was supposed to be ever so good looking, and wasn't Bill Bailey that way?

These comparisons raced through Gayle's mind while Bill was saying his lines just before the love scene. She said her own easily from memory, and when he held her close to kiss her full on the lips, the sheer rapture of it was no whit artificial, Gayle knew.

The script called for her to kiss him back, lay her cheek against his, look soulfully over the audience and say, "Ted, darling, it's heaven—heaven, at last, for me. Oh, Ted!" The last words she had been coached tremendously, as if about to burst into tears of happiness.

Gayle, though, quite lost herself in that scene. An actor can never afford the pleasure of meditating while acting; one's mind simply must not wander onto extraneous things, personal things.

The hero had been called Ted all evening, but in this climactic moment on the stage Gayle said:

"Bill, darling, it's heaven—heaven at last for me. Oh, Bill!"

Of course the audience caught it.

Five—maybe it was 10—seconds later, so did Gayle herself. All in an instant she realized her mistake.

For one thing, Bill had stiffened. She sensed that she had distracted him. Then, when somebody out front tittered, she realized she had done an appalling thing and, quite apart from any acting she did, she burst into tears.

But for the fact that Bill Bailey had had three years of experience at dramatics in college, "Maid to Measure" might have blown up completely then and there. Bill controlled his quick flash of consternation and ad libbed:

"It is heavenly, Mary Melissa," said he, and that wasn't in the script at all. "Heavenly for me. Please cry all you like. Tears are to be enjoyed when love is behind them."

He held her very close so that she cried into his big chest, and he patted her and snuggled her as a true lover might have done. He rested his head on her hair, and fingered her curls gently, and turned slightly once to kiss the side of her head.

He was standing at the right side of the stage, not two feet from a bower of vines that formed a wing. All at once he perceived Lola Montesa standing near them, concealed from the audience but anxiously watching. Lola had played a guitar and sung a Mexican love song—a bit of extra business Bill had worked in just in order to use Lola's Mexican beauty to advantage. He could whisper instructions to her now, unheard out front.

"Play, Lola!" he ordered. "Play and sing again, off stage! Quick!"

She nodded. She had sensed something of the mixup out there anyway.

"Moonlight is beaming
And starlight is gleaming,
I'm dreaming of you, my
Chiquita—"

She sang it in low, subtle tones, her deep contralto and her guitar chords just seeming to float exquisitely into one's consciousness from nowhere. It was a lovely song—"Cielito Lindo"—and the unseen musician quite captured the mood of the story, or rather enhanced it, built upon it, caused the audience entirely to forget the trivial slip in Gayle's tongue a moment ago. And in this wholly impromptu scene, even the electricians caught the spirit and lowered their lights delicately, fading the brighter glow into a sort of gloaming, then into a twilight blue.

Bill took advantage of the moment to coach Gayle.

"Everything's ducky now, kid," he whispered into her ear. "We've still got 'em—more than ever! It's a swell scene."

There was more of it, five minutes more. And then the play was over. But the tumult and the shouting—figuratively speaking—lasted for long after that. There were six curtain calls, after which the enthusiastic audience swamped Bill and Gayle right on the stage.

"I have already telegraphed Hollywood," Cholly Farrington proclaimed in the next morning's Chronicle-Post. "I know the talent scouts there. If we can't send two young stars immediately to that cinema capital, then I've suddenly turned color blind. Too bad you had to miss the play.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

SIGNAL THE RIGHT SUIT

WHENEVER it is obvious that your partner is going to shift from the suit in which he wins a trick, to one of the other side suits, it is your job to let him know which you prefer. This is done by experienced campaigners by means of a signal with the card you play to his trick. If it is clearly your lowest card in that suit, you indicate a desire for a lead of the lower-ranking side suit on the next trick. If it is definitely a higher-than-your-lowest card, you are positively asking him to shift to the higher-ranking of the other two suits.

♦ K J 6 3
♣ K J 6 3

If your partner leads the A of your heart suit against South's 4-Spades, and the above hand is laid down as dummy, the correct card for you to play on that trick is clearly delineated if you hold any of the following hands:

1. ♠ 5 4 ♥ K Q 8 4 2 ♦ A Q 7 ♣ 7 5 2
2. ♠ 5 4 ♥ K Q 8 4 2 ♦ 7 5 2 ♣ A Q 7
3. ♠ 5 4 3 ♥ K Q 8 4 3 2 ♦ None ♣ 7 5 4 2
4. ♠ 5 4 3 ♥ K Q 8 4 3 2 ♦ 7 5 4 2 ♣ None

With any of these, you stand a very good chance of beating the contract if your partner makes the correct shift, and apparently hardly any chance if he makes the wrong one. Since the dummy shows exactly the same holding in both diamonds and clubs, your partner has nothing to guide him except the card you play.

You urgently wish a diamond lead in the case of hands No. 1 and No. 3, and command its lead by playing the heart 8 on the first trick. With Nos. 2 and 4, you just as urgently desire a lead of clubs, which you indicate with a play of your heart 2, the lowest you can give him.

The low signal is not quite as clear-cut as that of the high card asking for a diamond lead, for the simple reason that there is a slight amount of ambiguity attached to it. Your partner might think you were merely telling him not to repeat the suit and therefore preferred a lead of trumps to cut down the ruffing possibilities for the declarer. However, if your hand happened to be such that you preferred a trump lead, your best play would be the 4, neither emphatically high nor low.

If East leads the heart A and 4, how should North play for his unsoundly-bid contract of 6-No Trumps?

Dr. Aspinall To Address Seniors At Oakland High

Exercises Set for June 13; Sermon To Be Given by the Rev. Mr. Sprague

OAKLAND, Md., June 2—Senior week activities for Oakland High school graduates will get under way on Sunday evening, with the sermon to the graduates and various events will then be scheduled until the following Friday.

The Rev. Minor Sprague, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, Oakland, will deliver the sermon to the graduates in the high school auditorium at 8 o'clock p. m.

Class night exercises on Tuesday, June 11, will include presentation of three one-act plays, "Dress Reversal," "She Was only a Farmer's Daughter," and "Johnny Oh." Other features also are planned.

Dr. Richard Aspinall, assistant to the president of West Virginia university, Morgantown, has been secured to deliver the commencement address on June 13. Dr. Aspinall spoke here at commencement two years ago. Diplomas to the school's 103 graduates will be awarded by Walter W. Dawson, president of the board of education.

Foster D. Bittle, principal, stated that the seniors were planning to hold a banquet sometime prior to graduation but the exact time and place had not been decided.

Julius C. Renninger, president of the Alumni association, and Mrs. Paul Turney, secretary, were uncertain about having an alumni dance, as is usually the custom during senior week.

Warden Finds Fawn

Elmer Haulenbeek, game warden at Deep Creek Lake, found in the woods near Rainbow Inn a recently born fawn. The animal was probably not more than two days old. Mr. Haulenbeek took the fawn to his home where he is endeavoring to keep it alive by feeding it milk. The fawn stands about thirty inches high, and as is usual is much-spotted. "It's about all legs and the cutest thing you ever saw," he said when he reported his find.

It is presumed that dogs frightened the mother of the fawn away, and before she could hide it, which is the way these animals do when their young are unable to travel with the older deer.

Primary Reports Filed

All candidates in the recent primary spent a total of $3,006.33 in their local campaigns, according to reports filed by campaign managers with the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Albert G. Ross.

Major contributions came from the headquarters of the various candidates, the reports show. A. T. Matthews, campaign manager for Senator Radcliffe, received $1,050 and spent $966.33, mostly for messenger service; William R. Offutt, campaign manager for Howard Bruce, received $1,590 and expended the amount mostly in messenger service and transportation. Lawrence M. Fraley, campaign manager for Walter Johnson, received $100 and expended $100; Julius C. Renninger, campaign manager for former Governor Harry W. Nice, received $300 and expended $300, mostly for hauling and messenger service.

Miss Field Graduates

Miss Ruth Field, of Oakland, who graduates this year from Western Maryland College, Westminster, is one of six students who will be graduated "summa cum laude" (with highest honor). Miss Field maintained during her four years at least an "A" grade in forty percent of her semester hours; a "B" grade in forty percent and passed with distinction a three-hour oral and written comprehensive examination. The announcement was made in the school paper recently.

Miss Field became a member of the Argonaut society by reason of her high scholastic standing. She was also on the Dean's list. She was active in athletics throughout her four years there, being vice-president of the Women's Athletic association, secretary-treasurer of the Student Activities Committee, was girls' sports editor of the college paper for the past two years, and also of this year's yearbook. She was also a member of the Glee club and Student Orchestra Association.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Field, and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Lantz Blaney, Masontown, W. Va., will leave Sunday for Westminster to attend commencement exercises which will be held Monday, June 3.

Sales Tax Collections In West Virginia Set All-Time Record

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—Collection of gross sales taxes, with another month of the fiscal year remaining, have passed the $14,000,000 mark for the first time in the tax's 20-year history, division supervisor Ernest H. Gilbert, Jr., of the tax department has reported.

Collections, as of May 31, amounted to $14,131,753.17, compared with a previous high mark of $13,067,461.85, for the full fiscal period ended June 30, 1937.

Receipts on May 31, last year were $12,249,120.57.

Industries predicated upon the state's natural resources paid $4,384,250.33 of the total tax so far this year, against $3,493,864.54 in the 1939 period.

Coal remained the big producer with a tax payment of $2,662,019.75, while gas was next with $1,443,314.59.

FACES WAR HORRORS

P. G. Wodehouse

Reports in London declare P. G. Wodehouse, popular English novelist and creator of Jeeves, was caught in Le Tourquet, France, by the German invasion. Wodehouse, accompanied by his wife, is said to have been forced to remain in the city when his car broke down.

Mt. Savage School Exercises Sunday

The Rev. Francis J. Egan Will Present Diplomas to Grammar Pupils

MT. SAVAGE, June 2—Graduation exercises for St. Patrick's grammar school will be held Sunday morning after the 9:30 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church. The Rev. Francis J. Egan will present diplomas and address the graduates. The girls in the class will wear dresses of pastel shades and the boys will wear dark suits and white shirts. Each member of the graduating class will be accompanied by a small diploma bearer. These children are selected from the first and second grades. The little girls will wear the same shades as the graduates they accompany and the boys will wear white suits. Members of the graduating class are the Misses Polly McDermitt, Anna Marie Regan, Helen King, Virginia Retzer, Louise Malloy, Mildred Emerick, Alice Purbaugh, Joan Boyle and Joseph Carter, Earl Joe Walsh, Leonard Mattingly, Francis Morriss, Stanley Weimer, Francis Williams, Billie Norris and John Schriver.

Winfield Rites Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah Winfield were held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Methodist church. Rev. George D. Sampson officiated. The pallbearers were Earl Orndoff, Charles Winebrenner, Robert Barth, Earl Cease, Lester Day and David Crump. Burial was in the Methodist cemetery.

Brief Mention

Timothy Kenney was injured while at work in the Mt. Savage brick yard Saturday morning when a large tile brick fell on his foot, mashing it badly. Several stitches were required.

The graduating class of St. Patrick's grammar school will hold a picnic Wednesday, June 12, at Minkes' beach.

Mrs. Victor Bauman Speaks at Banquet

Addresses Mothers and Daughters Function at Flintstone

FLINTSTONE, June 2—Mrs. Victor Bauman, formerly Miss Gladys Bull, Home Economics instructor of Fort Hill High school, Cumberland, addressed the annual Mother's and Daughter's banquet of the Betty Lamp Club, of Flintstone high school, whose members are students of the local school Home Economic department, here Friday in the school auditorium.

A real banquet dinner with all its trimmings was served up in the best of style by the young men of the Flintstone chapter of Future Farmers of America, under the direction of their F.F.A. advisor, Mrs. J. S. Roland, and won the praises of all the guests.

Approximately ninety guests were present.

The entertainment program included dinner music, by Misses Freda Bible, Jane Hebner, and Betty Twigg.

Invocation was given by Miss Freda Durr.

The program: Duet, by Misses Marceline Shircliffe, Betty Twigg, accompanied at the piano by Miss Jane Hebner; Song by the group—"Follow the Gleam"; Stunt—Stage Coach; Recitation—Geraldine Perdew; Playlet—"Mrs. Willis's Will," by members of the club; Maryland Betty Lamp Club song, by members of the local club; Remarks—Miss Margaret Garlitz; Song, "Mother", by the Flintstone Girls.

The program was climaxed by an impressive candle light service.

Officers of the Betty Lamp Club are: Miss Helen Willison, president; Miss Pearl Myres, vice-president; Miss La Verne Dolly, secretary; Miss Virginia Twigg, treasurer.

The banquet was arranged by Miss Imogene Clifford, head of the Home Economics department.

Meyers Rites Held

Funeral rites for Mrs. Senora Jane Meyers, 83, wife of the late F. C. Meyers, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Stephen L. Curtis, Tacoma Park, were conducted Sunday afternoon at Flintstone Brethren church by the Rev. Donald Hunter, of Seven Day Adventist church, Takoma Park, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Howard Whiteacre, pastor of the Flintstone Brethren church.

Mrs. Meyers was a member of the Seven Day Adventist church, Johnstown, Pa. Her husband, F. C. Meyers, preceded her in death three months ago, while they were visiting relatives near Johnstown. Surviving are two other daughters, Mrs. Harrison Allison of this place and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Ivor Lawrence, Takoma Park. One sister, Mrs. Martha Lavely, Gallitzin, Pa., twelve grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Interment was in the Odd Fellows cemetery, near Flintstone.

Explain Mattress Project

More than thirty low income families of this section gathered here Saturday night to hear Miss Maude A. Bean, home demonstration agent, and the Local Land Use committee, Mrs. J. S. Roland, Mrs. Willie Perrin and James House, explain the mattress project, which will be available to some 120 families throughout Allegany county, which is the set quota in unit one. This quota must be reached before Allegany county can qualify for the project.

Approximately twenty applications were made from this area Saturday night. More are expected this week. The deadline for applications is set for Saturday, June 8. Applications must be in the county agent's office in Cumberland on that date.

Flintstone Briefs

"Sulphur and Molasses," a mystery comedy, presented by the Seniors of the Oldtown high school, will be given Wednesday night in the Flintstone high school auditorium.

Detroit Defeats Washington 8-6

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers clawed the Senators for an 8-6 victory today, their second in a row over Washington.

With Barnie McCoskey on first, Hank Greenberg homered to give Detroit a two-run lead in the first. The Tigers continued their assault on Rene Monteagudo in the second when Paul Trout singled and went to third on Dick Bartell's double and both crossed the plate on McCosky's single.

A wild throw by Jim Pofahl helped the Tigers add three more in the third. In came Sid Hudson who held Detroit hitless for five innings until relieved by a pinch hitter.

Eckhart Wins in 15th Over Mt. Savage in Top Pen-Mar League Game

Eckhart's 15-inning victory over Mt. Savage at Mt. Savage topped the tilts in the Pen-Mar League yesterday, Eckhart tying up the score in the ninth with two runs then tallying three in the 15th for an 11-8 triumph.

Goldsworthy, McKenzie and Filsinger shared the hurling chores for Eckhart with Carter and Beall dividing the toil for Savage.

Bard lost to Lonaconing at Bard, 8 to 2, Stoup's southpaw hurling stopping the Bard batters who could get only four hits, two by Scritchfield and the other pair by Leonard. Stoup fanned seven batters.

Coney came through with 13 hits including doubles by Thompson and Stoup.

Wellersburg upset Centreville 7 to 5 at Wellersburg, and the Cumberland Merchants bowed to Barton at Barton, 6 to 3, due to a bad first inning when the home team garnered five runs. A walk, three errors and Robinette's triple just about sewed up the ball game. Robinson and L. Lashbaugh each had two safeties for Barton while Doak and Lewis led the Cumberland attack.

Girl Fatally Injured

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—Peggy Marie Holstein, 4, was fatally injured by an automobile last night while playing near her home.

City Police Sergeant H. B. Moles said Francis Burks reported that the child darted from behind a parked car into the path of his taxicab. Burks was booked on a technical charge pending hearing, Moles said.

Schoolboy Baseball Titles Still in Air

With the Tri-State Interscholastic Baseball Conference and city schoolboy diamond titles still up in the air, two crucial games will be played this week and upon these contests will depend whether Allegany and Fort Hill will meet in a return game.

The Sentinels, unbeaten in two intra-city skirmishes, will seek the championship tomorrow when they entertain LaSalle in a return tussle. The North Enders will wind up their season by meeting Beall at Frostburg later this week.

If Fort Hill loses to LaSalle, then the Allegany-Fort Hill clash would have to be played to decide city honors. If this happens and the Campers should win from the Hillmen there would be a three-way tie for the crown, which would probably stand. Allegany and Fort Hill were scheduled to clash last Friday but the game was rained out.

Beall is on top in the conference and can clinch the crowd by besting LaSalle. A loss for the Frostburg team would scramble the race and give Paw Paw, Fort Hill and Allegany a chance for at least tie for the title.

W. Va. Tennis Champs To Place Crown on Block

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP) — A 19-year-old boy and a girl of the same age will place their closed tennis crowns on the block June 19-23 to defend them against the field in the annual state tournament.

Twice in a row the singles championship in the men's division has gone to Deacon Parsons, the Huntington ace who first acquired it in 1938 from Eddie Blickle, his tutor.

Like Parsons, Dorothy Boll of Wheeling won the title in her own division one year and successfully defended it the next.

Both are expected to compete again.

J. Pell Miller, tournament director, announced that competition in the 1940 event will include the usual men's and mixed doubles.

The tournament will be held at the Charleston tennis club.

Conn-Lesnevich Bout Promoter Posts Bond They Make Weight Limit

DETROIT, June 2 (AP) — A $5,000 guarantee that Billy Conn, light heavyweight boxing champion, and challenger Gus Lesnevich would meet the 175-pound weight limit for their 15-round title fight here next Wednesday night was posted with the state boxing commission today by promoter Jack Nelson.

The guarantee — $2,500 by each fighter — had been ordered by Boxing Commissioner John J. Hettche following reports the champion was having difficulty in shedding excess poundage.

Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, reported his fighter weighed 178½ pounds after a long sparring session today. Lesnevich, who took the day off, weighed 178½ yesterday.

Sears No. 1 Slugger For Petersburg High

PETERSBURG, W. Va., June 2.—"Snook" Sears, hard-hitting outfielder, led the Petersburg High Vikings in slugging the past baseball season with an average of .417 for 36 trips to the plate.

In ten games, he collected 15 hits including five doubles and a triple and was tied with Ray Hill for the most stolen bases. He was the only Viking to hit safely in every game. His average is 33 points higher than last season when he snared runnerup honors. Besides patroling the outfield, Sears worked on the mound and received credit for three of his team's victories.

Captain Jim Harman was the only other player to hit over .300. Harmon, in 31 appearances, smacked ten hits, and his mark of .321 is 21 points higher than in 1939.

Hill, veteran Viking hurler who won three of four games, batted .257 for the Red and Black and smashed one of the two Petersburg home runs. Evers Roberts and Stanley Nesselrodt led the "rookies" or first-year men with averages of .240. Batting records follow:

Kelly's Little Joke Costs Barflies Own Drinks

Gerald Griffin, Lexington correspondent, recalls a story on "Shipwreck" Kelly, the old Kentucky University football star, now a Broadway playboy, says "The Louisville Courier-Journal." Kelly walked into a bar and sang out:

"When Kelly drinks everybody drinks."

All the barflies immediately swarmed forward to get a free drink. Kelly drank his and the others tossed theirs off in glee.

Then Kelly ordered up again with "When Kelly drinks again everybody drinks again."

Once more everybody present received a drink, keeping the crew of bartenders busy. Then Kelly tossed half a dollar on the bar and shouted:

"When Kelly pays, everybody pays."

Mermaid Aspires To Be a Thrush

NEW YORK (AP)—Mildred O'Donnell, 17-year-old national junior 500-yard free-style swimming champion, wants to be known even better as a singer some day.

So far her warbling efforts have been confined to impromptu appearances at orchestra mikes but she hopes to take voice culture beginning this fall.

She's also a poet and has been writing verse for the past few years. As might be expected of an athlete who had to get used to cold water, she goes in for realism.

Red Sox Pin Flag Hopes on Southpaw Rookie Mike Harris

The new left-handed hope of the Boston Red Sox is a wiry 22-year-old kid who had to leave the big city to make good. His name is Maurice Harris. Manager Joe Cronin calls him Mike, and the newspaper men call him Mickey. He lives in Queens Village, N. Y., during the off season.

Harris has been pitching in organized baseball only two years. The Red Sox signed him to a Little Rock contract. Little Rock farmed him out one year to Clarksdale, Miss., in the Cotton States league. He won 13 and lost 11. Last year he was farmed out to Scranton in the Eastern League. He won 21 and lost only 4.

Snider Setting Pace For Kitchen Batsmen

Latest batting averages of Candy Kitchen tossers of the South End Booster Softball League show that Snider, with 14 hits in 28 trips, is setting the pace with an even .500.

Holding second place is Hite with .421 for 19 attempts while Pannone is third with .400 for 35 appearances. Lisanti is fourth with .400 for 50 trips while Keller is fifth with .387.

Eight men are hitting over .300. Snider and Pannone lead in hits with 14 apiece while Pannone has tallied the most runs, 17. Batting records follow:

Red Sox in Cellar on Ten Occasions

The Boston Red Sox have finished in the American League cellar 10 times. It is the favorite spot, according to the records.

New York's favorite spot is first place, the Yankees finishing at the top 11 times.

Cleveland has finished third 11 times, Washington is familiar with the depths, too, being in last place 10 times, the same as the Red Sox. St. Louis Browns likes seventh, finishing there eight times.

Detroit has been most often in sixth place, with seven times. Chicago took third or seventh six times.

Grove To Be Honored June 8 in Boston

Bob Grove, 40-year-old Boston Red Sox southpaw pitching his sixteenth season in the majors will be tendered a "day" June 8 when his club faces the Detroit Tigers at Boston. A banquet also will be held that night for Grove.

Paw Paw High's Tossers Compile Enviable Record

PAW PAW, W. Va. June 2.—Coach Arnet Swisher's Paw Paw High baseball team, which recently completed one of the school's most successful seasons, captured the Morgan county championship and still has a chance of sharing Tri-State Conference laurels.

The Swishermen, who won 12 of 15 games, did not lose a contest to a West Virginia rival. All of their defeats were at the hands of Maryland and Pennsylvania schools.

Paw Paw ended its season in first place in the conference but since that time, Beall of Frostburg, Md., which scheduled more loop battles, has taken over the lead.

Roby Big Standout

In Charles Robey, Paw Paw has a scholastic tosser it can well be proud of. As a pitcher, Robey received credit for all of his team's victories and as a slugger, he topped all his mates with an average of .543 for 37 trips to the plate.

Robey worked 96 innings on the slab, struck out 144, issued 23 bases on balls and allowed 63 hits and a dozen earned runs. He led the team in doubles with seven, tied for most triples with three and drove out one home run.

Score 150 Runs

Runner-up batting honors went to Ray Robertson with .513 for 37 attempts. Warren Spring was third with .474. Warren Hare fourth with .409 and Estel Smith fifth with .306. The team as a whole swatted at a .353 pace, averaged ten runs per game and gave opposing clubs an average of three markers each contest.

The only teams to defeat Paw Paw were Hyndman (Pa.) High 6-1, Allegany of Cumberland, Md., 9-7, and Beall of Frostburg, Md., 6-2. Hare, who pitched only six innings, was the loser in two games. The Swishermen gathered 150 runs to 46 for teams played, collected 159 hits to 71 for the opposition and had 47 errors to their rivals' 49. The season record and individual batting averages follow:

Yankees Have Only One Player under 175 Lbs.

The world champion New York Yankees have no pitcher who weighs less than 175 and only one player, Catcher Arndt Jorgens, who weighs less than 170 pounds.

She saw a dress— 100 miles away!

A girl was reading her home-town newspaper, when she saw a dress advertised by a store back home, a hundred miles away. A few days later she was wearing the same dress to a dance!

Magic? No—she had simply discovered how to shop by newspaper!

Newspaper advertising can act as a magic carpet for you, too. It can save you miles of steps, by displaying the stores' merchandise right in your own home. Telling you the important things you would ask about in the store itself—sizes, range of colors, fabric, washability, details of fashion.

The girl bought her dress with utter confidence, because the store's advertisement had told her just what she needed to know—and she knew its printed statement could be trusted. You can buy with equal confidence, because the advertisement is your guarantee that what you buy will be exactly as you saw it in the paper.

Page through this newspaper and notice the wide selection of merchandise—the unexpected chances for saving. You will discover for yourself the new leisure and economy of shopping "the newspaper way!"

Dr. Aspinall To Address Seniors At Oakland High

Exercises Set for June 13; Sermon To Be Given by the Rev. Mr. Sprague

OAKLAND, Md., June 2—Senior week activities for Oakland High school graduates will get under way on Sunday evening, with the sermon to the graduates and various events will then be scheduled until the following Friday.

The Rev. Minor Sprague, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, Oakland, will deliver the sermon to the graduates in the high school auditorium at 8 o'clock p. m.

Class night exercises on Tuesday, June 11, will include presentation of three one-act plays, "Dress Reversal, "She Was only a Farmer's Daughter," and "Johnny Oh." Other features also are planned.

Dr. Richard Aspinall, assistant to the president of West Virginia university, Morgantown, has been secured to deliver the commencement address on June 13. Dr. Aspinall spoke here at commencement two years ago. Diplomas to the school's 103 graduates will be awarded by Walter W. Dawson, president of the board of education.

Foster D. Bittle, principal, stated that the seniors were planning to hold a banquet sometime prior to graduation but the exact time and place had not been decided.

Julius C. Renninger, president of the Alumni association, and Mrs. Paul Turney, secretary, were uncertain about having an alumni dance, as is usually the custom during senior week.

Warden Finds Fawn

Elmer Haulenbeek, game warden at Deep Creek Lake, found in the woods near Rainbow Inn a recently born fawn. The animal was probably not more than two days old. Mr. Haulenbeek took the fawn to his home where he is endeavoring to keep it alive by feeding it milk. The fawn stands about thirty inches high, and as is usual is much-spotted. "It's about all legs and the cutest thing you ever saw," he said when he reported his find.

It is presumed that dogs frightened the mother of the fawn away, and before she could hide it, which is the way these animals do when their young are unable to travel with the older deer.

Primary Reports Filed

All candidates in the recent primary spent a total of $3,006.33 in their local campaigns, according to reports filed by campaign managers with the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Albert G. Ross.

Major contributions came from the headquarters of the various candidates, the reports show. A. T. Matthews, campaign manager for Senator Radcliffe, received $1,050 and spent $966.33, mostly for messenger service; William R. Offutt, campaign manager for Howard Bruce, received $1,590 and expended the amount mostly in messenger service and transportation. Lawrence M. Fraley, campaign manager for Walter Johnson, received $100 and expended $100; Julius C. Renninger, campaign manager for former Governor Harry W. Nice, received $300 and expended $300, mostly for hauling and messenger service.

Miss Field Graduates

Miss Ruth Field, of Oakland, who graduates this year from Western Maryland College, Westminster, is one of six students who will be graduated "summa cum laude" (with highest honor). Miss Field maintained during her four years at least an "A" grade in forty percent of her semester hours; a "B" grade in forty percent and passed with distinction a three-hour oral and written comprehensive examination. The announcement was made in the school paper recently.

Miss Field became a member of the Argonaut society by reason of her high scholastic standing. She was also on the Dean's list. She was active in athletics throughout her four years there, being vice-president of the Women's Athletic association, secretary-treasurer of the Student Activities Committee, was girls' sports editor of the college paper for the past two years, and also of this year's yearbook. She was also a member of the Glee club and Student Orchestra Association.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Field, and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Lantz Blaney, Masontown, W. Va., will leave Sunday for Westminster to attend commencement exercises which will be held Monday, June 3.

Sales Tax Collections In West Virginia Set All-Time Record

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—Collection of gross sales taxes, with another month of the fiscal year remaining, have passed the $14,000,000 mark for the first time in the tax's 20-year history, division supervisor Ernest H. Gilbert, Jr., of the tax department has reported.

Collections, as of May 31, amounted to $14,131,753.17, compared with a previous high mark of $13,067,461.85, for the full fiscal period ended June 30, 1937.

Receipts on May 31, last year were $12,249,120.57.

Industries predicated upon the state's natural resources paid $4,384,250.33 of the total tax so far this year, against $3,493,864.54 in the 1939 period.

Coal remained the big producer with a tax payment of $2,662,019.75, while gas was next with $1,443,314.59.

You would never recognize Santa Barbara, Cal.'s house of correction for what it is. It is built of Moorish tiles, has winding stairways, wrought iron balconies, is framed in a landscape of palm trees and fountains. The outer walls are adorned with trailing vines and bracketed flower pots.

FACES WAR HORRORS

P. G. Wodehouse

Reports in London declare P. G. Wodehouse, popular English novelist and creator of Jeeves, was caught in Le Tourquet, France, by the German invasion. Wodehouse, accompanied by his wife, is said to have been forced to remain in the city when his car broke down.

Detroit Defeats Washington 8-6

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers clawed the Senators for an 8-6 victory today, their second in a row over Washington.

With Barnie McCoskey on first, Hank Greenberg homered to give Detroit a two-run lead in the first. The Tigers continued their assault on Rene Monteagudo in the second when Paul Trout singled and went to third on Dick Bartell's double and both crossed the plate on McCosky's single.

A wild throw by Jim Pofahl helped the Tigers add three more in the third. In came Sid Hudson who held Detroit hitless for five innings until relieved by a pinch hitter.

Eckhart Wins in 15th Over Mt. Savage in Top Pen-Mar League Game

Eckhart's 15-inning victory over Mt. Savage at Mt. Savage topped the tilts in the Pen-Mar League yesterday, Eckhart tying up the score in the ninth with two runs then tallying three in the 15th for an 11-8 triumph.

Goldsworthy, McKenzie and Filsinger shared the hurling chores for Eckhart with Carter and Beall dividing the toil for Savage.

Bard lost to Lonaconing at Bard, 8 to 2, Stoup's southpaw hurling stopping the Bard batters who could get only four hits, two by Scritchfield and the other pair by Leonard. Stoup fanned seven batters.

Coney came through with 13 hits including doubles by Thompson and Stoup.

Wellersburg upset Centreville 7 to 5 at Wellersburg, and the Cumberland Merchants bowed to Barton at Barton, 6 to 3, due to a bad first inning when the home team garnered five runs. A walk, three errors and Robinette's triple just about sewed up the ball game. Robinson and L. Lashbaugh each had two safeties for Barton while Doak and Lewis led the Cumberland attack.

Girl Fatally Injured

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—Peggy Marie Holstein, 4, was fatally injured by an automobile last night while playing near her home.

City Police Sergeant H. B. Moles said Francis Burks reported that the child darted from behind a parked car into the path of his taxicab. Burks was booked on a technical charge pending hearing, Moles said.

Schoolboy Baseball Titles Still in Air

With the Tri-State Interscholastic Baseball Conference and city schoolboy diamond titles still up in the air, two crucial games will be played this week and upon these contests will depend whether Allegany and Fort Hill will meet in a return game.

The Sentinels, unbeaten in two intra-city skirmishes, will seek the championship tomorrow when they entertain LaSalle in a return tussle. The North Enders will wind up their season by meeting Beall at Frostburg later this week.

If Fort Hill loses to LaSalle, then the Allegany-Fort Hill clash would have to be played to decide city honors. If this happens and the Campers should win from the Hillmen there would be a three-way tie for the crown, which would probably stand. Allegany and Fort Hill were scheduled to clash last Friday but the game was rained out.

Beall is on top in the conference and can clinch the crowd by besting LaSalle. A loss for the Frostburg team would scramble the race and give Paw Paw, Fort Hill and Allegany a chance for at least tie for the title.

W. Va. Tennis Champs To Place Crown on Block

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP) — A 19-year-old boy and a girl of the same age will place their closed tennis crowns on the block June 19-23 to defend them against the field in the annual state tournament.

Twice in a row the singles championship in the men's division has gone to Deacon Parsons, the Huntington ace who first acquired it in 1938 from Eddie Blickle, his tutor.

Like Parsons, Dorothy Boll of Wheeling won the title in her own division one year and successfully defended it the next.

Both are expected to compete again.

J. Pell Miller, tournament director, announced that competition in the 1940 event will include the usual men's and mixed doubles.

The tournament will be held at the Charleston tennis club.

Conn-Lesnevich Bout Promoter Posts Bond They Make Weight Limit

DETROIT, June 2 (AP) — A $5,000 guarantee that Billy Conn, light heavyweight boxing champion, and challenger Gus Lesnevich would meet the 175-pound weight limit for their 15-round title fight here next Wednesday night was posted with the state boxing commission today by promoter Jack Nelson.

The guarantee — $2,500 by each fighter — had been ordered by Boxing Commissioner John J. Hettche following reports the champion was having difficulty in shedding excess poundage.

Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, reported his fighter weighed 178½ pounds after a long sparring session today. Lesnevich, who took the day off, weighed 178½ yesterday.

Sears No. 1 Slugger For Petersburg High

PETERSBURG, W. Va., June 2.—"Snook" Sears, hard-hitting outfielder, led the Petersburg High Vikings in slugging the past baseball season with an average of .417 for 36 trips to the plate.

In ten games, he collected 15 hits including five doubles and a triple and was tied with Ray Hill for the most stolen bases. He was the only Viking to hit safely in every game. His average is 33 points higher than last season when he snared runnerup honors. Besides patroling the outfield, Sears worked on the mound and received credit for three of his team's victories.

Captain Jim Harman was the only other player to hit over .300. Harmon, in 31 appearances, smacked ten hits, and his mark of .321 is 21 points higher than in 1939.

Hill, veteran Viking hurler who won three of four games, batted .257 for the Red and Black and smashed one of the two Petersburg home runs. Evers Roberts and Stanley Nesselrodt led the "rookies" or first-year men with averages of .240. Batting records follow:

Kelly's Little Joke Costs Barflies Own Drinks

Gerald Griffin, Lexington correspondent, recalls a story on "Shipwreck" Kelly, the old Kentucky University football star, now a Broadway playboy, says "The Louisville Courier-Journal." Kelly walked into a bar and sang out:

"When Kelly drinks everybody drinks."

All the barflies immediately swarmed forward to get a free drink. Kelly drank his and the others tossed theirs off in glee.

Then Kelly ordered up again with "When Kelly drinks again everybody drinks again."

Once more everybody present received a drink, keeping the crew of bartenders busy. Then Kelly tossed half a dollar on the bar and shouted:

"When Kelly pays, everybody pays."

Mermaid Aspires To Be a Thrush

NEW YORK (AP)—Mildred O'Donnell, 17-year-old national junior 500-yard free-style swimming champion, wants to be known even better as a singer some day.

So far her warbling efforts have been confined to impromptu appearances at orchestra mikes but she hopes to take voice culture beginning this fall.

She's also a poet and has been writing verse for the past few years. As might be expected of an athlete who had to get used to cold water, she goes in for realism.

Red Sox Pin Flag Hopes on Southpaw Rookie Mike Harris

The new left-handed hope of the Boston Red Sox is a wiry 22-year-old kid who had to leave the big city to make good. His name is Maurice Harris. Manager Joe Cronin calls him Mike, and the newspaper men call him Mickey. He lives in Queens Village, N. Y., during the off season.

Harris has been pitching in organized baseball only two years. The Red Sox signed him to a Little Rock contract. Little Rock farmed him out one year to Clarksdale, Miss., in the Cotton States league. He won 13 and lost 11. Last year he was farmed out to Scranton in the Eastern League. He won 21 and lost only 4.

Snider Setting Pace For Kitchen Batsmen

Latest batting averages of Candy Kitchen tossers of the South End Booster Softball League show that Snider, with 14 hits in 28 trips, is setting the pace with an even .500.

Holding second place is Hite with .421 for 19 attempts while Pannone is third with .400 for 35 appearances. Lisanti is fourth with .400 for 50 trips while Keller is fifth with .387.

Eight men are hitting over .300. Snider and Pannone lead in hits with 14 apiece while Pannone has tallied the most runs, 17. Batting records follow:

Red Sox in Cellar on Ten Occasions

The Boston Red Sox have finished in the American League cellar 10 times. It is the favorite spot, according to the records.

New York's favorite spot is first place, the Yankees finishing at the top 11 times.

Cleveland has finished third 11 times, Washington is familiar with the depths, too, being in last place 10 times, the same as the Red Sox. St. Louis Browns likes seventh, finishing there eight times.

Detroit has been most often in sixth place, with seven times. Chicago took third or seventh six times.

Grove To Be Honored June 8 in Boston

Bob Grove, 40-year-old Boston Red Sox southpaw pitching his sixteenth season in the majors will be tendered a "day" June 8 when his club faces the Detroit Tigers at Boston. A banquet also will be held that night for Grove.

Paw Paw High's Tossers Compile Enviable Record

PAW PAW, W. Va. June 2.—Coach Arnet Swisher's Paw Paw High baseball team, which recently completed one of the school's most successful seasons, captured the Morgan county championship and still has a chance of sharing Tri-State Conference laurels.

The Swishermen, who won 12 of 15 games, did not lose a contest to a West Virginia rival. All of their defeats were at the hands of Maryland and Pennsylvania schools.

Paw Paw ended its season in first place in the conference but since that time, Beall of Frostburg, Md., which scheduled more loop battles, has taken over the lead.

Roby Big Standout

In Charles Robey, Paw Paw has a scholastic tosser it can well be proud of. As a pitcher, Robey received credit for all of his team's victories and as a slugger, he topped all his mates with an average of .543 for 37 trips to the plate.

Robey worked 96 innings on the slab, struck out 144, issued 23 bases on balls and allowed 63 hits and a dozen earned runs. He led the team in doubles with seven, tied for most triples with three and drove out one home run.

Score 150 Runs

Runner-up batting honors went to Ray Robertson with .513 for 37 attempts. Warren Spring was third with .474. Warren Hare fourth with .409 and Estel Smith fifth with .306. The team as a whole swatted at a .353 pace, averaged ten runs per game and gave opposing clubs an average of three markers each contest.

The only teams to defeat Paw Paw were Hyndman (Pa.) High 6-1, Allegany of Cumberland, Md., 9-7, and Beall of Frostburg, Md., 6-2. Hare, who pitched only six innings, was the loser in two games. The Swishermen gathered 150 runs to 46 for teams played, collected 159 hits to 71 for the opposition and had 47 errors to their rivals' 49. The season record and individual batting averages follow:

Yankees Have Only One Player under 175 Lbs.

The world champion New York Yankees have no pitcher who weighs less than 175 and only one player, Catcher Arndt Jorgens, who weighs less than 170 pounds.

She saw a dress— 100 miles away!

A girl was reading her home-town newspaper, when she saw a dress advertised by a store back home, a hundred miles away. A few days later she was wearing the same dress to a dance!

Magic? No—she had simply discovered how to shop by newspaper!

Newspaper advertising can act as a magic carpet for you, too. It can save you miles of steps, by displaying the stores' merchandise right in your own home. Telling you the important things you would ask about in the store itself—sizes, range of colors, fabric, washability, details of fashion.

The girl bought her dress with utter confidence, because the store's advertisement had told her just what she needed to know—and she knew its printed statement could be trusted. You can buy with equal confidence, because the advertisement is your guarantee that what you buy will be exactly as you saw it in the paper.

Page through this newspaper and notice the wide selection of merchandise—the unexpected chances for saving. You will discover for yourself the new leisure and economy of shopping "the newspaper way!"

Dates Assigned For Frostburg Bible School

Council of Church Women Will Act as Sponsor, June 17 to July 3

Representatives of Eight Churches Are Named on Committee

FROSTBURG, June 2 — Frostburg's Daily Vacation Bible school, sponsored by the Frostburg Council of Church Women, will be held from June 17 to July 3, every week morning excepting Saturday. The school will be divided into four departments: the pre-school for children of pre-school age, the primary for students for the one, two and three school grades, the junior for children of the four, five and six school grades, and the intermediate for children of the seven, eight and nine school grades.

The committee in charge of the school consists of representatives from eight Frostburg churches as follows: Mrs. William J. Elvin, Presbyterian, chairman; Mrs. Charles Harbel, Salem Reformed; Mrs. W. D. Reese, Welsh Baptist Memorial; Mrs. Marshall Lewis, St. Paul's Lutheran; Mrs. Emily Stewart, First English Baptist; Mrs. Chris Walbert, Zion Evangelical and Reformed; Mrs. Myron T. Lehr, First Methodist; Miss Eleanor Norris, Congregational; Mrs. Bray Thompson, Church of the Brethren.

Mrs. Norris A. Lineweaver, Eckhart, will be superintendent of the school and will be assisted by a staff of capable instructors. The use of Beall high school has been offered for the use of the school but it has not been determined whether to use the high school or have the school in local churches. The council of St. Paul's Lutheran church offered the use of the lecture room and auditorium of the church for a section of the school, and several other churches are expected to take the same action.

Mrs. Lineweaver, accompanied by Mrs. William J. Elvin, visited eight Frostburg Sunday schools Sunday morning and made a plea for support for the vacation school. She expressed a special desire to have children without Sunday school affiliation attend.

Mrs. Lineweaver stated today that the staff of instructors and the places of holding the school sessions would be announced this week.

Chorus To Entertain

The Men's chorus of First Methodist church will entertain the Frostburg Rotary club with a program at the luncheon to be held tomorrow, 6 p. m., at the Gunter hotel dining room.

The program will include four numbers by the chorus as follows: The Sailor's Chorus, by Perry; Kentucky Babe, by Geibel; The Song of the Jolly Roger, by Candish, and On Great Lone Hills, by Sibelius-Matthews. There also will be a duet, Watchman, What of the Night, by Prof. Arthur Thomas and Oliver W. Simons, and a number of solos by Prof. Thomas.

The chorus is made up as follows: First tenors, Andrew Nelson, Walter Lee Plummer, William B. Yates; second tenors, Arthur W. Taylor, John Reed, Walter Cook; first basses, Dr. John Jump, Pinkney Holmes and Herbert M. Griffith; second basses, W. W. Baker, Oliver W. Simons and William Plummer. Prof. Arthur Thomas is director and Miss Mabel Myers will play the piano accompaniments.

Robinette and Bessie Robinette, his wife, Julia Smith, Lola E. Robosson and Frank Robosson, her husband, Letha Willison, John Willison and Frances Willison, his wife, Sanford Robinette and Lena Robinette, his wife, Hazel Robinette and Mabel Robinette, his wife, Homer Robinette and Marie Robinette, his wife, Mae Shuman and William Shuman, her husband, Indalee Wolfe and Herbert Wolfe, her husband, Hazel Baker, Ora Wilt and Martin Wilt, her husband, Pauline Kerchival and Preston Kerchival, her husband, Ethel Davis and Fred Davis, her husband, Milton Baker, Thomas Robinette, Amanda Ruby, Amanda Robinette, Meta Robinette, George Earl Robinette and Velma Robinette, his wife, Evelyn Brodton and Ray Brodton, her husband, Perry Robinette and Daisy Robinette, his wife, Anna Robinette, Zella Lombard and Homer Lombard, her husband, and Rebecca Reuding and August Reuding, her husband.

The object and purpose of this suit is to obtain a decree in the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland, appointing a Trustee to sell the real estate of Mary Robinette and Ida Robinette, both deceased, located in Flintstone, Allegany County, Maryland, and to divide the proceeds of said sale among the several parties in accordance with their respective rights and interests therein.

The Bill states that Mary Robinette and Ida Robinette were in their lifetime seized and possessed, as tenants in common, of a parcel of land more particularly described in a deed from Annie Wilson, dated December 9, 1899, and recorded in Liber No. 85, folio 545, one of the Land Records of Allegany County.

That Ida Robinette died intestate in 1929, while Mary Robinette died June 20, 1939, and by her Last Will and Testament recorded in Liber "S", folio 117, one of the Wills Records of Allegany County, directed her one-half interest in said property to be sold at public or private sale, and the proceeds equally divided among Thomas Robinette, H. B. Robinette, Thornton E. Robinette and Amanda Ruby. That the Executor of said will has been unable for two years to sell the undivided one-half interest of his Testatrix in accordance therewith.

That Ida Robinette left surviving her the following brothers and sisters and children and grandchildren of deceased brothers and sisters:

Robinette, a son, deceased, intermarried with Meta Robinette, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; George Earl Robinette, a son, intermarried with Velma Robinette, of Wynnewood, Pennsylvania; Evelyn Brodton, a daughter, intermarried with Ray Brodton, of Everett, Pennsylvania; Perry Robinette, a son, intermarried with Daisy Robinette, of Everett, Pennsylvania; Thornton Robinette, a brother, deceased, leaving surviving him his second wife, Anna Robinette, of Petersburg, Virginia, and the following children: Zella Lombard, a daughter, intermarried with Homer Lombard, of Jamestown, New York; Rebecca Reuding, a daughter, intermarried with August Reuding, of Baltimore City, Maryland; that all the parties to these proceedings are adults.

The bill further stated that the property is not susceptible of partition without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interests therein; and that, in order to make division of said interests, it will be necessary to have the real estate sold and the proceeds divided amongst the parties according to their several interests.

The bill then prays for the appointment of a Trustee to make said sale and a division of the proceeds among those entitled thereto.

Since the filing of said bill, it has been discovered that the following parties are not residents of Allegany County, Maryland, but are residents of the State of Pennsylvania: Charles Brant, Benjamin Troutman and Pearl Troutman, his wife.

It is thereupon this 25th day of May, 1940, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, in Equity, ordered that notice be given Minnie Enlow and Gilbert Enlow, her husband, Harvey Elbin, Walter Robinette and Adda Robinette, his wife, William H. Robinette, David Shannon Robinette, Bessie V. Robinette, John Brant, Lena Cox, Eva Gill, Emory Troutman, Albert Smith, Ray Smith, Julia Smith, Pauline Kerchival and Preston Kerchival, her husband, Ethel Davis and Fred Davis, her husband, Milton Baker, Thomas Robinette, Amanda Ruby, Amanda Robinette, Meta Robinette, George Earl Robinette and Velma Robinette, his wife, Evelyn Brodton and Ray Brodton, her husband, Perry Robinette and Daisy Robinette, his wife, Anna Robinette, Zella Lombard and Homer Lombard, her husband, Charles Brant, Benjamin Troutman and Pearl Troutman, his wife, all non-residents of the State of Maryland, by causing a copy of this Order to be published once a week for at least four successive weeks on or before the 27th day of June, 1940, in some newspaper published in Allegany County, warning them, and each of them, to be and appear in this Court on or before the 13th day of July, 1940, and answer the premises and abide by and perform such decree as the Court may deem proper.

A. R. Douglas vs. Metropolitan Life Company, a Corporation and Isabelle Deal.

No. 15660 Equity
In the Circuit Court for Allegany County

The object of this suit is to procure a Decree reforming an insurance policy issued by the Metroplitan Life Insurance Company upon the life of David L. Deal.

The bill states that said policy was issued January 1st, 1938, for the sum of $2,500.00 providing for an additional $2,500.00 in the event of accidental death and that A. R. Douglas with whom the said David L. Deal for many years resided and by whom he was employed for a long period of time paid the premiums on said policy. That the said David L. Deal at the time said policy was issued was nineteen years of age and that due to mistake, the name of Isabelle Deal was placed in said policy as beneficiary by the agent of the said Insurance Company and that after said policy was issued the said David L. Deal defaulted in the payment of said premiums, whereupon said premiums were paid by the said A. R. Douglas and in September, 1939, the said David L. Deal directed the said Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to change the beneficiary therein to A. R. Douglas and executed and delivered to said Company a written order furnished by the Company

Dates Assigned For Frostburg Bible School

Council of Church Women Will Act as Sponsor, June 17 to July 3

Representatives of Eight Churches Are Named on Committee

FROSTBURG, June 2 — Frostburg's Daily Vacation Bible school, sponsored by the Frostburg Council of Church Women, will be held from June 17 to July 3, every week morning excepting Saturday. The school will be divided into four departments: the pre-school for children of pre-school age, the primary for students for the one, two and three school grades, the junior for children of the four, five and six school grades, and the intermediate for children of the seven, eight and nine school grades.

The committee in charge of the school consists of representatives from eight Frostburg churches as follows: Mrs. William J. Elvin, Presbyterian, chairman; Mrs. Charles Harbel, Salem Reformed; Mrs. W. D. Reese, Welsh Baptist Memorial; Mrs. Marshall Lewis, St. Paul's Lutheran; Mrs. Emily Stewart, First English Baptist; Mrs. Chris Walbert, Zion Evangelical and Reformed; Mrs. Myron T. Lehr, First Methodist; Miss Eleanor Norris, Congregational; Mrs. Bray Thompson, Church of the Brethren.

Mrs. Norris A. Lineweaver, Eckhart, will be superintendent of the school and will be assisted by a staff of capable instructors. The use of Beall high school has been offered for the use of the school but it has not been determined whether to use the high school or have the school in local churches. The council of St. Paul's Lutheran church offered the use of the lecture room and auditorium of the church for a section of the school, and several other churches are expected to take the same action.

Mrs. Lineweaver, accompanied by Mrs. William J. Elvin, visited eight Frostburg Sunday schools Sunday morning and made a plea for support for the vacation school. She expressed a special desire to have children without Sunday school affiliation attend.

Mrs. Lineweaver stated today that the staff of instructors and the places of holding the school sessions would be announced this week.

Chorus To Entertain

The Men's chorus of First Methodist church will entertain the Frostburg Rotary club with a program at the luncheon to be held tomorrow, 6 p. m., at the Gunter hotel dining room.

The program will include four numbers by the chorus as follows: The Sailor's Chorus, by Perry; Kentucky Babe, by Geibel; The Song of the Jolly Roger, by Candish, and On Great Lone Hills, by Sibelius-Matthews. There also will be a duet, Watchman, What of the Night, by Prof. Arthur Thomas and Oliver W. Simons, and a number of solos by Prof. Thomas.

The chorus is made up as follows: First tenors, Andrew Nelson, Walter Lee Plummer, William B. Yates; second tenors, Arthur W. Taylor, John Reed, Walter Cook; first basses, Dr. John Jump, Pinkney Holmes and Herbert M. Griffith; second basses, W. W. Baker, Oliver W. Simons and William Plummer. Prof. Arthur Thomas is director and Miss Mabel Myers will play the piano accompaniments.

James A. Yates Dies

James Allard Yates, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Yates, Grahamtown, died Saturday morning at the Miners' hospital, following an operation. Besides his parents, a sister, Marie, and two brothers, Henry and Ellis, survive.

Alderton, Mae Helman and Louis Helman, her husband, Benjamin Troutman and Pearl Troutman, his wife, Albert Smith, Ray Smith, Frederick Troutman and Nettie Troutman, his wife, Charles Troutman and Ethel Troutman, his wife, Blanche Carr and Prichard Carr, her husband, Harry O. Robinette and Bessie Robinette, his wife, Julia Smith, Lola E. Robosson and Frank Robosson, her husband, Letha Willison, John Willison and Frances Willison, his wife, Sanford Robinette and Lena Robinette, his wife, Hazel Robinette and Mabel Robinette, his wife, Homer Robinette and Marie Robinette, his wife, Mae Shuman and William Shuman, her husband, Indalee Wolfe and Herbert Wolfe, her husband, Hazel Baker, Ora Wilt and Martin Wilt, her husband, Pauline Kerchival and Preston Kerchival, her husband, Ethel Davis and Fred Davis, her husband, Milton Baker, Thomas Robinette, Amanda Ruby, Amanda Robinette, Meta Robinette, George Earl Robinette and Velma Robinette, his wife, Evelyn Brodton and Ray Brodton, her husband, Perry Robinette and Daisy Robinette, his wife, Anna Robinette, Zella Lombard and Homer Lombard, her husband, and Rebecca Reuding and August Reuding, her husband.

The object and purpose of this suit is to obtain a decree in the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland, appointing a Trustee to sell the real estate of Mary Robinette and Ida Robinette, both deceased, located in Flintstone, Allegany County, Maryland, and to divide the proceeds of said sale among the several parties in accordance with their respective rights and interests therein.

The Bill states that Mary Robinette and Ida Robinette were in their lifetime seized and possessed, as tenants in common, of a parcel of land more particularly described in a deed from Annie Wilson, dated December 9, 1899, and recorded in Liber No. 85, folio 545, one of the Land Records of Allegany County.

That Ida Robinette died intestate in 1929, while Mary Robinette died June 20, 1939, and by her Last Will and Testament recorded in Liber "S", folio 117, one of the Wills Records of Allegany County, directed her one-half interest in said property to be sold at public or private sale, and the proceeds equally divided among Thomas Robinette, H. B. Robinette, Thornton E. Robinette and Amanda Ruby. That the Executor of said will has been unable for two years to sell the undivided one-half interest of his Testatrix in accordance therewith.

That Ida Robinette left surviving her the following brothers and sisters and children and grandchildren of deceased brothers and sisters:

Troutman, a sister, intermarried with Frank Troutman, both deceased, leaving surviving them the following children and children of deceased children: Harry Troutman, a son, of Allegany County, Maryland, intermarried with Lydia Troutman, deceased; Eva Gill, a daughter, of Parsons, West Virginia, intermarried with Elmer Gill, deceased; Emory Troutman, a son, of Columbus, Ohio, intermarried with Elizabeth Troutman, deceased; Thomas Troutman, a son, intermarried with Effie Troutman, of Allegany County, Maryland; Alberta T. Alderton, a daughter, of Allegany County, Maryland, intermarried with Cecil Alderton, deceased; Josephine Kight, a daughter, deceased, leaving surviving her, Mae Helman, a daughter, intermarried with Louis Helman, of Allegany County, Maryland; Benjamin Troutman, a son, intermarried with Pearl Troutman, of Allegany County, Maryland; Katherine Smith, a daughter, intermarried with Keyser Smith, both deceased, leaving surviving them the following children: Albert Smith, an unmarried son, of Akron, Ohio; Ray Smith, an unmarried son, of Akron, Ohio; Charles Troutman, a son intermarried with Rose Troutman, both deceased, leaving surviving them the following children: Frederick Troutman, a son, intermarried with Nettie Troutman, of Allegany County, Maryland; Charles Troutman, a son, intermarried with Ethel Troutman, of Allegany County, Maryland; Nora Troutman, an unmarried daughter, who died intestate; Blanche Carr, a daughter, a daughter, intermarried with Pritchard Carr, of Baltimore City, Maryland; Kathryn Perkins, a daughter, intermarried with James Perkins, of Allegany County, Maryland; Jeremiah Robinette, a brother, intermarried with Cas Robinette, both deceased, leaving surviving them the following children: Harry O. Robinette, a son, intermarried with Bessie Robinette, of Allegany County, Maryland; Julia Smith, a daughter, of Artemas, Pennsylvania intermarried with Michael Smith, deceased; Lola N. Robosson, a daughter, intermarried with Frank Robosson, of Allegany County, Maryland; Hanna Willison, a sister, intermarried with Isaiah Willison, both deceased, leaving surviving them the following children: Letha Willison, an unmarried daughter, of Allegany County, Maryland; John Willison, a son, intermarried with Frances Willison, of Allegany County Maryland; Henry Robinette, a brother, intermarried with Jane Robinette, both deceased, leaving surviving them the following children and children of deceased children: Sanford Robinette, a son, intermarried with Lena Robinette, of Allegany County, Maryland; Hazel Robinette, a son, intermarried with Mabel Robinette, of Allegany County, Maryland; Homer Robinette, a son, intermarried with Marie Robinette, of Allegany County, Maryland; Nora Carroll, a daughter, intermarried with Harry Carroll, of Allegany County, Maryland; Alberta Baker, a daughter, deceased, leaving surviving her, her widower, Franklin Baker, of Winchester, Virginia, and the following children: Mae Shuman, a daughter, intermarried with William Shuman, of Baltimore City, Maryland; Indalee Wolfe, a daughter, intermarried with Herbert Wolfe, of Baltimore City, Maryland; Hazel Baker, a daughter, unmarried, of Baltimore City, Maryland; Ora Wilt, a daughter, intermarried with Martin Wilt, of Baltimore City, Maryland; Pauline Kerchival, a daughter, intermarried with Preston Kerchival, of Berryville, Virginia; Ethel Davis, a daughter, intermarried with Fred Davis, of Mineral County, West Virginia; Milton Baker, an unmarried son, of Mineral County, West Virginia; Thomas Robinette, a brother, of Paw Paw, West Virginia, whose wife is deceased; Amanda Ruby, a sister, of Franklinville, New York, intermarried with Columbus Ruby, now deceased; Hanson B. Robinette, a brother, deceased, leaving surviving him his widow, Amanda Robinette, of Everett, Pennsylvania, and the following children: Edward B. Robinette, a son, deceased, intermarried with Meta Robinette, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; George Earl Robinette, a son, intermarried with Velma Robinette, of Wynnewood, Pennsylvania; Evelyn Brodton, a daughter, intermarried with Ray Brodton, of Everett, Pennsylvania; Perry Robinette, a son, intermarried with Daisy Robinette, of Everett, Pennsylvania; Thornton Robinette, a brother, deceased, leaving surviving him his second wife, Anna Robinette, of Petersburg, Virginia, and the following children: Zella Lombard, a daughter, intermarried with Homer Lombard, of Jamestown, New York; Rebecca Reuding, a daughter, intermarried with August Reuding, of Baltimore City, Maryland; that all the parties to these proceedings are adults.

The bill further stated that the property is not susceptible of partition without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interests therein; and that, in order to make division of said interests, it will be necessary to have the real estate sold and the proceeds divided amongst the parties according to their several interests.

The bill then prays for the appointment of a Trustee to make said sale and a division of the proceeds among those entitled thereto.

Since the filing of said bill, it has been discovered that the following parties are not residents of Allegany County, Maryland, but are residents of the State of Pennsylvania: Charles Brant, Benjamin Troutman and Pearl Troutman, his wife.

It is thereupon this 25th day of May, 1940, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, in Equity, ordered that notice be given Minnie Enlow and Gilbert Enlow, her husband, Harvey Elbin, Walter Robinette and Adda Robinette, his wife, William H. Robinette, David Shannon Robinette, Bessie V. Robinette, John Brant, Lena Cox, Eva Gill, Emory Troutman, Albert Smith, Ray Smith, Julia Smith, Pauline Kerchival and Preston Kerchival, her husband, Ethel Davis and Fred Davis, her husband, Milton Baker, Thomas Robinette, Amanda Ruby, Amanda Robinette, Meta Robinette, George Earl Robinette and Velma Robinette, his wife, Evelyn Brodton and Ray Brodton, her husband, Perry Robinette and Daisy Robinette, his wife, Anna Robinette, Zella Lombard and Homer Lombard, her husband, and Rebecca Reuding and August Reuding, her husband, of Allegany County, Maryland, by causing a copy of this Order to be published once a week for at least four successive weeks on or before the 27th day of June, 1940, in some newspaper published in Allegany County, warning them, and each of them, to be and appear in this Court on or before the 13th day of July, 1940, and answer the premises and abide by and perform such decree as the Court may deem proper.

A. R. Douglas vs. Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, a Corporation and Isabelle Deal.

No. 15666 Equity
In the Circuit Court for Allegany County

The object of this suit is to procure a Decree reforming an insurance policy issued by the Metroplitan Life Insurance Company upon the life of David L. Deal.

The bill states that said policy was issued January 1st, 1938, for the sum of $2,500.00 providing for an additional $2,500.00 in the event of accidental death and that A. R. Douglas with whom the said David L. Deal for many years resided and by whom he was employed for a long period of time paid the premiums on said policy. That the said David L. Deal at the time said policy was issued was a minor of the age of nineteen years and that due to mistake, the name of Isabelle Deal was placed in said policy as beneficiary by the agent of the said Insurance Company and that after said policy was issued the said David L. Deal defaulted in the payment of said premiums, whereupon said premiums were paid by the said A. R. Douglas and in September, 1939, the said David L. Deal directed the said Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to change the beneficiary therein to A. R. Douglas and executed and delivered to said Company written order furnished by the Company for that purpose which order was sent to the home office of said company and which was ratified by the said David L

Nineteen West Virginia Cities To Elect Tomorrow

Keyser, Romney And Bayard Will Name Officials

Morgantown Is Largest of Municipalities To Go to Polls

Bulk of "Small Town" Elections in State Set for 1941

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2. (AP)—Nineteen West Virginia cities and communities will elect municipal officers on Tuesday, most of them through ballots which will make no mention of the dominant political parties.

Most of the smaller municipalities in the state confine purely local politics to such parties as the "citizens", the "peoples", "community" and other similar names.

Morgantown is the largest of the municipal corporations which will choose their officers this week. Others include Buckhannon, Keyser, Richwood, Romney, Welch and Roncevete.

The bulk of the so-called "small town" elections in the state are scheduled for June 3, 1941, when about 130 municipalities vote for their officers.

Others holding elections Tuesday are:

Bayard, Capon Bridge, Clark, Glen Dale, Hambleton, Hamlin, New Haven, Nitro, Pineville, Sand Ford, (Layopolis), Smithers and Weirton Heights.

Keyser Seniors Hear Sermon by Fairmont Pastor

Eighty-Five Graduates Attend Services at Grace Church

KEYSER, W. Va., June 2.—The annual sermon to the graduating class at Potomac State school was delivered this evening in Grace Methodist church on Mineral street here by the Rev. Dr. James L. Chestnut, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Fairmont.

Dr. Chestnut, who preaches every Sunday morning Fairmont radio station WMMN, used as his subject "The Valley of Dry Bones."

Eighty-five graduates heard the Fairmont divine's address and a solo by Miss Betty Manion and selections by the Potomac Singers, under the direction of Leonard Withers, head of the department of music at the college.

Mrs. Katherine Moore Church, wife of President E. E. Church and former music department head, was at the organ.

Leatherman Rites Held

Funeral services for Mrs. James A. Leatherman, who died at her home on First street Thursday evening, were held this afternoon at Calvary United Brethren church, with the Rev. R. L. Brill, pastor of the church, of which she was a member, officiating.

The body lay in state from 1:30 until the rites were begun an hour later. Honorary pallbearers were members of the Adult Women's Sunday school class, of which Mrs. Leatherman was president. She was also president of the Ladies' Aid society.

Active pallbearers were Frank Mauzy, Lewis Moran, Glenn Smith Evers Mustot, George C. Ludwig and Ernest Jackson.

Mrs. Leatherman, who was mother of Keyser Police Chief James E Leatherman, is survived by eleven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Interment was in the Duling church cemetery.

Meeting Scheduled

Keyser's McNeill chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet tomorrow evening in Cumberland at the home of Mrs. John McMakin, 528 Louisiana avenue. Cars will leave here at 6:15.

The program will include a paper on Jefferson Davis by Mrs. S. H. Jordan, and a paper on the Jefferson Davis Highway by Mrs. Lena McN. Hutson, chapter president.

Mrs. McMakin, a former Keyser resident, retained her membership in McNeill chapter after moving to Cumberland.

Assisting hostesses will be the Misses Eula and Edith McMakin.

Three To Get Degrees

Three Keyser residents will receive degrees next week, two in education and one in medicine.

Tomorrow Miss Esta Mastellar and Miss Myrtle Berry, both teachers in the Keyser public schools, will be given A. B. degrees in education at

Junior-Senior Dance Attracts Over Hundred

Juniors at Grantsville High Are Hosts to Graduates

GRANTSVILLE, June 2—There were about 115 guests at the Junior-Senior prom, the annual dance given by the Juniors in honor of the graduating class. The affair was held at the school auditorium which was attractively decorated for the occasion. Streamers of blue and gold, the class colors, festooned the ceiling. The stage, which accommodated the orchestra, was arranged to represent a balcony, with the same colors predominating. Music was furnished by Kerin's orchestra, of Oakland. Favors of various colored hats added to the colorfulness of the lovely spring costumes worn by the ladies. Punch was served throughout the evening.

Guests present, in addition to members of the Junior and Senior classes, were Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Getty, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice S. Brookhart, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Elias, Mr. and Mrs. Benny Epstein, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Renninger, Misses Ruth Keefe, Mabel Schlossnagle, Emma Caulk, Margaret Renstrom, Mary Louise Paynich, Messrs. Abel DeWitt, William Grimm, W. E. Tarbell, William Winterberg, Mrs. Frances H. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. Hayward F. Broadwater, Mr. and Mrs. A. Claude Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gortner, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Bender, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Spoerline, and Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Lohr.

Issue Licenses

The 1940-41 hunting licenses went on sale at the offices of the clerks of the county courts Saturday. During the past week the Maryland State Game and Inland Fish Commission sent approximately 82,000 of the new hunting licenses to the various counties over the state. The number is said to be a considerable increase over last year.

West Virginia Author And Pharmacist in Critical Condition

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—Serious illness endangered tonight an unassuming pharmacist-author who might well be known as one of the greatest of the state's historians.

In a critical condition, 54-year-old Dr. Roy Bird Cook, of Charleston has rallied slightly, but his physicians and nurses still fear pneumonia may develop.

Since last Tuesday, when the former chairman of the board of the American Pharmaceutical Association was found unconscious on a wooded hill overlooking the Elk river, every medical aid has been used to prevent his condition from growing worse.

Cook was suffering from exposure and shock when found, doctors said. He had been missing since 3 p. m. Monday and apparently had lain outdoors overnight.

Nineteen West Virginia Cities To Elect Tomorrow

Keyser, Romney And Bayard Will Name Officials

Bulk of "Small Town" Elections in State Set for 1941

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2. (AP)—Nineteen West Virginia cities and communities will elect municipal officers on Tuesday, most of them through ballots which will make no mention of the dominant political parties.

Most of the smaller municipalities in the state confine purely local politics to such parties as the "citizens", the "peoples", "community" and other similar names.

Morgantown is the largest of the municipal corporations which will choose their officers this week. Others include Buckhannon, Keyser, Richwood, Romney, Welch and Roncevete.

The bulk of the so-called "small town" elections in the state are scheduled for June 3, 1941, when about 130 municipalities vote for their officers.

Others holding elections Tuesday are:

Bayard, Capon Bridge, Clark, Glen Dale, Hambleton, Hamlin, New Haven, Nitro, Pineville, Sand Ford, (Layopolis), Smithers and Weirton Heights.

West Virginia Author And Pharmacist in Critical Condition

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—Serious illness endangered tonight an unassuming pharmacist-author who might well be known as one of the greatest of the state's historians.

In a critical condition, 54-year-old Dr. Roy Bird Cook, of Charleston has rallied slightly, but his physicians and nurses still fear pneumonia may develop.

Since last Tuesday, when the former chairman of the board of the American Pharmaceutical Association was found unconscious on a wooded hill overlooking the Elk river, every medical aid has been used to prevent his condition from growing worse.

Cook was suffering from exposure and shock when found, doctors said. He had been missing since 3 p. m. Monday and apparently had lain outdoors overnight.

Garrett Schools Give Art Exhibit

First Event of This Kind Is Presented at Friendsville

FRIENDSVILLE, June 2 — The rural and elementary schools of this community held an art exhibit at Friendsville school. This was the first exhibit of this kind and proved to be very successful. Miss Kate Bannatyne, supervisor of elementary schools in the northern part of the county, directed this and other similar exhibits in Grantsville and Accident.

A more extensive program has been worked out in the various schools this year, principally to encourage and discover more creative ability. The teachers of the rural and the graded schools have met with Miss Jean Young, art instructor, once a week this year for special advice an instruction. Many of the paintings and sketches on display showed originality and skill.

The schools that participated other than the local school, were: White Rock, Mill Run, Selbysport, McCabe, Asher Glade and Trap Run.

Barton To Hold Election Today

Gilbert C. Cooling and Patrick Gallagher Are Candidates

BARTON, June 2—Two commissioners, nominated at a citizen's meeting, May 21, will be voted upon tomorrow between the hours of 5 p. m., and 8 p. m. at the annual town election.

The two named for the position were Gilbert C. Cooling, principal of the Barton high school, and Patrick Gallagher, local business man. The latter is completing his second term of two years as commissioner while Mr. Cooling is a newcomer.

Ralph Wilson, the other commissioner whose term expires this year, declined to run, although many of his friends had urged him to do so.

Voters of the town not wishing to vote for either of the two commissioners have the privilege of "writing-in" the names of the other candidates.

The two holdover commissioners are Maurice Lamberson and William C. Chappell. They will serve for another year or until June 30, 1941, when a mayor and two commissioners will be elected.

Successful candidates in tomorrow's election will take office, July 9, at which time a bailiff and a town clerk will be appointed.

Reds Beat Bees 11-1; Waste Nightcap 2-0

Bucky Walters Is Easy Winner of Ninth Straight

Errors Pave Way for Boston's Victory in Second

Dick Errickson Scores Another Win over Red Hurlers

CINCINNATI, June 2 (AP)—With unbeaten Bucky Walters easing along to his ninth victory, the Cincinnati Reds blasted the first game of today's doubleheader from the Boston Bees, 11 to 1, but wasted almost an opportunity an inning to suffer a 2-0 whitewash in the nightcap at the hands of Dick Errickson.

Three quarters of Cincinnati's pitching was a manager's delight, with Bucky allowing only five hits and Jim Turner and Joe Beggs giving the Bees but four, none until Sebastian Sisti's single in the seventh. A bobbled double-play ball opened the gates for the Boston runs in the eighth inning of the sunset game. Bucky was a trifle wild but the only run scored off him resulted from a fumble by Johnny Rizzo. Johnny compensated by hitting two homers.

Chester Ross opened the Bees' seventh with a single, went to second on an infield play, and scored when Rizzo bobbled Andrews' single. Outside of that the only men to get on base up to the sixth were three walkers and a hit batsman.

All this time the Reds were busy. Three singles peppered out in the first inning. Ernie Lombardi doubled, and Rizzo sent the ball over the left field fence for a total of five runs.

With two out in the third, Bill Werber singled and Rizzo dropped the ball behind the center-field wall for two more runs. In the fifth two singles, Eddie Miller's error, and a fly produced another brace. Lonnie Frey's single, Frank McCormick's double and another single by Werber made the final pair in the sixth.

Only 18 men faced Jim Turner in the first six inings of the second game. The ex-Bee walked Max West in the fifth but Max died immediately in a double play.

Rain began falling in the seventh, and time was called with one out in the eighth.

A 36-minute rest did Turner no good. Al Lopez singled, Miller beat out a roller to third, and then Billy Myers fumbled Errickson's double-play hopper to fill the bases.

Sisti then filed, scoring Lopez, and Moore singled, scoring Miller. Beggs took over but the damage was done.

Babe's Home Run Record Likely to Stand in '40

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, June 2 (N. A. N. A.)—This is the time of year when Babe Ruth's home-run record is always being broken into little pieces. Large John Mize, for instance, is well ahead of the Babe's best pace. John E. Foxx and Harold Trosky will hit seventy apiece if they just take it easy and meet the ball.

The thing to do in this emergency is to bet your friends 3 to 1 that G. H. Ruth's record will still be standing come October. I will cheerfully insure your wagers.

Not that the feat is impossible. Mize, for instance, is a great left-handed hitter operating in a league where short rightfield fences abound. John may well beat Ruth's mark of sixty one of these years. The problem is to call the year.

Granted that Mize, Foxx, Trosky, Greenberg or York goes through the season without an injury or a long slump, he must then get every sort of additional break of luck. Granted that a lot of balls go fair instead of foul, and clear the barrier instead of hitting it, he must then face the pressure, the shodows, and the uncertain pitching of September—the month when Ruth went to town.

Foxx Has No Illusions

Jim Foxx, is a gentleman completely without illusion in this respect. Having chased Ruth longer than any other contemporary slugger, he is the foremost living expert on the home-run record.

"The record is beatable," all right," says the mauler from Margate, Maryland, "but you have to have a perfect combination of circumstances. Somebody will get that combination some day, but who will it be and when? Picking one guy in one year is the worst gamble I know of.

"I've been in the game a long time, hitting a long ball. By the time I quit, I'll have hit more home runs than anybody but Ruth. I've had some good seasons when I got my share of the breaks, but in those years I didn't deserve to pass the Babe's sixty, because I wasn't hitting the ball well enough. Other years I've hit the ball clean and often, but the breaks weren't with me.

"The year I hit fifty-eight home runs"—1932—"I was really getting hold of it. That was one season I might have expected to pass Ruth; and mind you, a guy who expects to improve on the Babe has got a lot of gall. But I was hot. I might have done it.

"Well, without alibi-ing, I must have rattled half a dozen hits off the screen in St. Louis in 1932. There was no screen in St. Louis the year the Babe made sixty. Right there you have the difference between the record and just another season.

Jimmy's Chance Gets Slimmer

"But don't get me wrong," says Mr. Foxx firmly. "If it hadn't been the screen in St Louis, it might have been something else. That's a great record of Ruth's. The man who beats it should do it the hard way. The Babe is entitled to that much protection for a record that sort of symbolizes what he meant to baseball. I hope like hell I'll break it some day, but I know I'll feel a little sorry when I do. That record means something.

Of course, Jimmy's chance grows slimmer every year, while sluggers with more time ahead of them—Mize, for example, or Trosky, or Williams—can contemplate the future with some confidence.

Foxx, as he says, has been a long time in the game. At the moment his lifetime total is 475 home runs. Gehrig, the runner-up to Ruth, retired with a total of 494, which Foxx is very likely to excel this season, though he broke into the major leagues four years later than Gehrig. Ruth's lifetime total of 714, of course, will take a lot of beating.

And Ruth's record of sixty for a season will never be beaten in early June. Mize, Foxx, and Trosky have been better execution in April and May of 1940 than the Babe did in those months of 1927—but time will tell whether they can keep it up, and Mr. Foxx devoutly believes that the odds are all against them, including himself.

Hank Greenberg, two years ago, was leading Ruth at the head of the stretch. He really had something. Going into September, he needed only a dozen or so, where Ruth needed seventeen for sixty at the same point in 1927. But Ruth got 'em, and September licked Hankus—September, the month of flickering shadows that dance before the batter's eye in the low sun, or wild rookie pitchers up from the minors, who never give the hitter a chance to set himself at the plate.

Therefore, I recommend that you go out there and lay all the 3 to 1 you can afford on George H. Ruth against the field.

Allegany Retains County Track and Field Event Crown

Central Second and Bruce Third in Annual Fairgo Meet

Allegany High School athletes successfully defended their Allegany county scholastic games tournament and track and field title Saturday on a slow track at the Cumberland Fairgrounds.

The meet, staged under the direction of the Board of Education, attracted several thousand boys and girls. No official point score was kept but in track and field events alone, Allegany amassed 209 markers, according to a score sheet compiled by the sports department of The Sunday Times.

Central of Lonaconing finished in second place with 137 1-2 points. Bruce of Westernport was third with 115 1-2, Fort Hill was fourth with 103 1-2, Beall was fifth with 92, Cresaptown sixth with 34, Barton seventh with 20 1-2 and Mt. Savage eighth with nine.

These figures do not include points awarded in the games tournaments. Due to rain a week ago last Friday when the meet was originally scheduled, almost all of the games were run off during the week with the schools arranging their own contests. There were no games to decide third places.

Central Dominates Tourneys

Central dominated the tourneys by winning six but Allegany copped five and any other points the Lonaconing school might have picked up would not be sufficient to offset the West Siders' advantage in track and field events.

Ninety-seven of Allegany's points came in girls' events, 83 in boys' track contests and 29 in field events. Bruce and Beall were about even in field events while Allegany showed most of its power in the girls' division and in boys' track.

The Orange and Black made over half its markers in the girls' events, the Coney lassies amassing 76 tallies. Central registered 35 more in boys' track and 26 1-2 in boys' field events.

Fort Hill had the most success in the girls' division, gathering 53 points. Sentinel athletes gathered 45 more markers in boys' track and 15 1-2 in boys field events.

No new records were hung up in the boys' division although Allegany relay teams managed to tie marks set last year by Campobello quartets.

Five AHS Relay Teams Win

In the 440-yard senior unlimited relay, the Camper team of Lou Bell, Miles Snyder, Bill James and Serf equalled the 47 2-5 second time made by the West Siders in 1939. Bell was also a member of last year's outfit.

In the 660-yard senior unlimited medley relay, Jim Gaffney and Paul Durst sparked Allegany to another record-equaling performance. Aided by Vernon Miller and Tommy Rudd, the West Siders covered the distance in 1:11 2-5.

The Campers gained much of their big margin in the boys' relays. Five Allegany quartets galloped to victory with two Beall wins and one by Bruce all that prevented the Campers from registering a sweep of the eight relay events.

Probably the most exciting contests were the senior unlimited 440 and 880-yard runs. On both occasions, Allegany runners just managed to outlast Fort Hill boys. In the 440, Bill Richards bested Eddie Spear, and in the 880 Joe Gulbronson won by an eyelash from Stanley Morris. The meet summary follows:

Pirates Scorecard Becomes Court Question

PITTSBURGH, June 2 (AP) — The Pittsburgh Athletic Company, owner of the Pirates, and the Penn Sportservice, Inc., filed an injunction suit in federal court to restrain M. J. Goldstein from selling a baseball scorecard at the entrance to Forbes Field.

The suit claims that Goldstein's card is an infringement of the copyrighted Pittsburgh Pirates official scorecard. Sportservice, Inc., claims the exclusive right to sell the official scorecard.

Bronx Bombers in Hitting Mood, Win Pair from Browns

Blast 26-Hits at Expense of St. Louis Hurlers for Ninth Win

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—A 26-hit batting spree by the world champion Yankees in two games today swamped the St. Louis Browns 13 to 4 and 11 to 1 and gave New York a record of nine victories in the last ten contests.

Everyone of the Yankees joined in the hitting in the opener and all but the pitcher hit safely in the nightcap.

Joe DiMaggio also homered with one on and Bill Knickerbocker hit two doubles and a triple in the first game.

The Bombers blasted out ten runs in the first two innings of the second session, getting six off Vernon Kennedy in one frame on three triples, a single, a double and a walk. The other four were off Roxie Lawson and three of them counted on a homer by Bill Dickey.

Pirates-Giants Divide Twin Bill

PITTSBURGH, June 2 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Giants split a doubleheader today, the Pirates winning the first 2-1 but losing the second 7-3 despite home runs—both with the bases empty—by first baseman Elbie Fletcher and outfielder Maurice Van Robays.

Bob Klinger and Hal Shumacher engaged in a pitching duel in the opener, each holding the adversary scoreless for seven innings. In the eighth, Alban Glossop was safe at first on an attempted sacrifice and advanced to second when Arky Vaughan threw out Schumacher. Burgess Whitehead singled him home. In the same inning the Pirates scored twice on three singles and a double by Elliott.

A single by Cliff Melton, three more hits and a walk accounted for three Giant runs in the third inning of the nightcap. The Giants tallied three more time in the fifth and once in the sixth, while the Pirates only run—aside from the homers—came in the fifth.

THE SEARCH FOR THAT MAN

Arturo Godoy is matched to fight Joe Louis again but apparently few, including his manager, think that he has a real chance to wrest the heavyweight championship from Louis because, as he grinds away at his training at Carmel, N. Y., the search for a man to beat Joe goes on. This may not bother the Chilean but it is an indication of the rating that Louis still has among the real fight experts—the men who make their living at the game.

Billy Conn is moving into the picture again. Mentioned many times as a possible opponent for Louis but declared out of the competition almost as many times because, even while disposing of his opponents, he has showed neither the ruggedness nor the punch that would qualify him. Conn fights Gus Lesnevich in defence of the light heavyweight championship on June 5 in Detroit and the bout is attracting attention not so much for itself as for the bearing it may have on the heavyweight situation.

Conn beat Lesnevich in New York last November rather easily and should beat him again just as easily, although Gus is a strong fellow and a pretty dangerous puncher. The question really isn't whether or not Billy is the better fighter of the two but how he will shape up as a foeman for the Bomber.

I hear that he is having a little trouble making the light heavyweight limit of 175 pounds—that he weighs about 180 now. If his weight doesn't get away from him in the course of his training, as it has a couple of times, so that he was much lighter than he wanted to be when it was over, he plans to make this the last of his fights as a 175-pounder. This, of course, would mean his renunciation of the light heavyweight title and a campaign among the heavyweights with Louis at the end of the road.

It Might Be Conn

It could be, of course, that Conn is the fellow they have been looking for all the time. Nobody gave Gene Tunney a chance against Jack Dempsey because he couldn't hit and they said no boxer could stand off Dempsey. In the year before Toledo, few gave Dempsey a chance against Jess Willard. They said Dempsey was too small and the punches with which he knocked out men his own size would have no effect on the Pottawatomie giant. And away back, they laughted at Jim Corbett when he hurled a challenge at John L. Sullivan.

As far as weight is concerned, if Conn really has matured as a 180-pounder, he is big enough to lick anybody. After a winter and early spring of misery due to recurrent boils, he is reported to be in better condition than ever before—heavier, faster, stronger and more rugged.

Certainly he is a real fighter, dead game and confident—the kind of fighter who has no doubts about himself when he enters the ring and, if he is hurt, fights all the harder.

Concerning His Punch

As a puncher, he is no killer. He never knocked out an opponent who amounted to anything and can point to only eight knockouts in his string of fifty-six fights. Well, Tunney wasn't a killer, either, nor—to go away back again—was Corbett. But Tunney and Corbett were sharp, cutting, bruising hitters—and so is Conn.

Conn couldn't knock out Fred Apostoli—but Apostoli was a sturdy, capable fighter before he had those two brushes with Conn—and he never was the same thereafter. Conn couldn't knock out Melio Bettina but he gave him two bad hammerings—and Bettina will tell you that being hit by the young man from Pittsburgh is no bargain. Conn didn't knock out Lesnevich—but he took all the fight out of the White Russian from Cliffside, N. J.

I don't know yet about Conn as an opponent for Louis. I'm reserving dec

Bucky Walters Is Easy Winner of Ninth Straight

Dick Errickson Scores Another Win over Red Hurlers

CINCINNATI, June 2 (AP)—With unbeaten Bucky Walters easing along to his ninth victory, the Cincinnati Reds blasted the first game of today's doubleheader from the Boston Bees, 11 to 1, but wasted almost an opportunity an inning to suffer a 2-0 whitewash in the nightcap at the hands of Dick Errickson.

Three quarters of Cincinnati's pitching was a manager's delight, with Bucky allowing only five hits and Jim Turner and Joe Beggs giving the Bees but four, none until Sebastian Sisti's single in the seventh. A bobbled double-play ball opened the gates for the Boston runs in the eighth inning of the sunset game. Bucky was a trifle wild but the only run scored off him resulted from a fumble by Johnny Rizzo, Johnny compensated by hitting two homers.

Chester Ross opened the Bees' seventh with a single, went to second on an infield play, and scored when Rizzo bobbled Andrews' single. Outside of that the only men to get on base up to the sixth were three walkers and a hit batsman.

All this time the Reds were busy. Three singles peppered out in the first inning. Ernie Lombardi doubled, and Rizzo sent the ball over the left field fence for a total of five runs.

With two out in the third, Bill Werber singled and Rizzo dropped the ball behind the center-field wall for two more runs. In the fifth two singles, Eddie Miller's error, and a fly produced another brace. Lonnie Frey's single, Frank McCormick's double and another single by Werber made the final pair in the sixth.

Only 18 men faced Jim Turner in the first six innings of the second game. The ex-Bee walked Max West in the fifth but Max died immediately in a double play.

Rain began falling in the seventh, and time was called with one out in the eighth.

A 36-minute rest did Turner no good. Al Lopez singled, Miller beat out a roller to third, and then Billy Myers fumbled Errickson's double-play hopper to fill the bases.

Sisti then flied, scoring Lopez, and Moore singled, scoring Miller. Beggs took over but the damage was done.

A heavy slate of games faces South End Booster Softball League clubs this week when they must make up ground lost last week when all games scheduled Thursday and Friday were postponed on account of rain.

Today three games are to be played with a doubleheader on the Penn Avenue field between Lacy's Delicatets and Liberty and the Trozzo Whirlwinds and Kings. On the Taylor diamond, Post's Ramblers will tangle with Candy Kitchen.

The first-place clash between the Delicatets and Whirlwinds, scheduled last Friday, has been rescheduled for Thursday when it will be played as the first game of a twin bill on the Penn layout. In the afterpiece, Candy Kitchen will meet Liberty. Other games scheduled this week follow:

Tuesday, Trozzo vs. Liberty and Delicatets vs. Post's, Penn field, and Davis vs. Kings, Taylor diamond; Wednesday, Candy Kitchen vs. Post's, Penn field, and Kings vs. Whirlwinds and Liberty vs. Delicatets, Taylor field; Thursday, Davis vs. Post's (doubleheader), Taylor field, and Friday, Post's vs. Trozzo's and Delicatets vs. Kings, Penn field, and Davis vs. Candy Kitchen, Taylor diamond.

Babe's Home Run Record Likely to Stand in '40

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, June 2 (N. A. N. A.)—This is the time of year when Babe Ruth's home-run record is always being broken into little pieces. Large John Mize, for instance, is well ahead of the Babe's best pace. John E. Foxx and Harold Trosky will hit seventy apiece if they just take it easy and meet the ball.

The thing to do in this emergency is to bet your friends 3 to 1 that G. H. Ruth's record will still be standing come October. I will cheerfully insure your wagers.

Not that the feat is impossible. Mize, for instance, is a great left-handed hitter operating in a league where short rightfield fences abound. John may well beat Ruth's mark of sixty one of these years. The problem is to call the year.

Granted that Mize, Foxx, Trosky, Greenberg or York goes through the season without an injury or a long slump, he must then get every sort of additional break of luck. Granted that a lot of balls go fair instead of foul, and clear the barrier instead of hitting it, he must then face the pressure, the shadows, and the uncertain pitching of September—the month when Ruth went to town.

Foxx Has No Illusions

Jim Foxx is a gentleman completely without illusion in this respect. Having chased Ruth longer than any other contemporary slugger, he is the foremost living expert on the home-run record.

"The record is beatable," all right," says the mauler from Margate, Maryland, "but you have to have a perfect combination of circumstances. Somebody will get that combination some day, but who will it be and when? Picking one guy in one year is the worst gamble I know of.

"I've been in the game a long time, hitting a long ball. By the time I quit, I'll have hit more home runs than anybody but Ruth. I've had some good seasons when I got my share of the breaks, but in those years I didn't deserve to pass the Babe's sixty, because I wasn't hitting the ball well enough. Other years I've hit the ball clean and often, but the breaks weren't with me.

"The year I hit fifty-eight home runs"—1932—"I was really getting hold of it. That was one season I might have expected to pass Ruth; and mind you, a guy who expects to improve on the Babe has got a lot of gall. But I was hot. I might have done it.

"Well, without alibi-ing, I must have rattled half a dozen hits off the screen in St. Louis in 1932. There was no screen in St. Louis the year the Babe made sixty. Right there you have the difference between the record and just another season.

Jimmy's Chance Gets Slimmer

"But don't get me wrong," says Mr. Foxx firmly. "If it hadn't been the screen in St. Louis, it might have been something else. That's a great record of Ruth's. The man who beats it should do it the hard way. The Babe is entitled to that much protection for a record that sort of symbolizes what he meant to baseball. I hope like hell I'll break it some day, but I know I'll feel a little sorry when I do. That record means something.

Of course, Jimmy's chance grows slimmer every year, while sluggers with more time ahead of them—Mize, for example, or Trosky, or Williams—can contemplate the future with some confidence.

Foxx, as he says, has been a long time in the game. At the moment his lifetime total is 475 home runs. Gehrig, the runner-up to Ruth, retired with a total of 494, which Foxx is very likely to excel this season, though he broke into the major leagues four years later than Gehrig. Ruth's lifetime total of 714, of course, will take a lot of beating.

And Ruth's record of sixty for a season will never be beaten in early June. Mize, Foxx, and Trosky have been better execution in April and May of 1940 than the Babe did in those months of 1927—but time will tell whether they can keep it up, and Mr. Foxx devoutly believes that the odds are all against them, including himself.

Hank Greenberg, two years ago, was leading Ruth at the head of the stretch. He really had something. Going into September, he needed only a dozen or so, where Ruth needed seventeen for sixty at the same point in 1927. But Ruth got 'em, and September licked Hankus—September, the month of flickering shadows that dance before the batter's eye in the low sun, or wild rookie pitchers up from the minors, who never give the hitter a chance to set himself at the plate.

Therefore, I recommend that you go out there and lay all the 3 to 1 you can afford on George H. Ruth against the field.

Allegany Retains County Track and Field Event Crown

Central Second and Bruce Third in Annual Fairgo Meet

Allegany High School athletes successfully defended their Allegany county scholastic games tournament and track and field title Saturday on a slow track at the Cumberland Fairgrounds.

The meet, staged under the direction of the Board of Education, attracted several thousand boys and girls. No official point score was kept but in track and field events alone, Allegany amassed 209 markers, according to a score sheet compiled by the sports department of The Sunday Times.

Central of Lonaconing finished in second place with 137 1-2 points, Bruce of Westernport was third with 115 1-2, Fort Hill was fourth with 103 1-2, Beall was fifth with 92, Cresaptown sixth with 34, Barton seventh with 20 1-2 and Mt. Savage eighth with nine.

These figures do not include points awarded in the games tournaments. Due to rain a week ago last Friday when the meet was originally scheduled, almost all of the games were run off during the week with the schools arranging their own contests. There were no games to decide third places.

Central Dominates Tourneys

Central dominated the tourneys by winning six but Allegany copped five and any other points the Lonaconing school might have picked up would not be sufficient to offset the West Siders' advantage in track and field events.

Ninety-seven of Allegany's points came in girls' events, 83 in boys' track contests and 29 in field events. Bruce and Beall were about even in field events while Allegany showed most of its power in the girls' division and in boys' track.

The Orange and Black made over half its markers in the girls' events, the Coney lassies amassing 76 tallies. Central registered 35 more in boys' track and 26 1-2 in boys' field events.

Fort Hill had the most success in the girls' division, gathering 53 points. Sentinel athletes gathered 45 more markers in boys' track and 15 1-2 in boys field events.

No new records were hung up in the boys' division although Allegany relay teams managed to tie marks set last year by Campobello quartets.

Five AHS Relay Teams Win

In the 440-yard senior unlimited relay, the Camper team of Lou Bell, Miles Snyder, Bill James and Serf equalled the 47 2-5 second time made by the West Siders in 1939. Bell was also a member of last year's outfit.

In the 660-yard senior unlimited medley relay, Jim Gaffney and Paul Durst sparked Allegany to another record-equaling performance. Aided by Vernon Miller and Tommy Rudd, the West Siders covered the distance in 1:11 2-5.

The Campers gained much of their big margin in the boys' relays. Five Allegany quartets galloped to victory with two Beall wins and one by Bruce all that prevented the Campers from registering a sweep of the eight relay events.

Probably the most exciting contests were the senior unlimited 440 and 880-yard runs. On both occasions, Allegany runners just managed to outlast Fort Hill boys. In the 440, Bill Richards bested Eddie Spear, and in the 880 Joe Gulbronson won by an eyelash from Stanley Morris. The meet summary follows:

Pirates Scorecard Becomes Court Question

PITTSBURGH, June 2 (AP) — The Pittsburgh Athletic Company, owner of the Pirates, and the Penn Sportservice, Inc., filed an injunction suit in federal court to restrain M. J. Goldstein from selling a baseball scorecard at the entrance to Forbes Field.

The suit claims that Goldstein's card is an infringement of the copyrighted Pittsburgh Pirates official scorecard. Sportservice, Inc., claims the exclusive right to sell the official scorecard.

Bronx Bombers in Hitting Mood, Win Pair from Browns

Blast 26-Hits at Expense of St. Louis Hurlers for Ninth Win

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—A 26-hit batting spree by the world champion Yankees in two games today swamped the St. Louis Browns 13 to 4 and 11 to 1 and gave New York a record of nine victories in the last ten contests.

Everyone of the Yankees joined in the hitting in the opener and all but the pitcher hit safely in the nightcap.

Joe DiMaggio also homered with one on and Bill Knickerbocker hit two doubles and a triple in the first game.

The Bombers blasted out ten runs in the first two innings of the second session, getting six off Vernon Kennedy in one frame on three triples, a single, a double and a walk. The other four were off Roxie Lawson and three of them counted on a homer by Bill Dickey.

Pirates-Giants Divide Twin Bill

PITTSBURGH, June 2 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Giants split a doubleheader today, the Pirates winning the first 2-1 but losing the second 7-3 despite home runs—both with the bases empty—by first baseman Elbie Fletcher and outfielder Maurice Van Robays.

Bob Klinger and Hal Shumacher engaged in a pitching duel in the opener, each holding the adversary scoreless for seven innings. In the eighth, Alban Glossop was safe at first on an attempted sacrifice and advanced to second when Arky Vaughan threw out Schumacher. Burgess Whitehead singled him home. In the same inning the Pirates scored twice on three singles and a double by Elliott.

A single by Cliff Melton, three more hits and a walk accounted for three Giant runs in the third inning of the nightcap. The Giants tallied three more time in the fifth and once in the sixth, while the Pirates only run—aside from the homers—came in the fifth.

THE SEARCH FOR THAT MAN

Arturo Godoy is matched to fight Joe Louis again but apparently few, including his manager, think that he has a real chance to wrest the heavyweight championship from Louis because, as he grinds away at his training at Carmel, N. Y., the search for a man to beat Joe goes on. This may not bother the Chilean but it is an indication of the rating that Louis still has among the real fight experts—the men who make their living at the game.

Billy Conn is moving into the picture again. Mentioned many times as a possible opponent for Louis but declared out of the competition almost as many times because, even while disposing of his opponents, he has showed neither the ruggedness nor the punch that would qualify him. Conn fights Gus Lesnevich in defence of the light heavyweight championship on June 5 in Detroit and the bout is attracting attention not so much for itself as for the bearing it may have on the heavyweight situation.

Conn beat Lesnevich in New York last November rather easily and should beat him again just as easily, although Gus is a strong fellow and a pretty dangerous puncher. The question really isn't whether or not Billy is the better fighter of the two but how he will shape up as a foeman for the Bomber.

I hear that he is having a little trouble making the light heavyweight limit of 175 pounds—that he weighs about 180 now. If his weight doesn't get away from him in the course of his training, as it has a couple of times, so that he was much lighter than he wanted to be when it was over, he plans to make this the last of his fights as a 175-pounder. This, of course, would mean his renunciation of the light heavyweight title and a campaign among the heavyweights with Louis at the end of the road.

It Might Be Conn

It could be, of course, that Conn is the fellow they have been looking for all the time. Nobody gave Gene Tunney a chance against Jack Dempsey because he couldn't hit and they said no boxer could stand off Dempsey. In the year before Toledo, few gave Dempsey a chance against Jess Willard. They said Dempsey was too small and the punches with which he knocked out men his own size would have no effect on the Pottawatomie giant. And away back, they laughted at Jim Corbett when he hurled a challenge at John L. Sullivan.

As far as weight is concerned, if Conn really has matured as a 180-pounder, he is big enough to lick anybody. After a winter and early spring of misery due to recurrent boils, he is reported to be in better condition than ever before—heavier, faster, stronger and more rugged.

Certainly he is a real fighter, dead game and confident—the kind of fighter who has no doubts about himself when he enters the ring and, if he is hurt, fights all the harder.

Concerning His Punch

As a puncher, he is no killer. He never knocked out an opponent who amounted to anything and can point to only eight knockouts in his string of fifty-six fights. Well, Tunney wasn't a killer, either, nor—to go away back again—was Corbett. But Tunney and Corbett were sharp, cutting, bruising hitters—and so is Conn.

Conn couldn't knock out Fred Apostoli—but Apostoli was a sturdy, capable fighter before he had those two brushes with Conn—and he never was the same thereafter. Conn couldn't knock out Melio Bettina but he gave him two bad hammerings—and Bettina will tell you that being hit by the young man from Pittsburgh is no bargain. Conn didn't knock out Lesnevich—but he took all the fight out of the White Russian from Cliffside, N. J.

I don't know yet about Conn as an opponent for Louis. I'm reserving decision on him in that respect. His fight with Lesnevich should offer a pretty good line on him—should tell whether or not he has gained in solid weight and ruggedness.

Baer and Galento

The Max Baer - Tony Galento fight, which follows the Louis-Godoy combat but also is being counted upon to produce an opponent for Louis for a date in Detroit or Chicago, probably will be a dis

Old Germans Take Tri-County League Lead

Trim Grantsville Reds by 12-0 for Fifth Win in Row

Ralph Martin Bats in Five Runs To Continue Hitting Streak

Grantsville's Reds yesterday fell victim to a baseball blitzkrieg which forced them to surrender a share of the top rung of the Tri-County Baseball League ladder. The Reds were annihilated on the North End Playground before 500 fans by the Old Germans, the locals turning back the Garrett county outfit 12 to 0 for their fifth straight conquest, thereby taking over undisputed possession of the loop lead, half a game ahead of Grantsville. The loss was Grantsville's first in five league engagements.

Dashing Derl Keller, smoke ball artist of the Germans, limited the Reds to five scattered safeties and sent the third strike whizzing past seven batters. It was the fourth win in as many starts for the bespectacled flinger and also marked the first shutout in his entire baseball career.

Keller was in trouble but once during the battle, that being in the fourth when he loaded the bags with no hands retired, but he promptly erassed the pressure by forcing Wengerd, the next batter to hit into an infield double play and then fired the third strike past Clayton Edwards.

The Germans crowded all of their scoring into three big innings, the first, second and seventh. The Brewers pushed two runs across the plate in the opening frame and five runs in both the second and seventh, on which occasion the entire team batted around.

The locals gathered only 10 safeties off three Grantsville pitchers but took advantage of eight enemy miscues to pile up their margin. Ralph Martin, German right fielder, continued his sensational hitting streak, connecting for three bingles in four trips and driving five runs across the plate. One of his blows was good for three bases.

Martin drove the first two runs across in the opening session. Ed Widdows, the first batter of the frame skied to Clayton Edwards in left for the initial out, "Chick" Cubbage drew a base on ball and was thrown out, third to first on Lou Riehl's fielder's choice. Earl Sellers then walked, setting the stage for Martin's long single to right which sent both runners hurrying across the payoff disc.

Lou Riehl, Lou Bell and Martin got the only hits, all singles in the following frame when five more runs crossed the plate. Ray Miller, starting pitcher for the Reds was driven to cover with two outs and was replaced by Edwards.

Edwards succeeded in fanning the next batter and pitched fine ball until a cluster of Grantsville errors led to his downfall in the seventh. Edwards allowed only one hit up to the fatal seventh after supplanting Miller. First baseman Robinson then finished the game.

Sellers led off the seventh with a single to right. Frank Riehl attempted a sacrifice but Edwards pegged wild to second in an effort to nab Sellers and both runners were safe. Martin then whacked his three-ply blow into the pocket in left-center, scoring Sellers and Riehl. Bob Hose pumped a single to right, sending in Martin, went to second on George Rice's infield out and scored as Third Baseman Mort threw wild on Ed Widdows' infield hit. Widdows, after taking second on the error, hurried home with the final score of the game on Pinch-hitter Charles "Whip" Krietzburg's one-base smash.

Hose, with two smacks, was the only other German batsman, other than Martin, to get more than one hit, while Catcher Diehl was the Reds' top slugger with two blows. The box score:

Fighting Joe Cronin Mild Off the Field

Red Sox Manager Most Considerate Fellow You Could Imagine

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Portrait of a swell guy:

His name is Joseph Edward Cronin. He is 33 years old and manages the Boston Red Sox, who right now are leading the American League. It doesn't look like they'll stay there, but it won't be Cronin's fault. It takes pitching to do that, and Cronin only plays shortstop.

Off the field he is the mildest, most considerate fellow you could imagine. His voice is low. He answers questions frankly, but is careful not to say anything that might harm anyone. He will leave an important meeting to give a baseball writer a little information.

Yet he'd rather not talk. He'd like to let Moe Berg do that. "That's right," he'll say, "talk to Berg. He knows more about things than I do." He'll ask you if there is any particular player you'd like to talk to, and then see that the player is available.

On the field he looks tougher than a day at the races. He has a square, underslung jaw which juts menacingly. He plays bare armed, and moves with a quick, nervous motion. When he thinks he has a kick coming about a decision, he'll squawk like a cornered chicken, but not profanely.

Will Fight to Last Ditch

He will fight to the last ditch, and the displeasure of the crowd bounces off him like hail off a tin roof. He incurred the wrath of 82,000 fans at Yankee Stadium Memorial Day by getting the first hit off Red Ruffing in the eighth inning. If the crowd had thought he wasn't trying they would have labeled him a quitter. When he tried and succeeded, he was a heel. Crowds are like that.

He was a victim of a close decision at first base. He rushed up to the umpire like a wild man, and cap clutched in hand and jaw working like hair clippers, spoke his piece.

When he came up to bat the first time in the second game the boos rolled over the stadium like the rumble of artillery. So what did he do? He knocked a home run into the left field stands.

He isn't as agile as he once was, and is the first to admit it. Yet he gets the job done out there, and still is rated with the best.

Was Signed by Pirates

Scout Joe Devine discovered Cronin back in 1925, and he was signed for Pittsburgh, which promptly farmed him to Johnstown of the Middle-Atlantic League. He was with New Haven in 1926, and recalled to Pittsburgh the same year. He rode the bench there most of 1927, and was sold to Kansas City, where he was rediscovered by Joe Engel, Washington scout.

Engel wired Clark Griffith: "He doesn't look like a hitter, but he sure can field."

He wasn't so much at the plate in 1928 with Washington, but he steadily got better, and by 1930 was hitting at a .346 clip.

He was appointed manager to succeed Walter Johnson on Oct. 8, 1932. He was only 25, the youngest manager in the majors.

He was married to Clark Griffith's niece, and there was much surprise when Griffith let the Red Sox have him in 1934 for Lyn Lary and cash estimated upwards of $150,000. He was promptly made manager, and has been doing a grand job with the gold-plated material Tom Yawky has assembled for him. He has everything that money can buy, except pitchers.

So the next time you see him on the field, scrapping for his rights, just remember he isn't as tough as he looks and sounds. He's really one swell guy.

Tennis Tourney Season To Open Here on June 24

Dates for three tennis tournaments which are held annually on courts in this city were announced Saturday by L. E. Van Sant, veteran Cumberland player who has had charge of these events for the past number of years.

The city championship tourney, open to residents of Cumberland only, will get under way Monday, June 24, and continue all that week, ending with the finals Sunday, June 30.

The Allegany county event, closed to county players, will hold the spotlight during the last week in July. First-round matches are slated for Monday, July 29.

The city's biggest attraction—the Allegany Mountain Open, will start August 23 and end August 26. This tourney has been sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

In all of these tournaments, men's singles, women's singles, men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles will be played.

Van Sant, probably the city's No. 1 tennis supporter, is conuducting a tennis school on the Dingle courts. Players or prospective players interested can get in touch with Van Sant during one of his classes which are on Wednesdays at 5 and 6 p. m., Thursdays at 10 a. m., and Saturdays at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m.

Softball League Meeting Tomorrow

A meeting of the Rocking Chair Softball League will be held Tuesday night at 9 o'clock at the Elks' Home, President Jim Hill announced Saturday.

Tomorrow's session has been called to select a staff of umpires and discuss other league business to develop during the two weeks the loop has been in operation.

Jimmy Foxx Hits 13th Home Run To Give Boston Split

Wins Nightcap 10-8 after Chicago Won 6-0 in Opener

BOSTON, June 2. (AP)—The league leading Boston Red Sox split with the Chicago White Sox today, losing the first game 6-0 but capturing the nightcap 10-8 when Jimmy Foxx blasted his 13th home run of the season with Ted Williams on base in the ninth inning.

Chicago grabbed the opening game as 39-year-old Ted Lyons chalked up his 225th major league victory. It was his fourth triumph this season.

As Lyons limited the potent Red Sox to six scattered hits, the Dykesmen pounded Bill Butland and Joe Heving almost at will.

Both teams teed off in the second game in which four pitchers on each side saw service before Foxx broke up the battle with his home run wallop. Jim Bagby, who came in to stem a Chicago ninth-inning rally, got credit for the triumph and the defeat was charged to "Lefty" Edgar Smith, who pitched to just two batters in the ninth and gave up as many hits and runs.

Dynamic Dodgers Beat Cubs Twice

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—Brooklyn's dynamic Dodgers squeezed out a double victory over the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 2 and 2 to 1, today in a doubleheader featured by errorless play and fine pitching.

Jimmy Wasdell's two-bagger drove home the tying and winning runs in the ninth inning to give the Dodgers the opening game. Van Mungo received credit for the triumph.

Manager Leo Durocher, back at his old shortstop spot following the injury of Pee Wee Reese Saturday, drove home both Dodger runs in the nightcap with a second inning double.

Old Germans Take Tri-County League Lead

Trim Grantsville Reds by 12-0 for Fifth Win in Row

Ralph Martin Bats in Five Runs To Continue Hitting Streak

Grantsville's Reds yesterday fell victim to a baseball blitzkrieg which forced them to surrender a share of the top rung of the Tri-County Baseball League ladder. The Reds were annihilated on the North End Playground before 500 fans by the Old Germans, the locals turning back the Garrett county outfit 12 to 0 for their fifth straight conquest, thereby taking over undisputed possession of the loop lead, half a game ahead of Grantsville. The loss was Grantsville's first in five league engagements.

Dashing Derl Keller, smoke ball artist of the Germans, limited the Reds to five scattered safeties and sent the third strike whizzing past seven batters. It was the fourth win in as many starts for the bespectacled flinger and also marked the first shutout in his entire baseball career.

Keller was in trouble but once during the battle, that being in the fourth when he loaded the bags with no hands retired, but he promptly erassed the pressure by forcing Wengerd, the next batter to hit into an infield double play and then fired the third strike past Clayton Edwards.

The Germans crowded all of their scoring into three big innings, the first, second and seventh. The Brewers pushed two runs across the plate in the opening frame and five runs in both the second and seventh, on which occasion the entire team batted around.

The locals gathered only 10 safeties off three Grantsville pitchers but took advantage of eight enemy miscues to pile up their margin. Ralph Martin, German right fielder, continued his sensational hitting streak, connecting for three bingles in four trips and driving five runs across the plate. One of his blows was good for three bases.

Martin drove the first two runs across in the opening session. Ed Widdows, the first batter of the frame skied to Clayton Edwards in left for the initial out, "Chick" Cubbage drew a base on ball and was thrown out, third to first on Lou Riehl's fielder's choice. Earl Sellers then walked, setting the stage for Martin's long single to right which sent both runners hurrying across the payoff disc.

Lou Riehl, Lou Bell and Martin got the only hits, all singles in the following frame when five more runs crossed the plate. Ray Miller, starting pitcher for the Reds was driven to cover with two outs and was replaced by Edwards.

Edwards succeeded in fanning the next batter and pitched fine ball until a cluster of Grantsville errors led to his downfall in the seventh. Edwards allowed only one hit up to the fatal seventh after supplanting Miller. First baseman Robinson then finished the game.

Sellers led off the seventh with a single to right. Frank Riehl attempted a sacrifice but Edwards pegged wild to second in an effort to nab Sellers and both runners were safe. Martin then whacked his three-ply blow into the pocket in left-center, scoring Sellers and Riehl. Bob Hose pumped a single to right, sending in Martin, went to second on George Rice's infield out and scored as Third Baseman Mort threw wild on Ed Widdows' infield hit. Widdows, after taking second on the error, hurried home with the final score of the game on Pinch-hitter Charles "Whip" Krietzburg's one-base smash.

Hose, with two smacks, was the only other German batsman, other than Martin, to get more than one hit, while Catcher Diehl was the Reds' top slugger with two blows. The box score:

Fighting Joe Cronin Mild Off the Field

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Portrait of a swell guy:

His name is Joseph Edward Cronin. He is 33 years old and manages the Boston Red Sox, who right now are leading the American League. It doesn't look like they'll stay there, but it won't be Cronin's fault. It takes pitching to do that, and Cronin only plays shortstop.

Off the field he is the mildest, most considerate fellow you could imagine. His voice is low. He answers questions frankly, but is careful not to say anything that might harm anyone. He will leave an important meeting to give a baseball writer a little information.

Yet he'd rather not talk. He'd like to let Moe Berg do that. "That's right," he'll say, "talk to Berg. He knows more about things than I do." He'll ask you if there is any particular player you'd like to talk to, and then see that the player is available.

On the field he looks tougher than a day at the races. He has a square, underslung jaw which juts menacingly. He plays bare armed, and moves with a quick, nervous motion. When he thinks he has a kick coming about a decision, he'll squawk like a cornered chicken, but not profanely.

Will Fight to Last Ditch

He will fight to the last ditch, and the displeasure of the crowd bounces off him like hail off a tin roof. He incurred the wrath of 82,000 fans at Yankee Stadium Memorial Day by getting the first hit off Red Ruffing in the eighth inning. If the crowd had thought he wasn't trying they would have labeled him a quitter. When he tried and succeeded, he was a heel. Crowds are like that.

He was a victim of a close decision at first base. He rushed up to the umpire like a wild man, and cap clutched in hand and jaw working like hair clippers, spoke his piece.

When he came up to bat the first time in the second game the booes rolled over the stadium like the rumble of artillery. So what did he do? He knocked a home run into the left field stands.

He isn't as agile as he once was, and is the first to admit it. Yet he gets the job done out there, and still is rated with the best.

Was Signed by Pirates

Scout Joe Devine discovered Cronin back in 1925, and he was signed for Pittsburgh, which promptly farmed him to Johnstown of the Middle-Atlantic League. He was with New Haven in 1926, and recalled to Pittsburgh the same year. He rode the bench there most of 1927, and was sold to Kansas City, where he was rediscovered by Joe Engel, Washington scout.

Engel wired Clark Griffith: "He doesn't look like a hitter, but he sure can field."

He wasn't so much at the plate in 1928 with Washington, but he steadily got better, and by 1930 was hitting at a .346 clip.

He was appointed manager to succeed Walter Johnson on Oct. 8, 1932. He was only 25, the youngest manager in the majors.

He was married to Clark Griffith's niece, and there was much surprise when Griffith let the Red Sox have him in 1934 for Lyn Lary and cash estimated upwards of $150,000. He was promptly made manager, and has been doing a grand job with the gold-plated material Tom Yawky has assembled for him. He has everything that money can buy, except pitchers.

So the next time you see him on the field, scrapping for his rights, just remember he isn't as tough as he looks and sounds. He's really one swell guy.

Tennis Tourney Season To Open Here on June 24

Dates for three tennis tournaments which are held annually on courts in this city were announced Saturday by L. E. Van Sant, veteran Cumberland player who has had charge of these events for the past number of years.

The city championship tourney, open to residents of Cumberland only, will get under way Monday, June 24, and continue all that week, ending with the finals Sunday, June 30.

The Allegany county event, closed to county players, will hold the spotlight during the last week in July. First-round matches are slated for Monday, July 29.

The city's biggest attraction—the Allegany Mountain Open, will start August 23 and end August 26. This tourney has been sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

In all of these tournaments, men's singles, women's singles, men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles will be played.

Van Sant, probably the city's No. 1 tennis supporter, is conuducting a tennis school on the Dingle courts. Players or prospective players interested can get in touch with Van Sant during one of his classes which are on Wednesdays at 5 and 6 p. m., Thursdays at 10 a. m., and Saturdays at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m.

Softball League Meeting Tomorrow

A meeting of the Rocking Chair Softball League will be held Tuesday night at 9 o'clock at the Elks' Home, President Jim Hill announced Saturday.

Tomorrow's session has been called to select a staff of umpires and discuss other league business to develop during the two weeks the loop has been in operation.

Jimmy Foxx Hits 13th Home Run To Give Boston Split

Wins Nightcap 10-8 after Chicago Won 6-0 in Opener

BOSTON, June 2. (AP)—The league leading Boston Red Sox split with the Chicago White Sox today, losing the first game 6-0 but capturing the nightcap 10-8 when Jimmy Foxx blasted his 13th home run of the season with Ted Williams on base in the ninth inning.

Chicago grabbed the opening game as 39-year-old Ted Lyons chalked up his 225th major league victory. It was his fourth triumph this season.

As Lyons limited the potent Red Sox to six scattered hits, the Dykesmen pounded Bill Butland and Joe Heving almost at will.

Both teams teed off in the second game in which four pitchers on each side saw service before Foxx broke up the battle with his home run wallop. Jim Bagby, who came in to stem a Chicago ninth-inning rally, got credit for the triumph and the defeat was charged to "Lefty" Edgar Smith, who pitched to just two batters in the ninth and gave up as many hits and runs.

Dynamic Dodgers Beat Cubs Twice

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—Brooklyn's dynamic Dodgers squeezed out a double victory over the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 2 and 2 to 1, today in a doubleheader featured by errorless play and fine pitching.

Jimmy Wasdell's two-bagger drove home the tying and winning runs in the ninth inning to give the Dodgers the opening game. Van Mungo received credit for the triumph.

Manager Leo Durocher, back at his old shortstop spot following the injury of Pee Wee Reese Saturday, drove home both Dodger runs in the nightcap with a second inning double.

DICK TRACY—A Man of Decision

Keyser Negro, 41, Held in Attack On Young Teacher

Hearing 'in Few Days' For Paul J. Tross, Authorities Announce

KEYSER, W. Va., June 2 (Special)—Keyser authorities today arrested a 41-year-old negro for attacking a pretty, young Piedmont public school teacher in her second floor Main street apartment here.

Paul J. Tross, Keyser negro, an employe on the Koelz estate, was arrested at 11:30 a. m. by a representative from the office of Sheriff Harley O. Staggers. The negro is charged with attacking the young schoolteacher, Prosecutor Vernon E. Rankin said tonight.

Tross reportedly gained entry into the second-floor apartment at 39 North Main street to attack Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins.

The negro is said to have entered the apartment a short time after the young teacher's mother, Mrs. Jessie Stebbins, left at 7 a. m. for Potomac Valley hospital, where she is a registered nurse.

The building in which the Stebbins apartment is located is owned by Dr. W. J. Koelz, a dentist, who maintains both an office and living rooms there.

Tross was said to have had in his possession a key to the front door of the Koelz house and a key to the Stebbins apartment, regularly hung just inside the outer door.

Miss Stebbins, a young brunet, was taken to Potomac Valley hospital, where attendants said she was "resting very well, although upset," late tonight.

Authorities, fearful of mob violence, refused to reveal details of the case. They said complete information would be released after a preliminary hearing "in a few days. They refused to name a date for a hearing. Tross was arrested after an investigation by state police and special deputies.

Tross was booked as being "held for investigation."

Technicality Important

Oversight Costly, Fire Victim Finds

It was a costly technicality that Blaine Friend, of Friendsville, overlooked in his fire insurance policy.

Friend's house was destroyed by fire Feb. 17, 1938. Shortly afterwards, he sought to collect $2,500 from the Farmers Union Association and Fire Insurance Company of Garrett county for the loss of the building and its contents.

The company refused to pay for the damage to the house, pointing to a clause that said the policyholder must be the sole and unconditional owner of the insured property. Friend's wife was joint owner.

Friend wasn't satisfied and decided to take the matter to court. Suit was instituted in Garrett county by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and William L. Wilson, Jr., of Cumberland.

The case was then removed to Allegany county for trial. But Attorney Neil C. Fraley, representing the insurance company, asked that it be removed to Washington county.

It finally came to trial last week before Associate Judge Frank G. Wagaman in Hagerstown.

Judge Wagaman took the case from the jury and directed a verdict for $530 for Friend, covering personal property destroyed. He upheld the insurance company in its claim that it was not liable for the destruction of the house under the sole ownership clause.

Former Attorney-General Preston Lane assisted Mr. Ryan and Mr. Wilson in the trial, while D. Angle Wolfinger, of Hagerstown, joined Mr. Fraley as counsel for the company.

Priest Observes Silver Jubilee

Parish To Honor Father Landrigan

The Rev. Lawrence P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, celebrated his Silver Jubilee yesterday by singing a Solemn High Mass at 10:30 a. m.

Father Landrigan, who was ordained May 29, 1915, in Baltimore Cathedral by His Eminence James Cardinal Gibbons, was assisted by Rev. Boniface Weckman, O. M. Cap., and the Rev. Joyce Russell.

Father Boniface, pastor of SS. Peter and Paul church, assisted as deacon and delivered a sermon on the priesthood. The Rev. Russell, assistant pastor of St. Mary's church, was sub-deacon.

A parochial gathering will be held in honor of Father Landrigan Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the church auditorium, at which time addresses appropriate to the occasion will be made by friends and associates.

Addresses will be delivered by Augustine L. Will, president of the Holy Name Society; Mrs. John C. Brinker, prefect of the Ladies' Sodality; James M. Conway; Attorney General William C. Walsh; the Rev. Dr. William E. Kelly, and the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Anthony Scarpati.

Music at the reception will be furnished by the senior orchestra of the school.

Holiday Week-End Leaves Three Dead, Many Hurt

Two Killed, 8 Injured In Winchester Crash; 2 Youths Hurt Here

Two persons were killed and ten injured, three seriously, in week-end traffic accidents in the Cumberland area.

Killed in a crash near Winchester, Va., were:

Miss Lavina Virginia Dawson, 21, of Rawlings, Allegany county.

Glenn A. While, 18, of Jeanette, Pa., a CCC worker.

Injured in the Winchester crash were:

Dale Hardesty, of Waynesboro, Va., whose condition is reported serious.

Edward A. Crosgrove, 601 Sylvan avenue, Cumberland, a minor fracture of the spine, and lacerations of the face and arms. Condition "fairly satisfactory."

Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove, 33, wife of Edward, fractures of both knee caps. Condition good."

William Rogan, 38, of Spruce street, Cumberland, fractures of the ribs and knee, and lacerations of forehead and scalp. Condition "fair."

Alex A. Hardesty and Mrs. Dale Hardesty, both of Waynesboro, conditions "fair."

Charles Kabel, of Clearfield, Pa., a CCC worker, condition also "fair."

Seriously injured in an accident near Corriganville were:

David Mosser, 21, of Corriganville, a fractured skull and injuries about the legs and body.

Joseph Garlitz, 19, also of Corriganville, injuries about the neck and body, cuts and bruises.

Three Cars Involved

All of those injured at Winchester are patients at Memorial hospital there.

Mosser and Garlitz were admitted at Allegany hospital here.

The Cumberland party and the others were injured early Saturday morning, in a crash, involving three cars, five miles west of Winchester on U. S. Route 50.

Virginia State Police, who investigated, said the car in which the Hardestys, Kabel and While, were riding sideswiped a machine driven by James M. Raupach, 30, of Cumberland, and then careened into the Cosgrove sedan, operated by Rogan. Raupach escaped injury.

Passengers in the Cosgrove car, besides Mr. and Mrs. Cosgrove and Rogan, were Miss Dawson and Bramble. The car pulled a trailer bearing a motorcycle.

Hitchhikers Hurt

Kabel and While, CCC youths from a Luray, Va., camp, were homeward bound when they were picked up by the Hardestys.

The Cosgrove and Hardesty cars were demolished, while approximately $100 damage was reported for Raupach's machine, which is said to be owned by the Auto Exchange, of Cumberland.

Virginia police have placed no charges, and the investigation is being continued.

Survivors Listed

Surviving Miss Dawson are her mother, Mrs. Agnes Dawson, with whom she lived; a brother, Meshack Dawson, and two sisters, Misses Goldie and Evelyn Dawson, all at home.

The two Corriganville young men injured Saturday about 2 p. m. when the car they occupied struck a culvert, rolled down a fifteen-foot embankment and landed in a shallow stream along the Mt. Savage road.

Leo Fleegle, also of Corriganville, who was driving the car, escaped with minor bruises. He did no require hospital treatment.

Car Going Fast

State Trooper John H. Doud, who investigated, said the Fleegle machine was apparently going at a high rate of speed when the accident occurred near Corriganville. Fleegle was technically charged with reckless driving and released under bond.

Mosser is the son of Mrs. Bertha Barncord, and Garlitz is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Garlitz.

Both young men remained in a "serious" condition last night.

L'Aiglon Veterans To Meet Tonight

The L'Aiglon Veteran Unit, of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, will meet today at 8:30 p. m. at the home of Miss Grace C. Murphy, 311 Decatur street.

Prospective members are requested to attend tonight's meeting.

Carnival Men Jailed For Street Fighting

Two carnival men were sentenced to jail and another was acquitted Saturday in Police court on a charge of fighting in downtown Cumberland.

Nelson Shade and John W. Hawkins were committed to jail for ten days in default of a fine of $10 each.

Ray Vegnovich was acquitted.

Memorial Day Accident Proves Fatal To Young Hitch-Hiker

Injuries suffered in a Memorial Day automobile accident proved fatal to a 24-year-old Washington Navy Yard employe Saturday at Memorial hospital.

The victim, Robert Wilcox, of Clarksburg, W. Va., suffered multiple injuries when the car he occupied skidded and plunged down a bank along the road near Hanging Rock, W. Va.

Victim Was Hitch-Hiker

Wilcox, who was hitch-hiking, was picked up by Ray Hines, 25, of Romney, W. Va. Ralph Keister, 26, also of Romney, was also in the machine.

Both Hines and Keister suffered lacerations about the head, face and hands in the crash. They, too, were brought to the hospital and admitted.

Attendants said they were "slightly improved" last night.

Wilcox, who was unmarried, was a son of Byron and Ethel Nutter Wilcox. The body was taken to Clarksburg Saturday.

Others Improve

Meanwhile, other persons injured in Memorial Day accidents were reported "recovering" in local hospitals.

Harry Silverman, 43, of Old Washington, Ohio, a high school teacher, received a possible fractured jaw and lacerations in a crash on Sideling Hill, east of Cumberland on the National highway. He was admitted to Memorial hospital.

Silverman and four Ohio high school students were hurt when their car, traveling west, ran off the road at the top of the hill and overturned. The four students were treated at the hospital and discharged.

Pedestrian Injured

David W. Leasure, 65, of 216 Frederick street, was admitted to Allegany hospital after he was struck by a car at North Centre and Frederick streets.

Leasure was injured about the head when he was hit by a car driven by Cleveland Beale, of Smithfield, Pa. His head was thrown against the windshield of the car, and the glass broke.

Police said Leasure stepped off the curb in front of the machine. They placed no charges against Beale, terming the accident unavoidable.

Accidents Take 'Amazing' Toll In the Home

'Kitchen Casualties' Can Be Prevented, Says Health Director

Americans don't have to worry yet about war casualties, but Dr. H. Riley, director of the Maryland State Department of Health, sounds a warning against "kitchen casualties" in a bulletin received here yesterday.

An amazing number of avoidable accidents occur in the home—and many of them in the kitchen," says Dr. Riley. "Some of them could be prevented if a few precautions were taken. For instance:

"To avoid cuts that can very easily become infected:

"Beware of the can opener that leaves a jagged edge, and, very frequently a cut hand. It is worth putting a little extra money into the kind that leaves a smooth edge.

"Keep your kitchen knives and other sharp cutting utensils in containers, separated from other equipment in constant use. Above all, keep such things out of the reach of children.

"When dishes or glasses are broken, sweep up the pieces with a brush, into a dust pan. Don't risk picking them up with the fingers. In order that they will not be a source of danger to others, wrap the pieces in old newspapers, or put them in a paper bag or box before you put them out to be disposed of or carted off.

"To avoid burns and even more serious accidents from the use of fuel or lighting oils:

"Remember the old proverb about not adding fuel to flames. It has a very special bearing in this connection. Keep your fuel oil cans at a very safe distance from your stove—outside the kitchen, if possible. Incidentally, keep matches, candles and lighted lamps entirely out of reach of young children.

"To avoid mixing insecticides and other dangerous poisons with food supplies:

"Have a special place for any supplies that may be a course of danger. Don't keep rat poison, plant sparys, poisonous silver polish, or any other equally dangerous household supplies, side by side with baking powder, pancake flour, salt and sugar containers, or any other food supply.

"Keep all dangerous supplies in a separate place—not in the kitchen cabinet. And see that they are carefully labelled. Replace labels when they fall off, and dispose carefully of the containers when the contents have been used.

"And don't forget: Keep every one of these things out of the reach of children."

Allegany Women To Set Record At Short Course

109 from County Already Enrolled; Going by Train

An all-time record for enrollment will be established by Allegany county when the eighteenth annual Rural Women's Short Course program opens June 17 at the University of Maryland, College Park, it was announced yesterday by Miss Maude Bean, county home demonstration agent.

Mis Bean stated that 109 women from Allegany county already have enrolled and only six more are needed to complete Allegany's quota.

The best previous record attained by this county was in 1937 when an even 100 women made the triy to College Park. Last year's enrollment was eighty-three.

Allegany Always Leads

For ten consecutive years Allegany has topped the other twenty-two counties of the state in total number enrolled and is certain to retain the honor this year.

Women attending the course for four years are awarded certificate of attendance at graduation exercises held at the conclusion of the course. Mrs. Bertha Miller, of Oldtown, holds the distinction of having attended the annual sessions since they were inaugurated in 1923.

Special Coaches Chartered

The general theme for the week of June 17 to 22 will be "Neighbors." As usual, the program has many things to offer in educational, inspirational, social, and recreational opportunities.

Two special B. & O. coaches have been chartered to take Allegany county's women to College Park. The train is scheduled to depart at 8:25 a. m., June 17, and the return trip will bring the "students" home on the night of June 22.

B&O Worker Hurt When Box Falls

A 49-year-old colored B&O worker was injured about the head and back of the neck Saturday afternoon when he was struck by a falling box while at work.

The man, John C. Davis, of 316 Central avenue, was taken to Allegany hospital and admitted. His condition was reported "satisfactory" last night.

Hospital attendants said Davis was injured when a fellow-worker dropped a box on him.

Mexico Farms Man Posts Peace Bond

William McMillan, of Mexico Farms, was released under a $500 peace bond Saturday in Trial Magistrates court after he was given a hearing on a charge of assault preferred by Frank Lease.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr., ordered McMillan held under bond after Lease told him he feared further attacks from the defendant.

The alleged assault occurred May 28.

'Bootleg' Radio Station Tracked Down with Ease

"Fifth columnists" wouldn't have a chance of sending out propaganda from a hidden radio transmitter around here.

Such a "bootleg" station would soon be located if the demonstration put on yesterday by the Western Maryland Amateur Radio Club means anything.

In the first activity of its kind to be held in this area, members of the club lost little time in finding a "hidden transmitter" by using home-constructed radio direction-finding equipment.

Many Take Part

Nearly a score of members participated in the hunt, with the hidden transmitter being operated by Ambrose McKenzie of W3BHE, president of the club, and Melvin Riffey, of W3DIC, assisted by Harold Shank.

The McKenzie crew went out early yesterday afternoon to the farm of Edward Grabenstein, near Winchester Bridge. They set up the field sending station, using McKenzie's call letters, W3BHE.

The broadcast was scheduled to begin at 2 p. m. in a field on the Grabenstein farm. But the McKenzie car became mired in the side-road leading from Winchester road, and the equipment had to be set up along the road. Broadcasting began at 2:10 p. m. and continued until 4:10 p. m.

All Make "Deadline"

All the contestants were in before "sign-off," although some of them had covered considerable territory before locating the station.

First to locate the station was a team consisting of Wilfred A. Thompson, of W3AQV, John Ridgeway, of W3ON, William Rank and David McGibbon. They arrived at the transmitter at 3:50 p. m.—an hour and forty minutes after the broadcast began. They had driven only twelve miles.

Next was the crew of W3GUT, consisting of Raymond Feltz, Melvin Dawson and Richard Grimm. They had driven thirty-six miles.

The third group to arrive was the W3BFX team, consisting of Leroy Jewell, Ralph Brown and William Jenkins. They had driven twenty miles.

Prizes Awarded

Fourth was a crew consisting of John Patton, of W3FRV; Matthew Groves, of W3EWW; John Bobo, of W3EUT; and Sam Cozad. They had driven thirty-three miles.

Cash prizes were awarded winners of first and second places.

The hidden transmitter was something of a makeshift proposition, with antenna only six feet off the ground. It used a frequency of 1954 kilocycles and 90-watt power.

It was on the air almost continuously during the two-hour period except for a few minutes when minor repairs had to be made to the antenna and the batteries changed.

Signal Strong

Its signal was strong, however, some of those who got "off the track" temporarily reporting hearing it as far away as Corriganville and Pea Vine Run on Bedford road.

McKenzie and Riffey alternated at broadcasting, giving regulation test calls, interspersed with humorously ironic comments on the slowness of the contestants in locating the transmitter.

The contestants, using home-made equipment, some of it their own, some borrowed from other club members, gathered on North Centre street, then took off on their own.

Use Directional Loop Antennas

They used directional loop antennas, similar in principle to that used by United States Coast Guard ships and airplanes. This equipment permitted them to take bearings of the hidden station, plot them on a map of the county and eventually locate the station.

One of the groups used Station WTBO as a reference point, while others used compasses.

All the information the contestants had was that the station would be located somewhere within an area of seventy-eight square miles—or within a five-mile radius of Cumberland.

After all the contestants had arrived, the group spent about two hours in a "post-mortem" of the hunt, discussing what should and shouldn't have been done.

The consensus was that it was great sport at the same time it was educational. Plans are underway for another one soon.

Thomas V. McGuire Wins Recommendation For Postmastership

The Democratic State Central Committee for Allegany county last night unanimously recommended Thomas V. McGuire for the postmastership at Westernport, Chairman Joseph H. Griffin reported.

McGuire, an employe of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company and manager of the Westvaco baseball club, finished second in a competitive examination for the post, but won the recommendation by virtue of his "military preference."

Other candidates were Joseph Mansfield, who won top rating in the examination, and Miss Mary Moran, who finished third and who has been acting postmaster since December. The post was left vacant by the death of Lee Connell.

The recommendation will be submitted to Representative William D. Byron, who will in turn forward it to the postoffice department.

McGuire is well-known as a former professional baseball player. He lives on Cemetery road, Westernport.

Action on recommendations for more than 200 election jobs was deferred, Chairman Griffin said, until a special meeting Monday, June 17, at 7:30 p. m. at the Windsor hotel, where last night's meeting was held.

Library Receives Book on Aircraft

Valuable New Volume Comes from Abroad

The Cumberland Public Library has received from abroad a copy of the latest edition of Jane's "All the World's Air Craft" compiled and edited by C. G. Grey and Leonard Bridgman.

This complete and unique record of aeronautical progress throughout the world contains the following information:

Part B—Detailed description of the Flying Services of all nations.

Part D—Describes and illustrates with photographs the aero engines of all nations.

Part E—Describes in detail and illustrates the most recent designs.

This acknowledged world authority on aircraft is a companion volume to Jane's "Fighting Ships."

Both were presented to the library as part of the Charles Henry Nash Memorial, the gift of the late Mrs. W. Wallace McKaig.

Advisory Group Meets

Members of the advisory committee of the Police Boys Club will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at Central YMCA.

Homemakers Give Concert Tonight

Chorus To Be Assisted By Guest Artists

The annual music festival of the Homemakers Chorus will be held at 8 o'clock tonight at Centre Street Methodist church hall, with Mrs. Richard W. Trevaskis directing and Mrs. G. R. Golladay as accompanist.

The chorus will be assisted by Miss Ina Lee Eichner and John Metzger, vocal soloists; Mrs. Alice VanMeter, violinist; and Mrs. William J. Loar panist.

The formal program will be followed by a garden scene, with the chorus leading the audience in singing old-time songs.

Guests will be seated at small tables around the auditorium, and refreshments will be served at the close of the program. 4-H girls will be ushers and 4-H boys will assist in the garden scene.

The committee in charge of the concert consists of Mrs. Frank A. Perdew, Mrs. Robert W. Young, Mrs. J. W. Hounshell, Mrs. Hugh Funkhouser, Mrs. Adam Smith and Mrs. Irene McDonald.

Numbers by the chorus will include Whooler's "Springtome," Forman's "Pond Lilies," Evans's "Song of the Cat," and McIntyre's "The Dancing Sunbeam" and "Starlight."

Selections by Miss Eichner and Mr. Metzger will be "Passage-Bird's Farewell," by Hilbach; "Under the Moon," by Stoughton; "The Star of Love on Evening's Brow Hath Smiled," by Nevin; and "A. B. C.," by Parry.

Violin solos by Mrs. VanMeter, accompanied by Mrs. Loar, will include "Night Winds," by Drdlt, and "The Rosary," by Nevin.

Nearly 600 To Attend 'B&O Day' Dinner Here

Charles W. Galloway

Nearly 600 persons are expected to attend the dinner-dance at the State Armory Thursday night which will climax Cumberland's "B&O Day" celebration.

Charles W. Galloway, operating vice-president of the railroad, will be the principal speaker at the dinner, scheduled to start at 6:30 p. m.

Other speakers will include Miss Helen Foreman, H. J. Boyle and C. N. Fullerton, all of Baltimore, special representatives; and Charles M. Shriver, superintendent of the Cumberland division.

Gunter Toastmaster

Former State Senator William A. Gunter will be toastmaster at the affair. He will be introduced by J. Rex Miller, chairman of the Men's Cooperative Traffic Program, who is co-chairman in charge of the celebration.

Mayor Harry Irvine will give the address of welcome, and Iva L. Harper, division master mechanic, will respond. Guests will be introduced by Mrs. Vada Drumm Barncord, co-chairman for the celebration.

Other features of the program will include a sketch by William J. Cramer; selections by the B&O Glee Club of Cumberland, under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Biggs and with Mrs. Charles L. Kopp as accompanist; and a tap dance by the Beckman twins.

The invocation will be offered by W. H. Lees, secretary of the B&O YMCA.

The Society Ramblers will play for the dance to follow the banquet program.

Events At Shrine Club

Both the men and women plan afternoon programs at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

The women's group will meet the Baltimore and Ohio Women's Music Club of Baltimore and other guests at the Queen City station and escort them to the club where a luncheon is scheduled for 1 p. m.

Mrs. Barncord will give a short talk and introduce Miss Olive Dennis, president of the music club, and Miss Virginia Blackhead, director of the club.

At 3:15 p. m. the music club will give a concert at the recreation hall of Centre Street Methodist church.

Buffet Luncheon

The men will have a buffet luncheon also at the Shrine Club at 1:30 p. m. Besides railroad men, all the business and industrial interests of Cumberland along with municipal and county officials will be represented. There will be no formal program but various forms of entertainment are planned.

Among others expected here are D. F. Stevens, general superintendent of transportation and equipment; Philip Petri Sr., chief engineer, maintenance and equipment; F. G. Hoskins, general superintendent, and W. B. Whitsitt, assistant superintendent of motive power and equipment.

The mayor has issued a proclamation calling attention to the day and stores will have displays connected with railroad work.

Barbecue Waitress Hit by Car

A charge of driving with inadequate brakes was placed against Charles E. Brode, 19, of 307 Franklin street, Saturday night after his car struck a girl near LaVale.

Brode will be given a hearing in Trial Magistrates court when the girl, Mary Agnes Snow, 15, of Allegany Grove, is released from Allegany hospital, where she was admitted.

Miss Snow suffered a fractured right leg and bruises when Brode's car turned in from the National highway and pinioned her against a barbecue stand, where she is employed.

State Trooper B. C. Mason investigated.

Deaths

Mrs. Elmer Wagner

Mrs. Mabel Wagner, wife of Elmer Wagner, of Springfield, W. Va., died yesterday afternoon at Memorial hospital. She was 24.

Mrs. Wagner was brought to Cumberland in an ambulance and admitted to the hospital at 11 a. m. She died at 2:30 p. m.

She was a daughter of Frank and Julia Ann Bean.

The body was taken to Springfield.

George E. Emmart

Funeral services for George E. Emmart, formerly of Cumberland, who died Thursday at his home in New York city, were held yesterday afternoon at Rising Sun, Md. Burial was in Darlington cemetery, Darlington, Md.

Mr. Emmart left Cumberland in 1925. He was vice-president of the Union Lumber Manufacturing Company and headed the Union Lumber Sales Company.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Gaither Emmart and three children by a previous marriage.

Samuel E. Landis

Last rites for Samuel E. Landis, 62, who died Wednesday at Allegany hospital as a result of injuries suffered when struck by a B. and O. freight train, were conducted Saturday morning at Stein's chapel.

The Rev. Dr. Hixon T. Bowersox, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, officiated. Interment was in Hillcrest burial park.

Truck Slops, Motor Roars; Driver Jailed

Brewery Trucker Driving Drunk, Police Charge

An abrupt stop and a roaring motor led to the arrest of a Cumberland Brewing Company employe early yesterday morning on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

The driver, David R. Boyer, of 115 West First street, was arrested at Greene and Washington streets by Officer Robert V. Chisholm at 3:55 a. m.

Officer Chisholm said he was standing on Cumberland street, near the Algonquin hotel, when he noticed Boyer's light delivery truck come to an abrupt stop. Then he heard the motor "roaring" and decided to investigate, he added.

"Boyer was out cold over the steering wheel with his foot on the gas when I reached the truck," the officer said. "I took his foot off the gas and then brought him to and took him to headquarters."

Boyer was lodged in jail, but later was released after a cash bond of $110 was posted before Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. He is scheduled to be given a hearing today in Trial Magistrates court.

Police said the delivery truck is owned by the brewey.

Another man, Raymond J. Higgins, of Little Orleans, was arrested Saturday night by State Police on the Oldtown road, near North Branch, on charges of drunken driving and failing to keep to the right-center of the road.

Higgins, a farmer, was released from the county jail after he posted a cash bond. He, too, will be given a hearing today in court here.

State Trooper H. F. Schultheis reported that Higgins's "weaving" machine headed toward Oldtown nearly forced the police car into a guard rail once during the chase. Trooper John H. Doud assisted in the arrest.

Boy Choristers Win Crosses

Emmanuel Church Gives Attendance Awards

Six boy choristers of Emmanuel Episcopal church are the proud possessors of crosses won by faithful attendance.

The crosses, which are small metal emblems worn on a silken cord placed around the neck, were presented to the boys Sunday at the regular morning worship service at the church by the rector, the Rev. David C. Clark, who warmly congratulated them on their achievement.

The boy choir, which took part in the service, supplementing the adult choir under the direction of Maurice J. Matteson, completed the second year of its organization on this occasion.

For being present at every service and every rehearsal during the two years, sterling silver crosses were presented to Robert Lee Greaver, Jr., Richard Matteson and Edward James, and for a perfect like attendance record of a year, rhodium crosses were presented to Douglas Thomas, John D. Rodda and Charles A. Piper.

These crosses are to be worn at services of the church for the ensuing year. When three years of perfect attendance is achieved, gold crosses will be awarded the boys, and these are to be for permanent possession and may be worn at all times as well as at the church services.

Pilots Club To Elect Officers Tonight

The Cumberland Pilots Club will elect officers at a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

The club, organized six months ago, held its first mass flight Memorial Day when eight ships flew to Hagerstown to participate in a breakfast sponsored by the Maryland Flying Club. The flight was made without mishap in one and one-half hours.

Keyser Negro, 41, Held in Attack On Young Teacher

Hearing 'in Few Days' For Paul J. Tross, Authorities Announce

KEYSER, W. Va., June 2 (Special)—Keyser authorities today arrested a 41-year-old negro for attacking a pretty, young Piedmont public school teacher in her second floor Main street apartment here.

Paul J. Tross, Keyser negro, an employe on the Koelz estate, was arrested at 11:30 a. m. by a representative from the office of Sheriff Harley O. Staggers. The negro is charged with attacking the young schoolteacher, Prosecutor Vernon E. Rankin said tonight.

Tross reportedly gained entry into the second-floor apartment at 39 North Main street to attack Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins.

The negro is said to have entered the apartment a short time after the young teacher's mother, Mrs. Jessie Stebbins, left at 7 a. m. for Potomac Valley hospital, where she is a registered nurse.

The building in which the Stebbins apartment is located is owned by Dr. W. J. Koelz, a dentist, who maintains both an office and living rooms there.

Tross was said to have had in his possession a key to the front door of the Koelz house and a key to the Stebbins apartment, regularly hung just inside the outer door.

Miss Stebbins, a young brunet, was taken to Potomac Valley hospital, where attendants said she was "resting very well, although upset," late tonight.

Authorities, fearful of mob violence, refused to reveal details of the case. They said complete information would be released after a preliminary hearing "in a few days." They refused to name a date for a hearing. Tross was arrested after an investigation by state police and special deputies.

Tross was booked as being "held for investigation."

Technicality Important

Oversight Costly, Fire Victim Finds

It was a costly technicality that Blaine Friend, of Friendsville, overlooked in his fire insurance policy.

Friend's house was destroyed by fire Feb. 17, 1938. Shortly afterwards, he sought to collect $2,500 from the Farmers Union Association and Fire Insurance Company of Garrett county for the loss of the building and its contents.

The company refused to pay for the damage to the house, pointing to a clause that said the policyholder must be the sole and unconditional owner of the insured property. Friend's wife was joint owner.

Friend wasn't satisfied and decided to take the matter to court. Suit was instituted in Garrett county by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and William L. Wilson, Jr., of Cumberland.

The case was then removed to Allegany county for trial. But Attorney Neil C. Fraley, representing the insurance company, asked that it be removed to Washington county.

It finally came to trial last week before Associate Judge Frank G. Wagaman in Hagerstown.

Judge Wagaman took the case from the jury and directed a verdict for $530 for Friend, covering personal property destroyed. He upheld the insurance company in its claim that it was not liable for the destruction of the house under the sole ownership clause.

Former Attorney-General Preston Lane assisted Mr. Ryan and Mr. Wilson in the trial, while D. Angle Wolfinger, of Hagerstown, joined Mr. Fraley as counsel for the company.

Priest Observes Silver Jubilee

Parish To Honor Father Landrigan

The Rev. Lawrence P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, celebrated his Silver Jubilee yesterday by singing a Solemn High Mass at 10:30 a. m.

Father Landrigan, who was ordained May 29, 1915, in Baltimore Cathedral by His Eminence James Cardinal Gibbons, was assisted by Rev. Boniface Weckman, O. M. Cap., and the Rev. Joyce Russell.

Father Boniface, pastor of SS. Peter and Paul church, assisted as deacon and delivered a sermon on the priesthood. The Rev. Russell, assistant pastor of St. Mary's church, was sub-deacon.

A parochial gathering will be held in honor of Father Landrigan Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the church auditorium, at which time addresses appropriate to the occasion will be made by friends and associates.

Addresses will be delivered by Augustine L. Will, president of the Holy Name Society; Mrs. John C. Brinker, prefect of the Ladies' Sodality; James M. Conway; Attorney General William C. Walsh; the Rev. Dr. William E. Kelly, and the Rt Rev. Monsignor Anthony Scarpati.

Music at the reception will be furnished by the senior orchestra of the school.

Holiday Week-End Leaves Three Dead, Many Hurt

Two Killed, 8 Injured In Winchester Crash; 2 Youths Hurt Here

Two persons were killed and ten injured, three seriously, in week-end traffic accidents in the Cumberland area.

Killed in a crash near Winchester, Va., were:

Miss Lavina Virginia Dawson, 21, of Rawlings, Allegany county.

Glenn A. While, 18, of Jeanette, Pa., a CCC worker.

Injured in the Winchester crash were:

Dale Hardesty, of Waynesboro, Va., whose condition is reported serious.

Edward A. Crosgrove, 601 Sylvan avenue, Cumberland, a minor fracture of the spine, and lacerations of the face and arms. Condition "fairly satisfactory."

Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove, 33, wife of Edward, fractures of both knee caps. Condition good."

William Rogan, 38, of Spruce street, Cumberland, fractures of the ribs and knee, and lacerations of forehead and scalp. Condition "fair."

Alex A. Hardesty and Mrs. Dale Hardesty, both of Waynesboro, conditions "fair."

Charles Kabel, of Clearfield, Pa., a CCC worker, condition also "fair."

Seriously injured in an accident near Corriganville were:

David Mosser, 21, of Corriganville, a fractured skull and injuries about the legs and body.

Joseph Garlitz, 19, also of Corriganville, injuries about the neck and body, cuts and bruises.

Three Cars Involved

All of those injured at Winchester are patients at Memorial hospital there.

Mosser and Garlitz were admitted at Allegany hospital here.

The Cumberland party and the others were injured early Saturday morning, in a crash, involving three cars, five miles west of Winchester on U. S. Route 50.

Virginia State Police, who investigated, said the car in which the Hardestys, Kabel and While, were riding sideswiped a machine driven by James M. Raupach, 30, of Cumberland, and then careened into the Cosgrove sedan, operated by Rogan. Raupach escaped injury.

Passengers in the Cosgrove car, besides Mr. and Mrs. Cosgrove and Rogan, were Miss Dawson and Bramble. The car pulled a trailer bearing a motorcycle.

Hitchhikers Hurt

Kabel and While, CCC youths from a Luray, Va., camp, were homeward bound when they were picked up by the Hardestys.

The Cosgrove and Hardesty cars were demolished, while approximately $100 damage was reported for Raupach's machine, which is said to be owned by the Auto Exchange, of Cumberland.

Virginia police have placed no charges, and the investigation is being continued.

Survivors Listed

Surviving Miss Dawson are her mother, Mrs. Agnes Dawson, with whom she lived; a brother, Meshack Dawson, and two sisters, Misses Goldie and Evelyn Dawson, all at home.

The two Corriganville young men injured Saturday about 2 p. m. when the car they occupied struck a culvert, rolled down a fifteen-foot embankment and landed in a shallow stream along the Mt. Savage road.

Leo Fleegle, also of Corriganville, who was driving the car, escaped with minor bruises. He did no require hospital treatment.

Car Going Fast

State Trooper John H. Doud, who investigated, said the Fleegle machine was apparently going at a high rate of speed when the accident occurred near Corriganville. Fleegle was technically charged with reckless driving and released under bond.

Mosser is the son of Mrs. Bertha Barncord, and Garlitz is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Garlitz.

Both young men remained in a "serious" condition last night.

L'Aiglon Veterans To Meet Tonight

The L'Aiglon Veteran Unit, of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, will meet today at 8:30 p. m. at the home of Miss Grace C. Murphy, 311 Decatur street.

Prospective members are requested to attend tonight's meeting.

Carnival Men Jailed For Street Fighting

Two carnival men were sentenced to jail and another was acquitted Saturday in Police court on a charge of fighting in downtown Cumberland.

Nelson Shade and John W. Hawkins were committed to jail for ten days in default of a fine of $10 each.

Ray Vegnovich was acquitted.

Memorial Day Accident Proves Fatal To Young Hitch-Hiker

Injuries suffered in a Memorial Day automobile accident proved fatal to a 24-year-old Washington Navy Yard employe Saturday at Memorial hospital.

The victim, Robert Wilcox, of Clarksburg, W. Va., suffered multiple injuries when the car he occupied skidded and plunged down a bank along the road near Hanging Rock, W. Va.

Victim Was Hitch-Hiker

Wilcox, who was hitch-hiking, was picked up by Ray Hines, 25, of Romney, W. Va. Ralph Keister, 26, also of Romney, was also in the machine.

Both Hines and Keister suffered lacerations about the head, face and hands in the crash. They, too, were brought to the hospital and admitted.

Attendants said they were "slightly improved" last night.

Wilcox, who was unmarried, was a son of Byron and Ethel Nutter Wilcox. The body was taken to Clarksburg Saturday.

Others Improve

Meanwhile, other persons injured in Memorial Day accidents were reported "recovering" in local hospitals.

Harry Silverman, 43, of Old Washington, Ohio, a high school teacher, received a possible fractured jaw and lacerations in a crash on Sideling Hill, east of Cumberland on the National highway. He was admitted to Memorial hospital.

Silverman and four Ohio high school students were hurt when their car, traveling west, ran off the road at the top of the hill and overturned. The four students were treated at the hospital and discharged.

Pedestrian Injured

David W. Leasure, 65, of 216 Frederick street, was admitted to Allegany hospital after he was struck by a car at North Centre and Frederick streets.

Leasure was injured about the head when he was hit by a car driven by Cleveland Beale, of Smithfield, Pa. His head was thrown against the windshield of the car, and the glass broke.

Police said Leasure stepped off the curb in front of the machine. They placed no charges against Beale, terming the accident unavoidable.

Accidents Take 'Amazing' Toll In the Home

'Kitchen Casualties' Can Be Prevented, Says Health Director

Americans don't have to worry yet about war casualties, but Dr. H. Riley, director of the Maryland State Department of Health, sounds a warning against "kitchen casualties" in a bulletin received here yesterday.

An amazing number of avoidable accidents occur in the home—and many of them in the kitchen," says Dr. Riley. "Some of them could be prevented if a few precautions were taken. For instance:

"To avoid cuts that can very easily become infected:

"Beware of the can opener that leaves a jagged edge, and, very frequently a cut hand. It is worth putting a little extra money into the kind that leaves a smooth edge.

"Keep your kitchen knives and other sharp cutting utensils in containers, separated from other equipment in constant use. Above all, keep such things out of the reach of children.

"When dishes or glasses are broken, sweep up the pieces with a brush, into a dust pan. Don't risk picking them up with the fingers. In order that they will not be a source of danger to others, wrap the pieces in old newspapers, or put them in a paper bag or box before you put them out to be disposed of or carted off.

"To avoid burns and even more serious accidents from the use of fuel or lighting oils:

"Remember the old proverb about not adding fuel to flames. It has a very special bearing in this connection. Keep your fuel oil cans at a very safe distance from your stove—outside the kitchen, if possible. Incidentally, keep matches, candles and lighted lamps entirely out of reach of young children.

"To avoid mixing insecticides and other dangerous poisons with food supplies:

"Have a special place for any supplies that may be a course of danger. Don't keep rat poison, plant sparys, poisonous silver polish, or any other equally dangerous household supplies, side by side with baking powder, pancake flour, salt and sugar containers, or any other food supply.

"Keep all dangerous supplies in a separate place—not in the kitchen cabinet. And see that they are carefully labelled. Replace labels when they fall off, and dispose carefully of the containers when the contents have been used.

"And don't forget: Keep every one of these things out of the reach of children."

109 from County Already Enrolled; Going by Train

An all-time record for enrollment will be established by Allegany county when the eighteenth annual Rural Women's Short Course program opens June 17 at the University of Maryland, College Park, it was announced yesterday by Miss Maude Bean, county home demonstration agent.

Mis Bean stated that 109 women from Allegany county already have enrolled and only six more are needed to complete Allegany's quota.

The best previous record attained by this county was in 1937 when an even 100 women made the triy to College Park. Last year's enrollment was eighty-three.

Allegany Always Leads

For ten consecutive years Allegany has topped the other twenty-two counties of the state in total number enrolled and is certain to retain the honor this year.

Women attending the course for four years are awarded certificate of attendance at graduation exercises held at the conclusion of the course. Mrs. Bertha Miller, of Oldtown, holds the distinction of having attended the annual sessions since they were inaugurated in 1923.

Special Coaches Chartered

The general theme for the week of June 17 to 22 will be "Neighbors." As usual, the program has many things to offer in educational, inspirational, social, and recreational opportunities.

Two special B. & O. coaches have been chartered to take Allegany county's women to College Park. The train is scheduled to depart at 8:25 a. m., June 17, and the return trip will bring the "students" home on the night of June 22.

B&O Worker Hurt When Box Falls

A 49-year-old colored B&O worker was injured about the head and back of the neck Saturday afternoon when he was struck by a falling box while at work.

The man, John C. Davis, of 316 Central avenue, was taken to Allegany hospital and admitted. His condition was reported "satisfactory" last night.

Hospital attendants said Davis was injured when a fellow-worker dropped a box on him.

Mexico Farms Man Posts Peace Bond

William McMillan, of Mexico Farms, was released under a $500 peace bond Saturday in Trial Magistrates court after he was given a hearing on a charge of assault preferred by Frank Lease.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr., ordered McMillan held under bond after Lease told him he feared further attacks from the defendant.

The alleged assault occurred May 28.

'Bootleg' Radio Station Tracked Down with Ease

"Fifth columnists" wouldn't have a chance of sending out propaganda from a hidden radio transmitter around here.

Such a "bootleg" station would soon be located if the demonstration put on yesterday by the Western Maryland Amateur Radio Club means anything.

In the first activity of its kind to be held in this area, members of the club lost little time in finding a "hidden transmitter" by using home-constructed radio direction-finding equipment.

Many Take Part

Nearly a score of members participated in the hunt, with the hidden transmitter being operated by Ambrose McKenzie of W3BHE, president of the club, and Melvin Riffey, of W3DIC, assisted by Harold Shank.

The McKenzie crew went out early yesterday afternoon to the farm of Edward Grabenstein, near Winchester Bridge. They set up the field sending station, using McKenzie's call letters, W3BHE.

The broadcast was scheduled to begin at 2 p. m. in a field on the Grabenstein farm. But the McKenzie car became mired in the side-road leading from Winchester road, and the equipment had to be set up along the road. Broadcasting began at 2:10 p. m. and continued until 4:10 p. m.

All Make "Deadline"

All the contestants were in before "sign-off," although some of them had covered considerable territory before locating the station.

First to locate the station was a team consisting of Wilfred A. Thompson, of W3AQV, John Ridgeway, of W3ON, William Rank and David McGibbon. They arrived at the transmitter at 3:50 p. m.—an hour and forty minutes after the broadcast began. They had driven only twelve miles.

Next was the crew of W3GUT, consisting of Raymond Feltz, Melvin Dawson and Richard Grimm. They had driven thirty-six miles.

The third group to arrive was the W3BFX team, consisting of Leroy Jewell, Ralph Brown and William Jenkins. They had driven twenty miles.

Prizes Awarded

Fourth was a crew consisting of John Patton, of W3FRV; Matthew Groves, of W3EWW; John Bobo, of W3EUT; and Sam Cozad. They had driven thirty-three miles.

Cash prizes were awarded winners of first and second places.

The hidden transmitter was something of a makeshift proposition, with antenna only six feet off the ground. It used a frequency of 1954 kilocycles and 90-watt power.

It was on the air almost continuously during the two-hour period except for a few minutes when minor repairs had to be made to the antenna and the batteries changed.

Signal Strong

Its signal was strong, however, some of those who got "off the track" temporarily reporting hearing it as far away as Corriganville and Pea Vine Run on Bedford road.

McKenzie and Riffey alternated at broadcasting, giving regulation test calls, interspersed with humorously ironic comments on the slowness of the contestants in locating the transmitter.

The contestants, using homemade equipment, some of it their own, some borrowed from other club members, gathered on North Centre street, then took off on their own.

Use Directional Loop Antennas

They used directional loop antennas, similar in principle to that used by United States Coast Guard ships and airplanes. This equipment permitted them to take bearings of the hidden station, plot them on a map of the county and eventually locate the station.

One of the groups used Station WTBO as a reference point, while others used compasses.

All the information the contestants had was that the station would be located somewhere within an area of seventy-eight square miles—or within a five-mile radius of Cumberland.

After all the contestants had arrived, the group spent about two hours in a "post-mortem" of the hunt, discussing what should and shouldn't have been done.

The consensus was that it was great sport at the same time it was educational. Plans are underway for another one soon.

Thomas V. McGuire Wins Recommendation For Postmastership

The Democratic State Central Committee for Allegany county last night unanimously recommended Thomas V. McGuire for the postmastership at Westernport, Chairman Joseph H. Griffin reported.

McGuire, an employe of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company and manager of the Westvaco baseball club, finished second in a competitive examination for the post, but won the recommendation by virtue of his "military preference."

Other candidates were Joseph Mansfield, who won top rating in the examination, and Miss Mary Moran, who finished third and who has been acting postmaster since December. The post was left vacant by the death of Lee Connell.

The recommendation will be submitted to Representative William D. Byron, who will in turn forward it to the postoffice department.

McGuire is well-known as a former professional baseball player. He lives on Cemetery road, Westernport.

Action on recommendations for more than 200 election jobs was deferred, Chairman Griffin said, until a special meeting Monday, June 17, at 7:30 p. m. at the Windsor hotel, where last night's meeting was held.

Library Receives Book on Aircraft

Valuable New Volume Comes from Abroad

The Cumberland Public Library has received from abroad a copy of the latest edition of Jane's "All the World's Air Craft" compiled and edited by C. G. Grey and Leonard Bridgman.

This complete and unique record of aeronautical progress throughout the world contains the following information:

Part A—Development of civil aviation in every country during 1939.

Part B—Detailed description of the Flying Services of all nations.

Part C—Modern aeroplanes of all nations illustrated by photographs and scale drawings with complete specifications and performance figures of current type.

Part D—Describes and illustrates with photographs the aero engines of all nations.

Part E—Describes in detail and illustrates the most recent designs.

This acknowledged world authority on aircraft is a companion volume to Jane's "Fighting Ships."

Both were presented to the library as part of the Charles Henry Nash Memorial, the gift of the late Mrs. W. Wallace McKaig.

Advisory Group Meets

Members of the advisory committee of the Police Boys Club will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at Central YMCA.

Nearly 600 To Attend 'B&O Day' Dinner Here

Charles W. Galloway

Nearly 600 persons are expected to attend the dinner-dance at the State Armory Thursday night which will climax Cumberland's "B&O Day" celebration.

Charles W. Galloway, operating vice-president of the railroad, will be the principal speaker at the dinner, scheduled to start at 6:30 p. m.

Other speakers will include Miss Helen Foreman, H. J. Boyle and C. N. Fullerton, all of Baltimore, special representatives; and Charles M. Shriver, superintendent of the Cumberland division.

Gunter Toastmaster

Former State Senator William A. Gunter will be toastmaster at the affair. He will be introduced by J. Rex Miller, chairman of the Men's Cooperative Traffic Program, who is co-chairman in charge of the celebration.

Mayor Harry Irvine will give the address of welcome, and Iva L. Harper, division master mechanic, will respond. Guests will be introduced by Mrs. Vada Drumm Barncord, co-chairman for the celebration.

Other features of the program will include a sketch by William J. Cramer; selections by the B&O Glee Club of Cumberland, under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Biggs and with Mrs. Charles L. Kopp as accompanist; and a tap dance by the Beckman twins.

The invocation will be offered by W. H. Lees, secretary of the B&O YMCA.

The Society Ramblers will play for the dance to follow the banquet program.

Events At Shrine Club

Both the men and women plan afternoon programs at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

The women's group will meet the Baltimore and Ohio Women's Music Club of Baltimore and other guests at the Queen City station and escort them to the club where a luncheon is scheduled for 1 p. m.

Mrs. Barncord will give a short talk and introduce Miss Olive Dennis, president of the music club, and Miss Virginia Blackhead, director of the club.

At 3:15 p. m. the music club will give a concert at the recreation hall of Centre Street Methodist church.

Buffet Luncheon

The men will have a buffet luncheon also at the Shrine Club at 1:30 p. m. Besides railroad men, all the business and industrial interests of Cumberland along with municipal and county officials will be represented. There will be no formal program but various forms of entertainment are planned.

Among others expected here are D. F. Stevens, general superintendent of transportation and equipment; Philip Petri Sr., chief engineer, maintenance and equipment; F. G. Hoskins, general superintendent, and W. B. Whitsitt, assistant superintendent of motive power and equipment.

The mayor has issued a proclamation calling attention to the day and stores will have displays connected with railroad work.

Homemakers Give Concert Tonight

Chorus To Be Assisted By Guest Artists

The annual music festival of the Homemakers Chorus will be held at 8 o'clock tonight at Centre Street Methodist church hall, with Mrs. Richard W. Trevaskis directing and Mrs. G. R. Golladay as accompanist.

The chorus will be assisted by Miss Ina Lee Eichner and John Metzger, vocal soloists; Mrs. Alice VanMeter, violinist; and Mrs. William J. Loar panist.

The formal program will be followed by a garden scene, with the chorus leading the audience in singing old-time songs.

Guests will be seated at small tables around the auditorium, and refreshments will be served at the close of the program. 4-H girls will be ushers and 4-H boys will assist in the garden scene.

The committee in charge of the concert consists of Mrs. Frank A. Perdew, Mrs. Robert W. Young, Mrs. J. W. Hounshell, Mrs. Hugh Funkhouser, Mrs. Adam Smith and Mrs. Irene McDonald.

Numbers by the chorus will include Whooler's "Springtome," Forman's "Pond Lilies," Evans's "Song of the Cat," and McIntyre's "The Dancing Sunbeam" and "Starlight."

Selections by Miss Eichner and Mr. Metzger will be "Passage-Bird's Farewell," by Hilbach; "Under the Moon," by Stoughton; "The Star of Love on Evening's Brow Hath Smiled," by Nevin; and "A. B. C.," by Parry.

Violin solos by Mrs. VanMeter, accompanied by Mrs. Loar, will include "Night Winds," by Drdit, and "The Rosary," by Nevin.

Barbecue Waitress Hit by Car

A charge of driving with inadequate brakes was placed against Charles E. Brode, 19, of 307 Franklin street, Saturday night after his car struck a girl near LaVale.

Brode will be given a hearing in Trial Magistrates court when the girl, Mary Agnes Snow, 15, of Allegany Grove, is released from Allegany hospital, where she was admitted.

Miss Snow suffered a fractured right leg and bruises when Brode's car turned in from the National highway and pinioned her against a barbecue stand, where she is employed.

State Trooper B. C. Mason investigated.

Deaths

Mrs. Elmer Wagner

Mrs. Mabel Wagner, wife of Elmer Wagner, of Springfield, W. Va., died yesterday afternoon at Memorial hospital. She was 24.

Mrs. Wagner was brought to Cumberland in an ambulance and admitted to the hospital at 11 a. m. She died at 2:30 p. m.

She was a daughter of Frank and Julia Ann Bean.

The body was taken to Springfield.

George E. Emmart

Funeral services for George E. Emmart, formerly of Cumberland, who died Thursday at his home in New York city, were held yesterday afternoon at Rising Sun, Md. Burial was in Darlington cemetery, Darlington, Md.

Mr. Emmart left Cumberland in 1925. He was vice-president of the Union Lumber Manufacturing Company and headed the Union Lumber Sales Company.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Gaither Emmart and three children by a previous marriage.

Samuel E. Landis

Last rites for Samuel E. Landis, 62, who died Wednesday at Allegany hospital as a result of injuries suffered when struck by a B. and O. freight train, were conducted Saturday morning at Stein's chapel.

The Rev. Dr. Hixon T. Bowersox, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, officiated. Interment was in Hillcrest burial park.

Truck Stops, Motor Roars; Driver Jailed

Brewery Trucker Driving Drunk, Police Charge

An abrupt stop and a roaring motor led to the arrest of a Cumberland Brewing Company employe early yesterday morning on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

The driver, David R. Boyer, of 115 West First street, was arrested at Greene and Washington streets by Officer Robert V. Chisholm at 3:55 a. m.

Officer Chisholm said he was standing on Cumberland street, near the Algonquin hotel, when he noticed Boyer's light delivery truck come to an abrupt stop. Then he heard the motor "roaring" and decided to investigate, he added.

"Boyer was out cold over the steering wheel with his foot on the gas when I reached the truck," the officer said. "I took his foot off the gas and then brought him to and took him to headquarters."

Boyer was lodged in jail, but later was released after a cash bond of $110 was posted before Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. He is scheduled to be given a hearing today in Trial Magistrates court.

Police said the delivery truck is owned by the brewey.

Another man, Raymond J. Higgins, of Little Orleans, was arrested Saturday night by State Police on Oldtown road, near North Branch, on charges of drunken driving and failing to keep to the right-center of the road.

Higgins, a farmer, was released from the county jail after he posted a cash bond. He, too, will be given a hearing today in court here.

State Trooper H. F. Schultheis reported that Higgins's "weaving" machine headed toward Oldtown nearly forced the police car into a guard rail once during the chase. Trooper John H. Doud assisted in the arrest.

Boy Choristers Win Crosses

Emmanuel Church Gives Attendance Awards

Six boy choristers of Emmanuel Episcopal church are the proud possessors of crosses won by faithful attendance.

The crosses, which are small metal emblems worn on a silken cord placed around the neck, were presented to the boys Sunday at the regular morning worship service at the church by the rector, the Rev. David C. Clark, who warmly congratulated them on their achievement.

The boy choir, which took part in the service, supplementing the adult choir under the direction of Maurice J. Matteson, completed the second year of its organization on this occasion.

For being present at every service and every rehearsal during the two years, sterling silver crosses were presented to Robert Lee Greaver, Jr., Richard Matteson and Edward James, and for a perfect like attendance record of a year, rhodium crosses were presented to Douglas Thomas, John D. Rodda and Charles A. Piper.

These crosses are to be worn at services of the church for the ensuing year. When three years of perfect attendance is achieved, gold crosses will be awarded the boys, and these are to be for permanent possession and may be worn at all times as well as at the church services.
